Washingtonville, September 24—Mr. and Mrs. Francis Bartell, Jr., expect to start housekeeping in the Spencer house the first of next month.

John K. Koch is convalescing after a recent illness.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular; free.

ARMOUR TRIED TO TIP A BARON.

And Really found One Person in Europe Who Refused to Accept It.

P. D. Armour generally spends his summer vacation at Carlsbad, Germany. Baron Kissengen, one of the richest noblemen in Germany and a great lover of horses, was at the springs at the time of the Chicago millionaire's visit one summer. Near Carlsbad, the baron kept half a hundred magnificent horses. Mr. Armour, says the New York Herald, with an American friend, went out to visit the stable. A custodian to whom they applied granted permission.

"Can you give us some one to show the horses?" asked Mr. Armour. The custodian looked about. Near one of the stalls stood a plain-looking man, and the custodian said: "I think he will show you the horses."

The plain-looking man did show them, and did it well. He knew the horses by name, their pedigrees, and he told all about them. It happened that Mr. Armour always carries in his coat pocket when in Europe a number of silver coins, which he distributes among people who are good to him. So when it was all over he fished out about a half pint of coins and tendered them to the plain-looking man. The latter, with an amused sort of smile, declined, but waved the American to the stable boys, as people who commonly made small objections to such favors.

"I am Baron Kissengen," said the plain-looking man simply, but graciously. "I am glad to know you," said Armour. "Not only because you have the finest lot of horses I have seen in the country, but because you are the first person I have found in this country who has refused to take a tip."

HE MET HIS WATERLOO.

"Billy" Pinkerton Found a Denver Pickpocket too Slick for Him.

William Pinkerton, whom the world known as "Billy" and has supposed the real modern pVidocq, has fallen from his pedestal. The fall was occasioned by an unknown pickpocket who, in Denver, the other day relieved Mr. Pinkerton's inside coat pocket of $250.

Mr. Pinkerton's purpose in going to Denver was to advise the local police how to best protect people from pickpockets during a carnival that was in progress. The day following his arrival there was a parade, and Mr. Pinkerton undertook the task of giving an object lesson of his method of foiling pickpocket designs.

He moved about among the people who lined the streets and kept a sharp outlook for the light fingered folk who take the chance that in stealing another's purse they steal trash. Just how it happened, no one, not even Mr. Pinkerton, knows, but when the Chicago detective king reached his hotel he found himself minus the $250 that had been in his possession when he began to give his object lesson.

This is the first time, so far as criminal records show, that a man who has won international reputation as a thief catcher was ever made the victim of a thief when he was looking for just such a criminal. Mr. Pinkerton gave no further lessons to the Denver police, but returned to Chicago, where the thieves know and fear him.

MANUFACTURE OF HAIR PINS.

The Greatest Care Required in Putting on the Enamel.

For ages the English and French controlled the manufacture of hair pins, and it is only within the last twenty years that the goods have been produced in other countries to any extent. The machinery used is of a delicate and intricate character, as the price at which the pins are sold necessitates the cheapest and most rapid process, which can only be secured by automatic machines. The wire is made expressly for the purpose and put up in large coils, which are placed in a clamp and so carried to the machine while being straightened. This machine cuts, bends, and by a delicate instantaneous process sharpens the point. Running at full speed it will turn out 120 hair pins every minute. To economize it is necessary to keep the engine going day and night. The difficult part of the work is in the enameling, which is done by dipping the pins in a preparation and baking in an oven. It is here that the most constant and careful attention is required, as the pins must be absolutely smooth and the enamel have a perfect polish. The slightest particle of dust causes imperfections and roughness.—Pearson's Weekly.

ROSA BONHEUR'S ADMIRERS.

Given a Royal Reception by the Artists of Paris.

The bon camaraderie which exists among French artists is well known, but the esteem in which they hold the veteran Rosa Bonheur amounts almost to enthusiasm. The aged lady was expected at the Galerie George Petit, to superintend the hanging of her four last pastels. All the artists in Paris were there to receive her, and she was led along the corridor by the most distinguished of them, as if she had been a Princess of the Blood Royal.

Of her four pictures, two were of stags—one standing in dim twilight, the other bathing in the early rays of the rising sun. Another picture is of a bison in the snow. The fourth, which is generally considered the finest of all, shows a shepherd cooking his supper in a shed, surrounded by his flock. The wool of the sheep is executed with marvelous technical skill. A sheep dog guards his charge.—Philadelphia Ledger.

At School.

"Where was Magna Charta signed?" asked a teacher.

OAK WOOD GETTING SCARCE.

Danger Apprehended of Using Up the Visible Supply.

No one who is at all familiar with existing conditions in the lumber trade can fail to note that there is already considerable complaint of a dearth of desirable oak. Both in quartered and plain stock fairly good lots of dry oak are notably scarce. The leading jobbers have had their buyers out for months picking up anything good they could find, and the result is that a very large proportion of the oak on sticks has already passed into second hands and is held by the present owners for distribution to consumers. Mill men in the south are cutting it all the time, but they do not have to wait until it is dry, or even partly dry, before selling. If they choose to do so, they can usually negotiate for it in advance of the sawing, and on terms that a few years ago would have been regarded as extremely liberal. Oak is, perhaps, the most readily salable of any saw mill product, which fact indicates that it is now, and is believed likely to be hereafter, relatively a scarce article.

While there is no occasion for alarm as to the present adequacy of the oak supply, it is a question if the time has not come when serious consideration should be given to the possibility, not to say probability, that in the not distant future oak may become one of the scarce woods.

It is the conviction of those who have given the closest study to oak that its present market value is based upon an incorrect idea of what is left, and that we shall wake up some morning to find that we have sold almost for a song the most valuable of our timber possessions. Oak, except in the finest grades of quartered stock, is still a cheap wood. It is not too cheap for a variety that is in universal demand and in only limited supply?—St. Louis Lumberman.

THE TREES OF PARIS.

Some of the Horse-Chestnuts Bloom Twice a Year.

Paris is probably the only city in the world which has trees that bloom twice a year habitually. These are the horse chestnuts. There are 17,000 of them planted in the squares along the boulevards, and 26,000 buttonwoods. The trees in Paris are numbered, just like the people, the cabs, the animals, the lampposts and the matches. These horse chestnuts have only been doing this trick for about five years, and only some of them have made a practice of it. These die, or apparently die, in the latter part of July, and all the leaves fall off. A month or so afterward they all come out into flower again and little green leaves shoot forth continually until they are nipped by the first frost. There is a reason for this, and the scientists worked over the matter for a long time to be able to explain it. Briefly and unscientifically, the trees lose their leaves because they are attacked by a little fungus which is blown upon them by the wind; then, being still full of sap, they start to put forth leaves all over again. —New York Sun.

A Piano to be Played A-Red.

A new device to cheer the loneliness of convalescence or the dreariness of chronic sickness is the piano for invalids.

On each side of the bed are the frames that support a small upright piano. Adjustments are provided which will secure the piano in any position desired. The keyboard is inclined so that the keys may be reached easily by the sick person.

Of course such a piano is too expensive for the average invalid or for a brief illness. But it is proposed that they be hired out at moderate cost by music firms in cases of temporary sickness and that private sanitariums be provided with them.—New York Journal.

$16,000 for a Cablegram.

Sixteen thousand dollars is the record price paid for a cablegram, that price having been paid for a message sent by Mr. Henniker Heaton to Australia in behalf of the British Parliament. Reuter's account of the murderer Deeming's trial, 4,000 words, cost $8,000. An 1,800-word dispatch from London to Argentina cost $7,500. The most expensive private message so far is that sent by the King of Italy to the Duke of Abruzzi at Rio Janeiro, informing him of the death of his father, the late Duke of Aosta, which cost $2,670.—Electrical Magazine.

Another Freak.

"That young man of yours," said the observing parent, as his daughter came down to breakfast, "should apply for a job in a dime museum."

"Why father," exclaimed the young lady in tones of indignation, "what do you mean?"

"I noticed when I passed through the hall late last night," answered the old man, "that he had two heads upon his shoulders."—Chicago Daily News.

Riches.

"All the world's a stage."

"And everybody wants to be the star."

"I don't. I'd be willing to be one of the property men."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

There Are Others.

She—Your face is too near to mine.

He—It's two inches away; and that's as bad as a thousand miles.

A Brave and Daring Member of a Pittsburg Engine Company.

Dogs that do remarkable feats have become such a common article these days that any dog with ambition to win distinction must turn his attention to developing his genius in some marvellous line indeed. No dog realizes this condition of affairs better than the mascot of Pittsburg's Fire Engine Company No. 1. This animal does something every day which sets on end the hair of every person who is invited to witness it.

The firemen of Pittsburg challenge all the world to produce a dog that will perform as daring a feat as their dog Judge. Judge readily jumps from the roof of a six-story building, and even from the top windows of a much higher structure with as much reluctance and hesitancy as the ordinary dog exhibits in eating the first piece of meat that is given to him after a two days' fast.

And Judge chooses his distance and makes all his preparations with as much care as ever a human equilibrist intent upon thrilling thousands of people with his feats. When Judge decides upon the particular place where he means to light he stiffens his legs, cocks his long, thin tail, and, with a yelp he shoots downward into the street. Many of the spectators turn away their heads, and those that do have courage enough to actually watch the fall involuntarily step back a pace or two at what each time seems the dog's impending fate. But although Judge has performed the same feat a number of times, he has never once fallen more than a few feet away from the centre of the life-saving net stretched between the hands of his trustworthy fireboys. — New York World.

Coral that Gives You Toothache.

On the coast of some of the West Indian islands a curious kind of coral may be seen, called "millepoca." This has a most extraordinary property, which makes the people who know it very shy of handling it.

The moment a person picks up a piece, a sort of electric thrill runs through him, and an agonizing pain shoots through his jaws. He feels as if every tooth and every nerve were burning. The acute pain lasts generally for about half an hour, and slowly passes off; but the effects do not disappear entirely for hours. The reason of this curious shock or poisoning is still a mystery.

CURRENT HUMOR.

"How are all your family?" asked the genial friend.

"Oh," replied the man who uses slang and makes puns, "we're all out of sight."

"Humph. You don't seem very cheerful about it."

"I have no reason to. The kind of sight I mean is anthracite."—Washington Star.

Mrs. Gray—You say Mrs. Greene disagreed with everything I said? Just like her; she never is on the right side of any question. Mrs. Brown—You misunderstood me. I said she agreed with everything you said. Mrs. Gray—H'm; that's the way she has of currying favor.—Boston Transcript.

Willie Smith was playing with the Jones boys. His mother called him. "Willie, don't you know those are bad boys for you to play with?" "Yes, mother," said Willie, "I know that, but then I am a good boy for them to play with."—Household Words.

Brown—Do you know that the majority of physicians are comparatively poor men?"

Jones—"No, I wasn't aware of that; but I know that some of them are awfully poor doctors."—Chicago News.

"This Klondike craze is going to help Boston immensely."

"In what way?"

"After those fellows have survived in Alaskan Winter they won't be afraid to tackle Boston girls."—Chicago Record.

Miss Frocks—How did you know she was an Alabama girl?—New York World.

Charles Bragg—Yes, Miss Brightly, it costs me ten thousand a year to live.

Miss Brightly—Oh, Mr. Bragg, do you think it's worth it?—Boston Traveller.

Farmer—Great Scott! You've shot my prize shanghai! That bird was worth a quarter ter me!

Sport—Well, I've put 40 cents' worth of buckshot into it! Take it and call it square!—New York Journal.

"Aha! I have found the meanest man at last!"

"What did he do?"

"He's deaf and has never told his barber."—New York Journal.

Bagley—"Bent is a very generous man." Brace—"In what respect?" Bagley—"He never passes a beggar that he doesn't borrow a dime from me to give to him."—Harlem Life.

Mrs. Mary A. Livermore relates that Horace Mann once said to her: "It is a good plan to put in a stock of small pleasures, as large pleasures are not often let on a long lease."

Lokal-Nachrichten aus der alten Heimath.

Inhalt.

Großherzogthum Hessen.

Darmstadt. Handarbeiter Ernst Baßler, welcher Nachts stark angetrunken war und keinen Hausschlüssel hatte, wollte seine Wohnung durch einen Neubau erreichen. Dort aber fiel er in das Kellergeschoß, woselbst er mit dem Gesicht in eine mit Kalkspeiß angefüllte Vertiefung zu liegen kam. In Folge seines trunkenen Zustandes konnte er nicht mehr aufstehen, so daß er im Speiß erstickte.

Friedberg. Der Israelitische Krankenverein beging das Fest seines 100jährigen Bestehens.

Ober-Flörsheim. Die hiesige Gemarkung ist von einer schrecklichen Mäuseplage heimgesucht. Während der Heuernte wurden in einem Zeitraum von neun Tagen nicht weniger als 60,000 Mäuse eingefangen, und man zahlte pro Stück an die Fänger 1 Pfennig aus der Gemeindekasse.

Bayern.

München. Wegen Unterschlagung von Klientengeldern wurde der Rechtsanwalt Georg Gleißner zu einem Jahre Gefängniß und fünf Jahren Ehrverlust verurtheilt.—Der erste Direktor der Löwenbrauerei, Kommerzienrath Herterich, ist gestorben.—Neulich Vormittags wurde auf den Schnellzug Berlin-Rom, eben als er die Station München-Südbahnhof passirte, von einem Burschen mit einem Revolver geschossen. Eine der Kugeln zertrümmerte das Fenster des Gepäckwagens und streifte dabei den auf dem erhöhten Bremssitze sich befindlichen Bediensteten. Wenige Minuten später wurde auf der Isarbrücke auf den nämlichen Zug von Burschen mit schweren Steinen geworfen. Die Fenster eines Coupes erster und eines zweiter Klasse wurden getroffen, so daß die Splitter die Passagiere streiften.

Ansbach. Dieser Tage feierten hier die Schuhmachermeisters-Eheleute Peter und Justine Mohrenhardt in bester Gesundheit und voller Rüstigkeit ihr goldenes Ehejubiläum. Herr Mohrenhardt zählt 78, seine Gattin 73 Jahre.

Deggendorf. Auf der Strecke Plattling-Eisenstein war dieser Tage der Eilgutverkehr derartig groß, daß er nur schwer bewältigt werden konnte. Von der hiesigen Station an konnte kaum noch etwas eingeladen werden. Die Mehrzahl der Eilgutstücke bestand in Fässern mit Himbeeren und Preiselbeeren aus dem bayerischen Wald, die zumeist in das Rheinland abgehen.

Kitzingen. Neulich Früh ist der am Main gelegene Schwanenthurm, der kürzlich von der Stadt angekauft worden war, abgebrannt. Die im Thurm wohnenden Fischerseheleute Lenz waren bei dem Ausbruch des Brandes auf dem Bahnhof; ihre im Thurm schlafenden Kinder konnten gerettet werden.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Lady Garth had told the truth in saying that Sir Roy had made up his mind to marry Evangeline. He had thought it all over carefully during his illness, through which his cousin had nursed him with sisterly care. Lilac was lost to him. He never doubted for a moment that the letter she had left for him was a truthful one, and that she had quitted the Hall simply because she cared more for Mowbray than for himself. With all chance of personal happiness gone, Roy set himself to think how he could act best for the happiness of those around him. In her last letter Lilac had told him that Evangeline loved him, and the news did not altogether surprise him. In his youth—in fact, up to the time that he met Lilac—he had looked forward in an indefinite way to one day making Evangeline his wife; and although the meeting at Deadman's Gulch had shown him very plainly that the regard he had for his cousin was certainly not love, he could understand the feeling having grown to more than sisterly affection on her part. He accepted a certain responsibility in the matter; for he had never disguised his affection for her, and had sometimes even spoken playfully of their marriage. He knew that the fondest ambition of his mother was to see him married to the heiress, and in sheer hopelessness of his own happiness he resolved to secure that of the two whom, after the faithless Californian girl, he loved best in the world.

On the first day that he was allowed out of his room, as he walked leaning upon his mother's arm through the sunny garden, Lady Garth could not resist broaching the subject.

"I hope that this illness will be a warning to you, Roydon not to go abroad again," she said, with anxious solicitude in her voice, which always lost some of its hauteur and coldness when she spoke to her son.

"Do not talk about the future, mother," he said, quickly. "I cannot bear to think of it yet."

"But the future ought to look very bright to you, dear," she urged. "You have a splendid career before you if you choose to adopt it."

"But I do not want a career," he said, with the irritability that his illness had left. "All that I wanted I have lost."

"You take too gloomy a view of things, Roydon," said his mother; and the young man turned upon her quite fiercely.

"A gloomy view! What other view is there to take? Is there the possibility of a doubt that the woman I love has forsaken me?"

"But, my dear, the result may be all the better for you," said her ladyship, toying with her pince-nez. "Miss Marvel had good points, certainly, and was much more ladylike and refined than one could have expected from her origin—"

Roy interrupted her.

"Mother, you must not talk like that. You madden me! She was everything that one could desire in a woman; but she has left me, so what now is the good of talking about her?"

"I do not wish to do so," said her ladyship. "I was going to speak about somebody else, who has every attribute, including wealth and birth, to fit her to be your wife. You read the letter that Li—that was left, did you not?"

"Yes, mother."

"Haven't you thought over the advice that it contained?"

"Yes, mother."

"Then why do you not secure your real happiness by acting upon it?"

"I am going to act upon it."

"You are going to ask Evangeline to be your wife?"

"Yes, mother."

There was no sign of any emotion beyond a hopeless carelessness in his voice.; but her ladyship ignored that, and embraced him with every show of pleasure.

"You have made me very happy, my son!" she said, with feeling. "You will speak to her at once?" "Before there is any chance of your meeting or hearing news of Lilac Marvel," was in her thoughts; but she kept back the words.

"I am ready to speak to Evangeline now, if you will send her to me," said Roy in tones as gloomy as if he were meditating suicide.

Lady Garth hurried away to find her niece before her son had time to change his mind.

The gloomy expression was still on the Baronet's face when Evangeline joined him a few minutes later on the rustic seat where Lady Garth had left him, for he was still too weak to walk far alone, but he tried to smile.

"Aunt Gwendoline says you want to speak to me about something very important," said his cousin brightly; "and she kissed me as solemnly as if I were going to be executed! What can it be?"

"Let us walk across the grass, Evie, "and I will tell you," he said, with an earnestness that surprised her as much as Lady Garth's caress had done.

Evangeline gave him her arm at once, and they walked backwards and forwards across the lawn as he made his proposal. He did not attempt to disguise the love that he had felt for Lilac—it was useless to think of doing so—but he spoke of the strong affection that he had always had for her—Evangeline—and said that, if she did not mind taking a disappointed man, he believed that they would be very happy together.

Evangeline heard him through to the end, with her eyebrows a little raised. Then, when he had said his say, very gently and kindly she startled him by the matter-of-fact voice in which she responded, wonderingly—

"My dear old Roy, what on earth has made you talk such nonsense? You know perfectly well that you are not in love with me; and you ought to know that I am certainly not in love with you—not in that way. Of course I am very fond of you as a sister; but, as for marriage, I would as soon think of marrying Aunt Gwen!"

Roy stared at her calm face, and could not believe that she was acting a part. Still he had Lilac's assurance that his cousin had confessed her love for him to her. In his astonishment he blurted out the fact.

"But you told Lilac that you cared for me!" he said; and Evangeline opened her eyes.

"I told Lilac that I loved you?" she echoed incredulously, with a pause between each word. "Did she say so in her letter?"

"Yes."

"Then that is why Auntie Gwen would not let me read it. I wish I had known!" For some reason her manner was becoming quite excited. "Show me the letter at once!" she said imperatively; and, when Roy produced it obediently, she stood still upon the grass to read it through from beginning to end.

"Poor Lilac!" she said when she had finished; and Roy was surprised at her tone, for on the only occasion that Lilac had been mentioned Evangeline had been much more bitter against her than Lady Garth.

A new suspicion which was very near the truth had come into the heiress's mind, but she was afraid to express it yet, lest it had come too late to save Lilac from sacrificing herself, if that was what she intended doing. When Roy spoke again she started as if from a reverie.

"Well, there is the statement written clearly enough," he said, with a touch of playfulness in his voice. "What have you to say in reply? Surely this confession of yours has not been invented by—Miss Marvel! Really, Evie," he went on more seriously, "if it is true, and you do care for me, you must marry me. I am very fond of you and would try to make you a good husband."

Evangeline laughed outright.

"My dear Roy, don't be so absurd! I tell you that I do not care for you like that. It is very kind of you to be willing to make such a sacrifice on my behalf, but it is really not necessary I told Lilac that I was in love with—somebody, and the silly girl jumped to the conclusion that it was you. I never dreamed of her misunderstanding me like that, or I should have told her all about it, poor girl."

"You are making this up to deceive me, Evie," he said, as the suspicion crossed his mind; and his cousin smiled bitterly.

"Really, Roy, I shall begin to think you stupid and conceited if you insist upon believing that I want to marry you! Will you believe me when I tell you that the man I spoke about to Lilac, unfortunately without giving his name, was somebody that I met two years ago in Yorkshire?"

"Not a fellow called Eric Damian?"

Evangeline blushed crimson and then turned pale.

"What do you know of him?" Evangeline asked quickly.

"I met him in Nevada. He is trying to find gold on your account, he told me—he wants to grow rich in a hurry to marry an heiress. It occurred to me that it might be you that he was speaking about, because he talked so much about you; but I did not think you cared for him, as you never mentioned him."

"It was not I he was speaking about," said the girl coldly, her face white to the lips. "It must have been Sabina Emmott, to whom he was engaged before he lost his fortune."

"Sabina? I swear it was not!" said Roy impetuously. "And I am sure that they were never engaged. Why Damian told me how she had run after him, and he said I was a fool to choose her as a companion for Lilac! We got very confidential, you see. I told him my love-story, and he told me some of his. He met the heiress at a place called Westwood, and, on the very day he would have proposed to her, the news of the bank smash came, and altered his position altogether. It must have been you that he spoke of."

"Don't—don't, Roy! It could not have been," she said, afraid of the new hope that had come into her life.

"But it must have been," said the Baronet, deliberately. "On the night before he was telegraphed for, you were in the conservatory with Damian when Sabina Emmott interrupted you?"

Evangeline nodded, unable to speak.

"Then, in another two minutes, if that little mischief-maker, as Damian calls her, had kept out of your way, you would have had a proposal of marriage, because Eric Damian told me so himself. By-the-way, I believe that I promised never to tell a soul. He is desperately proud. He said that he would never marry a woman with money while he himself was poor; and at that rate I do not think he will marry at all, because he has had desperate hard luck, and was almost starving when I met him and we struck up our friendship."

The girl's eyes filled with tears.

"You know where he is," she asked excitedly—"where is he now?"

"He was at Blue Creek Camp, Nevada, when I passed through on my way home. It is very likely that he may be there still."

"Then I pray that he may be!" said the girl, all excitement. "If not, you must go and find him for me, Roy."

"What shall I say to him when he is found?"

"Why, ask him to marry me, of course!" said she with flashing eyes. "I told Aunt Gwen that I would make an offer of marriage to the man I loved, if he was too proud to ask me because of my money and I knew that he cared for me. I shall telegraph to the Blue Creek Camp at once. Is that and 'Nevada' the full address?"

Roy nodded, quite taken aback by her impetuosity.

"Why did you let him go away?" he asked.

"Because after he had gone that evening, Sabina Emmott told me that she was privately engaged to him, and that she had broken off the engagement because of his unexpected poverty. I cannot think what made her say it."

"Spite," said Roy—"because it was certainly a fib. I am glad that you have a chance of being happy, Evie!"

The stress on the "you" was pathetic, and the girl threw her arms impulsively around her cousin's neck and kissed him.

"You have made me the happiest girl in the world, though not quite in the way you expected, you silly boy! I do hope that there is as much happiness in store for you!"

Evangeline little thought how much that very caress was spoiling the slender chance that remained of Roy's being happy, as she had begun to hope that he still might be, with the woman he really loved.

She ran into the house to take the photograph of Eric Damian from the drawer in her room and cover it with kisses, before setting herself to compose the telegram that should recall him from America.

If Lilac, when she found her in such grief in her room the very night before she left the Hall, had really believed all the time she was speaking of Eric, that she was actually referring to Sir Roydon Garth, why, it would supply a very different reason for the girl's unexpected departure. Lilac's sudden decision, after always speaking as if she were in love with Roy and intended to marry him, to become the wife of somebody else had been a standing enigma with Evangeline, who could only explain it by deciding that her whole estimate of Lilac's character had been wrong, and that she was as designing and unscrupulous as she had imagined her to be open and innocent. But, if Lilac believed that she was dying for want of Roy's love, her renunciation would be a heroism perfectly consistent with the character that she—Evangeline—had credited her with. The very thought of such a thing made her hate herself for the bitterness she had felt against her.

She hurried with her telegram to the village post-office, little thinking when she passed the railway station, that a few yards away from her Lilac, broken-hearted, and ready to make Mark Mowbray happy by promising to be his wife, was waiting on the platform for the train that was to take her back to Liverpool. She wondered whether Lilac had really completed her sacrifice by marrying a man for whom she had only a friendly regard, or whether Mark Mowbray was more or less of a myth, invented to make her sacrifice more complete. Evangeline heartily hoped that such a man had no existence. In that case—and Evangeline fairly danced along the road at the thought—Roy and Lilac might, after all, be as happy as she was.

Meanwhile, after bidding Lilac "Good-bye" at the avenue-gates, and feeling devoutly thankful that she had got rid of her before Roy had heard of her presence and thus been disturbed in his purpose of proposing to his cousin, Lady Garth walked slowly back to the part of the garden where she had seen the young people together. The caress which Evangeline had given at the moment when the old lady and Lilac had watched the pair out of the window of her boudoir had carried the same significance to her mind as it had done to that of Lilac, and she was greatly relieved. If her son married the heiress, the ambition of her life would be gratified, and her ladyship smiled to herself complacently. It was true that the remembrance of the white stricken look on Lilac's face as she turned from the window remained rather unpleasantly in her mind, and she had to acknowledge to herself that her son had not shown any great pleasure at the thought of securing his cousin for his wife; but then young people are always blind to their true interests, and a year or two would be sure to reconcile both Lilac and Roy to the course that was so much the best for their happiness, though neither seemed to realize it.

Her ladyship was a little surprised to see Roy on the rustic seat alone; but the fact that his expression was a much happier one than she had noticed since his return prevented the old lady from feeling any apprehension. She came behind him softly and laid her hands upon his shoulders before he was aware of her presence.

"Well, my boy; and so you have made dear Evangeline very happy, have you not?" she asked as he turned his head; and the Baronet smiled at the thought of the romantic ending to the conversation that had just taken place.

"Yes—I believe so, mother mine," he said innocently. "I suppose you have seen Evie?"

Lady Garth shook her head, smiling benignantly upon him.

"No, dear; but I saw something from my window which told me the news just as plainly."

The young man looked up in surprise.

"What news could it tell you?"

"Why, that the dear girl loves you, of course, as much as I was always sure that she did, although she could not admit until you gave her the chance."

"My dear mother, you are making a great mistake! Evie is not going to marry me."

"Not going to marry you?" The old lady raised her voice shrilly in her disappointment. "Then why on earth did she kiss you like that? I saw her with my own eyes throw her arms around your neck and kiss you."

"To reward me for bringing her news of the man she really loves—Mr. Eric Damian."

"Evangeline loves that man—a man perfectly penniless, with a disgraced name?"

"Pardon me, mother; no disgrace ever attached itself to Eric Damian. He is the truest and most honest gentleman that I know. And what does money matter when Evangeline has so much?"

His mother raised her pince-nez majestically and stared at Roy for a moment in silence.

"The young people of the present day appear to have no sense of what is right," she said with dignity, and turned to walk into the house to shed the first tears that her eyes had known for many years.

PRINCESS LOOKING FOR A MISSION

She Longs to be a Wage Earner—Designs Patterns for Book Covers.

Princess Victoria, the only unmarried daughter of the prince and princess of Wales, is a woman looking for some useful mission that a royal girl may fill without disgracing her family. She does not wish to marry, though divers good offers have been made for her hand, since of the three sisters she is far and away the most clever and companionable, and a number of eligible young German and Swedish princes and grand dukes have really wished to have her to wife. But the Princess Victoria has not yet found a husband to her mind, and to her mother's great dismay she cherishes an ardent ambition to be a genuine wage-earner. Two years ago she fitted herself for nursing and announced her intention of entering a London hospital. There were serious family conclaves, and not until sent to interview her very decided grandmamma on the question did the young princess relinquish the plan. Inheriting a decided artistic taste from her mother, this royal spinster is now turning her attention to bookbinding and the designing of book covers. The library at Sandringham is really enriched with some of her excellent work, and at a recent exhibition of book covers in London two examples contributed by a Miss Mathews won prizes. It was not until weeks afterward that the judges, dressers of prizes or the royal family themselves knew that the energetic princess had won these testimonials to her excellent taste and handicraft under so common-place a name.—Chicago Record.

True to His Colors.

A few years ago an Irishman, fresh from the "ould sod," secured a position as porter, messenger and man-of-all-work in a New York store. It happened to be the last day of the month, and the merchant was making out his statements.

"Here, Pat," he said at noon, "go out and post these bills. Where? Oh, yes; I forgot that you were still a little green. There's a mail box on the telegraph pole at the corner. Post the bills there."

Pat soon returned and laid the bills on the merchant's desk.

"Oi may be a little grane yet, sor," he said, with a cunning leer, "but, be the sivin siapers. O'm not postin, thim bills wil a big Oirish perliceman watchin' the box."

"Not posting them? Why not? What about the policeman?" asked the astonished merchant.

"Thot's all right, but yes'll not be foolin' me if Oi am grane," Pat replied, with the same cunning leer. "Shure, did'nt Oi see the sign on the pole over the box—'Post no bills under pinalty av the law'?"—Harper's Bazar.

CYCLING COMMENT.

B. T. Barnes, of Norwood avenue, has purchased a ladies' Cleveland bicycle for the use of his wife, and a Zimmy wheel for his sons, from the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

A national circuit meet will be held at Trenton Monday, in connection with the Inter-state Fair. There will be several National and State championship events. Several of the local riders are planning to take part in some of the races.

The Eagle Athletic Club, of Perth Amboy, will hold a twenty-five mile road race over the Perth Amboy-Metuchen macadam road Saturday, October 8th. There is a large list of prizes headed by a $50 diamond ring, offered by the club, The race is open to all amateurs. Entry blanks are ready now.

Among the various possessions of the wheelmen of the city, it happens that there is not a single racing tandem here. So the local riders were rather at a loss when it came to find a mount for the tandem race at the Riverdale meet this afternoon. One local team, composed of Eugene Richter and William J. Dodd, will bear watching for they are riding in excellent form now and may be expected to do something in the race. S. Clinton Crane, of this city, will be seen on the track again in the tandem race when he rides with a New York friend.

Riders who are in search of new roads and charming scenery will find them both combined by taking a short cut from New Market across to New Brunswick. The rider follows the Stelton road to Centennial avenue, which is the first turn to the right after leaving New Market behind. He then crosses the Port Reading Railroad on an overhead bridge and makes the first turn to the left at the cross roads behind. He follows this road a mile or more, making another turn to the left just before reaching a bridge over a brook. The latter road will lead him to the line of telegraph poles bearing the main wires of the Western Union Telegraph Company which are easily distinguishable. By following the line of poles, the rider after devious turns, is brought to the Raritan River road, only a short distance above New Brunswick. If, however, he turns to the right, still following the wires they will lead him very shortly to a bridge over the Raritan River and canal that is not known to most wheelmen. From the bridge, an excellent macadam road leads directly into College avenue, New Brunswick's best paved street.

The genial Central Railroad conductor, A. P. Hetfield, who resides in this city, has been indulging in a short vacation, and during that time he has successfully mastered a bicycle. He can now be seen frequently taking short spins about the city.

GOLF.

The old house of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, which has been moved from the Plainfield avenue grounds to the new course, has reached its destination. It stands close to the new clubhouse.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

RODE RACES AMID A DRIZZLING RAIN.

Race Meet of Riverdale Field Club Held.

THE RACES WERE WELL CONTESTED DESPITE THE WET.

Michal Burke, a Local Rider, Won the Five-mile Handicap From a Big Field—Ray Dawson Rode and Was Victor in the Mile Open—The Tandem Race Was a Great Success.

Saturday afternoon saw bicycle racing on the Crescent Oval once more. After lying in idleness for two years, the Oval has once more been put in condition, the necessary enterprise coming from outside in the shape of Robert C. Wood, the head of the Riverdale Field Club. The race meet, itself, originally intended for the local riders, became of State importance and the sport-loving people of Plainfield were given as good racing as can be seen anywhere.

What promises best for the future of bicyle racing at the Oval is the fact that the meet was a financial success. While Mr. Wood did not make a great deal out of it, the mere fact that he came out ahead augurs well for the success of wheeling contests in this vicinity.

The day was by no means an ideal one for track contests of any kind. All day there seemed a promise of rain, but it held off during the morning and the sun was out most of the time. Then it clouded up as the wheelmen began to gather at the track, and by 4 o'clock a thin mist began to fall.

Including the contestants and their trainers, there were at least 500 people present. What the audience lacked in numbers it made up in enthusiasm, which was as evident after the rain began as before.

At three o'clock the racing began. Harry K. Lister opened up a lively campaign and throughout the meet there was no delay between the events except when the referee granted an intermission of ten minutes to allow the contestants to rest.

The novice race was called first in three heats with some six starters in each. Charles Embleton, of Westfield, was favorite in the first heat and won by a clever spurt. Clarance Rittenhouse, of Plainfield, rode unbalanced. The Boland brothers of Rahway, in the next heat, had everything their own way. Will Jeffrey, this city, paced the third heat and then won. Albert Schomp, a High School rider, finished second by several lengths.

In the final, the Boland brothers fought it out again on the stretch. The Westfield man was third. Schomp was crowded off into the sand on the far turn while Jeffrey pocketed.

The one mile open brought out some of the best amateur riders from the Metropolitan district. Ray Dawson won cleverly in the second. Peter Simmons, the local colored rider, was crowded to the rear and finally finished sixth.

The final heat was very close, Dawson showing up in front after a terrific spurt with Wahrenberger while the Trenton crack, Crisp, had to be content with third.

The five mile handicap was the event of the day, however. Owing to the prospect of a steady downpown, shortly, Referee Cuming decided to run the race in one heat with thirty-four starters. The riders were well distributed about the track with the Boland brothers, Michael Burke, of Plainfield, and William Downs, of Newark, as limit men at the 400 yard mark. Ray Dawson rode alone from scratch.

On the finish, Burke had a little extra speed up his sleeve and just left his brotherly opponents a few yards from the tape. The finish was very close. Jorden Hasen led the remains of the large bunch over the tape.

The one mile handicap was a moist contest. In the first heat, the scratch men could not catch the first bunch and so did not qualify. In the second, Wahrenberger ran through the field from the 10 yard mark and won cleverly by a few inches. He finished first in the final but looked around and was therefore disqualified. Richt, who was a close second, was awarded first prize. DeHaven and Letson fell on the far turn. DeHaven was knocked senseless.

The tandem race furnished lots of enjoyment despite the sharp shower that prevailed throughout. Eugene Richter and William J. Dodd took the pace from the start in the first heat and there they stayed until the finish.

BETTER CHURCH EDIFICE

MT. OLIVE BAPTIST WITNESS MANY NEW IMPROVEMENTS.

In Celebration of the Event Rally Services Were Held all Day, at Which Visiting Pastors Preached Powerful Sermons

All day yesterday there were rally services at the Mount Olive Baptist church in celebration of the improvements made in the church. The attendance at each of the three services was unusually large. In the morning a sermon was delivered by Rev. Benjamin W. Hand, of this city, following which the pastor, Rev. E. C. Jackson, received the subscriptions from those present which is to be used in paying the debt for improvements on the church. In the afternoon the Sunday-school held a short session and at 3 o'clock another attempt was made to secure subscriptions. At this service a large amount of money was received, most everyone giving a dollar.

Following this part of the exercises, Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, of the First Baptist church, delivered a strong and impressive sermon to a large congregation.

The evening service was in charge of the pastor, Rev. Mr. Jackson, and another large amount of money was received. The improvements recently made in the church were all greatly admired by those present yesterday. New carpet, freshly painted wood-work and bright decorations all added to the general attractiveness of the church.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, Sept. 26.—The Brunswick Traction Company has not completed their road in Somerville according to their franchise and are liable to lose their charter. Their franchise calls for a road from the easterly to the westerly limits of the town. The town line on the west is at the culvert this side of Mr. Mack's residence. The trolley line is only completed to Germania Hall, east of the railroad. Section 3 of the franchise says:

"The said company shall have their railroad completed and cars running within six months from the passage of this ordinance."

The ordinance was passed March 14, 1898, and the six months allowed for the completion of the road was up September 14th, last Wednesday.

A SENSATIONAL ARREST.

PROMINENT MILLSTONE CITIZEN IMPLICATED IN SERIOUS CRIME.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, September 26.—William Wallace, an influential resident of East Millstone, and well-known throughout Somerset county, was arrested and brought to the Somerset county jail Saturday, charged with being a member of the gang that the night of September 16th attacked Henry Jones, a night watchman employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad, bound and gaged him, and then broke into the ticket office of the depot and blew open the safe, but failed to secure much booty. The arrest caused a great sensation through this section, as Wallace was looked upon as one of the substantial and highly-respected citizens of East Millstone. Wallace carried on a large bottling business and served customers for several miles around. The arrest was made by Detective George D. Totten, who has been working on the case for sometime and from apparently worthless clues has secured evidence which it is believed will make it go hard with Wallace.

After being arrested Wallace tried his best to secure a bondsman for $2,000, but he was unable to and was compelled to be locked up in a cell in the county jail. Jeremiah Washington, Thomas Wright and Thomas Shine, whose characters up to this time had been regarded with respect by their neighbors, are the ones implicated in the crime with Wallace. They were also arrested yesterday and put under $2,000 bonds. They are confined in the county jail.

The crime with which the men are accused was especially bold. While Night Watchman Jones, who is about seventy years of age and somewhat feeble, was attending to his duties during the early hours of the morning of September 16th, when suddenly four masked men pounced upon him. Stifling his attempts to yell with a coat, they quickly proceeded to the work of looting the station. After finishing their job they left the night watchman bound and gagged till some of the railroad employes found him in the morning. The brutality with which he was treated came near causing his death.

BORROWED A HORSE.

Slover Didn't Understand and the Results Were Serious.

John Slover hired Al Dunavan's wagon Saturday to move some household goods from New Market to Plainfield. Late in the afternoon he tied the horse to a post on West Second street. Mail Messenger Jim Frisbie came along untied the horse and started to drive away. Slover saw him and compeled him to bring the rig back. Then Frisbie made a remark that caused Slover to cuff him with his fist. Chief Grant arrived and arrested Slover. Roundsman Flynn also appeared and had to throw Slover down and put the handcuff on him before he would go to jail.

Now it appears that Dunavan told Frisbie that he might use the rig whenever he wanted providing that it was not being used. Slover did not know that. When arraigned before City Judge DeMeza this morning he pleaded guilty to striking Frisbie and resisting an officer. He was fined $8.

WORKED DURING THE NIGHT.

Tedious and Difficult Job Performed Successfully by Captain Hand.

While everyone was sleeping last night and early this morning Captain William Hand and his men were busy moving the great sixteen ton motor from where they left it Saturday morning in the lane leading up to the police station to its destination at the electric lighthouse. The work was done during the night because moving the motor through Park avenue and West Second street in the daytime, as they would have to do, would be the cause of frightening horses. The entire journey to the electric lighthouse was made on planks and rollers and the captain made a quick and neat job of it.

LIVERY HORSE WAS DRIVEN TO DEATH.

The Animal Belonged to "Uncle Dan" Roberts.

STEED MIRED IN A DITCH.

FRED BOWDEN AND A FRIEND HAD HIRED THE RIG.

Stableman Awakened Early Yesterday Morning and Bowden Made the Urgent Plea That he Wanted the Horse to go to His Sick Mother — Roberts Intends to Prosecute Him.

It was about 1:30 o'clock yesterday morning that Fred Bowden, of Grant avenue, accompanied by a friend, called at the livery stable of Dan Roberts, on North avenue, and awakened Charles Cox, the night man, from his sleep. Bowden said that he had received word that his mother was dying and that he wanted to get a horse and buggy. His demands were so urgent that Cox let Bowden have a rig.

That was the last seen or heard of the rig until yesterday forenoon when N. M. Giles, a milkman, living near Bound Brook, called at the livery stable and told Mr. Roberts that he had a horse in his barn that belonged to him. A description of the rig was given and corresponded with the one hired to Bowden.

Mr. Giles stated that Bowden called at his home early yesterday morning and asked for help to get a horse out of a ditch. He responded and took two or three men with him to help. When they reached the schoolhouse at Harris Lane they found the horse lying in the ditch completely exhausted. Several attempts were made to get the animal on his feet, but every effort failed. Eventually the horse was taken to Mr. Giles's barn where he died at 4 o'clock this morning.

Mr. Roberts says that there is no doubt but what the horse was actually driven to death. He was one of the best horses in the stable and has made a mile on the Waverly track in three minutes.

Mr. Roberts is determined that he shall receive the full penalty of the law. Bowden and his friend left the scene of the accident soon after Mr. Giles and his men took charge of the rig, and nothing has been seen of them since. The statement that Bowden's mother was dying seems to have been a ruse to get the rig from Mr. Roberts. Mr. Roberts will prosecute Bowden.

BIBLE TRAINING CLASS.

It Has Been Twelve Years in Existence in the Y. M. C. A.

Twelve years ago today the first Y. M. C. A. Bible training class was organized in this city in the little rooms of the Y. M. C. A., on East Front street. Charles T. Kissam, a former resident here, but who now resides in New York, organized the class, and was its first teacher.

Among the members were numbered Rev. Milton A. Craft, W. D. Murray, J. A. Robinson, Charles F. Powlison, all young men who are numbered today among the most earnest workers for the association in the city. The class started out with about 20 members. It has about the same number today, and is taught by the general secretary, J. H. Manning.

FOUGHT WITH A HAWK.

DESPERATE BATTLE PUT UP BY BIRD WITH A BROKEN WING.

Frank Dencklau's Exciting Hunting Experience in the Passaic Valley—Finally Succeeded in Drowning the Hawk.

With a wounded hawk as an adversary, Frank Dencklau, of East Second street, had a desperate encounter last Thursday while on a hunting expedition in the Passaic Valley. In the early morning Dencklau, Walter L. Long, of Park avenue, Fred C. Bonney, of Mercer avenue, and Godwin Beard, of Hillside avenue, started out with their shotguns. After wandering over to the Passaic Valley and meeting with varying success they finally spied an immense hawk perched on a tall tree.

They surrounded the tree after a time and blazed away. The contents of Dencklau's gun broke a wing and the great bird fluttered down on the other side of the Passaic, which is not very wide at that point. There being no bridge in the vicinity, Dencklau left his gun on the bank and waded through. The hawk was very active and thoroughly aroused. The bird fought with beak and talons, scratching the would-be captor's hands and tearing his clothes. At last Dencklau laid the bird low with a blow from a club he picked up, and seizing it before it could recover held the head of the struggling biped under water until it was drowned.

The great bird was then carried across the river and brought to Plainfield, where Dencklau is having it stuffed in remembrance of the exciting experience. The bird is one of unusual size, measuring nearly four feet from tip to tip.

MEMORIAL SERVICE.

W. C. T. U. Honor the Memory of the Late Frances Willard.

Yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, at the rooms of the W. C. T. U., a service was held in memory of the anniversary of the birthday of the late Miss Frances Willard. Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson conducted the service and she was assisted by other members of the union who gave short quotations from Miss Willard's writings and speeches. Mrs. Tomlinson spoke affectionately of the late temperance leader and said that the influence of her work would always be felt. The music at the service was in charge of J. D. Moon and was appropriate to the occasion.

Diphtheria in Dunellen.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, N. J., Sept. 26.—Three cases of diphtheria are reported by the Board of Health. Two cases are in Libson Pierson's family (colored) and the other one in a family by the name of Meeker. Both families live on the road to New Market, near the Episcopal church. The cases are light but all the sanitary precautions are being taken to prevent the spread of the disease.

Hurt in a Dangerous Practice.

The young son of Edward Marcellus, of East Fourth street, coachman for O. T. Waring, caught his foot in the spokes of a wagon wheel this morning, while catching a ride, and broke it. He is the lad who was kicked in the eye by a horse several months ago, and spent a long time in the hospital before he recovered the use of the optic.

Counsellor W. S. Angleman has been appointed a commissioner by the Circuit Judge of Escambia county, Florida, to take testimony in a chancery case in which the parties are the Ferry Pass Inspector and Shipping Association and Charles Krueger. The claim involves some timber lands in Florida of great value.

A Driver's Skill.

Last Saturday afternoon at the Gentlemen's Driving Association Park a very serious accident was averted through the careful driving of Mr. Phœbus, who was driving "Tammany." A piece of harness broke and the trotter became quite fractious, and would have caused serious damage had not the driver exhibited rare skill.

Early Closing at an End.

The effort among some of the local merchants looking toward the continuation of the early closing movement has not been successful. This morning Edward White, who has been closing at 7 o'clock heretofore, announced that in the future his store will close at 8:30 o'clock.

SAFE TRIP THIS TIME.

MR. AND MRS. LACASSE'S RETURN FROM THEIR OCEAN VOYAGE.

There Was No Exciting Incidents This Time on a French Liner—Say the Bourgogne's Captain Was Not Insane

Although once perilously near destruction on the ill-fated Bourgogne, Mr. and Mrs. Adrian C. LaCasse, of the borough, have at last successfully completed their trip to Europe and return and are once more in town, preparing to return to their work of giving instruction in the French language.

For a time Mr. and Mrs. LaCasse were probably the most conspicious Plainfielders in the country, gaining their notority through their successful efforts to escape from the sinking French liner. It was not long after that they decided to brave the perils of the deep once more and visit their native land as they were attempting to do when the Bourgogne came to grief. They went over on the French liner Gascogne, and after spending several weeks on the other side, returned on that same steamer. While abroad they stopped near the family of the late Captain Deloncle, of the Bourgogne.

The Gascogne arrived in New York yesterday afternoon at 1 o'clock. Four hours later Mr. and Mrs. LaCasse were in Plainfield. Mr. LaCasse brings home with him a valuable fox terrier.

Owing to the report current of the alleged insanity of Captain Deloncle, the arrival of the LaCasses was watched with interest. They were interviewed by a Press reporter in regard to the story and both were very positive that there was no truth in it.

QUARRELED OVER A BACKYARD.

Paradise Alley Neighbors Take Their Troubles to Court.

Mrs. Lena Levine, of Cottage place, swore out a warrant in Justice Mosher's court for the arrest of a neighbor, Sebastian Miller, Friday, charging him with assault and battery. Miller was arrested by Constable Rockafellow Friday night and held in $50 bail for a hearing Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

The Levines and the Millers live in same house on Cottage place and have the use of the same backyard. In the yard is a clothesline on which both families hang their washing. The line is not long enough for all the washing and there are frequent disputes between the two families.

They have always passed off peaceably enough until last week, however, when the line was so crowded with laundry that it seemed impossible to get another rag on it. The two families then got into a quarrel in which Mrs. Levine says Miller used a dishpan with such force against her head and face as to bruise it severely. She then had her alleged assailant arrested.

Aged and Feeble, But Drunk.

Martin Grogan, aged and feeble, was arrested Saturday evening by Patrolman Saffron for being helplessly drunk. He could not take care of himself and so the officer locked him up. Sunday morning Chief Grant paroled him for trial today on account of his poor condition. The City Judge suspended sentence on him this morning.

RALLY DAY IN THE SUNDAY-SCHOOLS.

Yesterday Marked the Resumption of Activity After the Summer

PLANS FOR EARNEST WORK.

SERVICES IN SEVERAL OF THE CHURCHES AND CHAPELS.

Rev. W. C. Snodgrass Addressed the Scholars in the Congregational Church —"The Twentieth Century Movement" Explained in Hope Chapel by Rev. Mr. Newell—Exercises Held by Other Schools.

Even with the prospect of rain at any moment, the rally service of the Sunday-school of the Congregational church was well attended. It marked the closing of the vacation period and the return to the regular regime of the active winter season. During the summer months the session was held in the morning. With the first of September the afternoon sessions were resumed but no special service marked the change until yetterday.

All the departments of the Sunday-school were well filled and the superintendent, J. A. Robinson, was much pleased with the showing made. The rally-day service was entitled "Christ, Our Leader." It included hymns by the school and responsive readings. The primary department also took part. There were two cornet solos well rendered by Benjamin LaVere.

In place of the lesson was a short review exercise conducted by A. C. LaBoyteaux. The address of the afternoon was made by Rev. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. church. He spoke on "Christ, Our Leader," and told the children why and how He was.

Yesterday was "rallying day" at Hope chapel, and this introduction to the fall work was made pleasant by a special service of songs and addresses.

A movement has been introduced among Sunday-school workers called the "Twentieth Century Movement." The idea is to interest Sunday-school teachers and scholars in building up their individual schools and classes as well as to help financially and in other ways towards establishing schools in other places, and all this is to be done during the short time between now and the dawning of the twentieth century. Hope chapel teachers and scholars want to have a share in this work, and at the exercises yesterday Superintendent Squires broached the subject and explained what the "Twentieth Century Movement" means.

Rev. Mr. Newell spoke on what Hope chapel stands for. An interesting feature about the service was the calling of the roll by the secretary at which each teacher answered, giving the number present and those absent in her class. According to the number of pupils on the teachers' books, Hope chapel is not large enough to hold all of them, should the entire number belonging to the chapel Sunday-school decide to attend some Sunday.

The rally day exercises at the East Third Street mission opened with a piano solo by Clifford Braider. Scripture reading by the superintendent, L. W. Randolph, prayer by H. E. Needham and a solo by Miss Lena Jomini came next. A song was sung by the infant department, and two little girls, Beulah and Violet VanWinkle sang and recited. The address of the afternoon was made by L. H. Biglow, J. There was a good attendance.

Rev. Dr. Richards, of the Crescent Avenue Sunday-school, made an address at the rally day exercises held there yesterday afternoon. There was special music by the choir. No lesson was studied, the hour usually devoted to that being given up to Dr. Richards.

W. H. ANGLEMAN MARRIED.

Miss Becker, a Former Plainfield Girl, Was the Bride.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Fulton, N. Y., Sept. 26.—The marriage of Miss Becker, daughter of a retired sea captain of this place, to William H. Angleman, of Somerset street, North Plainfield, was celebrated today at the home of the bride's parents. Miss Becker was formerly a resident of Plainfield for several years, while Mr. Angleman is well-known in Plainfield and vicinity. He is now employed by Alex. Thorn, the grocer, on Somerset street. After a short honeymoon the bride and groom will return to Plainfield where they will reside.

Went Directly Home.

William Koehler, of Jersey City, who escaped from the Brookside Retreat several weeks ago, is now at his home in Jersey City. After his escape he went directly to his home. Dr. Cooley states that Koehler's time would have expired October 1st.

DANGER IN SODA.

Serious Results Sometimes Follow Its Excessive Use.

Common soda is all right in its place and indispensable in the kitchen and for cooking and washing purposes, but it was never intended for a medicine, and people who use it as such will some day regret it.

We refer to the common use of soda to relieve heartburn or sour stomach, a habit which thousands of people practice almost daily, and one which is fought with danger; moreover the soda only gives temporary relief and in the end the stomach trouble gets worse and worse.

The soda acts as a mechanical irritant to the walls of the stomach and bowels and cases are on record where it accumulated in the intestines, causing death by inflammation or peritonitis.

Dr. Harlandson reccommends as the safest and surest cure for sour stomach (acid dyspepsia) an excellent preparation sold by druggists under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. These tablets are large 20 grain lozenges, very pleasant to taste and contain the natural acids, peptones and digestive elements essential to good digestion, and when taken after meals they digest the food perfectly and promptly before it has time to ferment, sour and poison the blood and nervous system.

Dr. Wuerth states that he invariably uses Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets in all cases of stomach derangements and finds them a certain cure not only for sour stomach, but by promptly digesting the food they create a healthy appetite, increase flesh and strenghten the action of the heart and liver. They are not a cathartic, but intended only for stomach diseases and weakness and will be found reliable in any stomach trouble except cancer of the stomach.

A little book describing all forms of stomach weakness and their cure mailed free by addressing the Stuart Co., of Marshall, Mich. 9 26-28-30

Spain's Troubles Not Over.

Madrid, Sept. 26.—The Liberal publishes an article which causes much talk.

It says that Spain's troubles are by no means over, and that England is co-operating with the United States at the expense of Spain.

Quoting Mr. Joseph Chamberlain's words, it says that Spain should enter an energetic protest against such an utterance from a minister of the crown of England.

After the loan is concluded with the Messrs. Rothschilds on the security of the Almaden mines, there is talk of a large loan with the Bank of Spain.

In ministerial circles it is stated that Spain will hold out to the utmost for her rights of sovereignty over the whole of the Philippines.

General Macias telegraphs that ten thousand Spaniards, not of the army, ask for repatriation at the expense of the government, but the latter will not hear of it.

Senors Montero Rios and Garnica will leave to-day by the Sud express for Paris. The other commissioners will follow when they choose.

Road Bed Out of Sight.

Matteawan, N. Y., Sept. 26.—A trestle twenty-five feet high, spanning part of a swamp traversed by the Philadelphia, Reading and New England railroad, a mile west of Pine Plains, near here, has sunk completely out of sight in the bog.

In another part of the swamp a telegraph pole alongside the track has disappeared completely.

Sixty men are at work with construction and gravel trains, piling 120 car loads of gravel and stone a day upon the road bed, which sinks faster than filled in. On Wednesday night the road bed was fourteen inches lower than on Tuesday. Saturday it gradually sunk out of sight.

A piece of pipe used for sounding was driven one hundred and twenty-five feet into this bog and no bottom was found. The road bed looks as if it had been twisted by an earthquake.

British Fleet Sails Suddenly.

Wei-Hai-Wei, Sept. 26.—The British battleship Centurion, flagship of Vice Admiral Sir Edward H. Seymour, the commander of the British fleet in Chinese waters, sailed suddenly Friday under sealed orders, accompanied, from Chee-Foo, by the battleship Victorious, the first class cruiser Narcissus, the second class cruiser Hermione, the torpedo boat destroyer Fame, the torpedo boat destroyer Hart, and the dispatch boat Alacrity.

It is supposed that the destination of the fleet is Ta-Ku, at the entrance of the river leading to Tien-Tsin, the port of Pekin, for the purpose of making a naval demonstration there.

Mr. Adee Secretary of State.

Washington, Sept. 26.—Mr. Adee is now actually secretary of state, the president having issued a special commission to him as secretary of state ad interim, the first time since the incumbency of Mr. Hunter.

The law provides that in the absence of the secretary the assistant secretary shall act as secretary of state, but makes no provision for such a case as existed when Secretary Day and Assistant Secretary Moore retired simultaneously, therefore it was necessary to issue a special commission to Mr. Adee.

Barracks in Large Cities.

Boston, Mass., Sept. 26.—Col. Hyde of the United States quartermaster's department, for Boston, has received orders from the quartermaster general to secure suitable winter quarters for nearly five thousand soldiers. The barracks will be built by the government instead of buying a building outright.

TREMBLES IN BALANCE

A COUP D'ETAT POSSIBLE

Commission on Revision Appointed by the Minister of Justice Equally Divided on the Advisability of Reopening the Case. Much Criticism of M Faure and the Premier.

Paris, Sept. 26.—It was officially announced Saturday that the civil commission which has been examining the documents in the Dreyfus case, with the view of reporting to the government, on the advisability of reopening it, is equally divided for and against a revision, and the government considers that this division gives it full liberty of action and also of responsibility. Therefore, the government decided to wait until to-day, when a full cabinet meeting will be held and a decision arrived at.

Europe Watching France.

London, Sept. 26.—The alarming situation in France rivets the attention of Europe. The excitement is increasing hourly, new revelations and developments are expected, and a military coup d'etat would not surprise anybody.

The weakness of M. Brisson, the premier, over the affair of Lieutenant Col. Picquart, who is now in secret confinement in the military prison of Cherche Midi, placed there in spite of the fact that he was in the hands of a civil court, has disgusted even his own personal friends, who call him a coward and a dolt, while the enemies of a revision of the Dreyfus case accuse him of being a hypocrite and of having sold himself to a Dreyfus syndicate.

General Zurlinden, military governor of Paris, with the cognizance of General hanoine, minister of war, acted entirely without reference to the premier, M. Brisson, who, with a majority of his colleagues, was completely dumbfounded at his proceedings. The supporters of the cabinet declare that M. Brisson in order to save the constitution, should dismiss General Chanoine and General Zurlinden and even arraign them for treasonable conduct. Only bold action will secure the supremacy of civil law.

One satisfactory feature of the prosecution of Colonel Picquart is that the war office has engaged to give him another trial, which M. Brisson insisted upon before he consented to the prisoner's transfer to the military prison of herche Midi. The friends of Colonel Picquart declare that if he is publicly tried he will throw floods of light upon the whole mystery.

In an interview with a former parliamentarian, who has figured in all the political events in France since 1869, published in the Daily News, he is quoted as expressing opinions regarding the role which President Faure is playing confirming previous statements on the same subject.

He says General Zurlinden enjoys the full confidence of the French president, who is in love with military glamour. President Faure, he adds, has only to say the word to have France at his feet, and he further says if he does not say this word and declare himself in favor of a revision of the Dreyfus case, he will have the whole French mob in hue and cry against him and he will have to go.

But if, in order to oppose arevision, he resigns the presidency, the national assembly will meet at ersailles within 24 hours, and he will be re-elected by a crushing majority of those who are hostile to a revision. He will then form a ministry, with M. Barthou as premier, and with an ambitious, strong general at the head of the war office, he will be able to do what he likes with France.

THE SULTAN MUST SUBMIT

Four Powers Agree to the Pacification of Crete.

Rome, Italy, Sept. 26.—Great Britain, France, Russia and Italy have appended their signatures to an agreement for the pacification of the island of Crete, including a plan for coercing the sultan into submission.

The scheme has for some time been drafted, but its enforcement was delayed to invite the participation of Germany, which country declined.

Early this week the four powers will send an ultimatum to the sultan of Turkey, summoning him to accept the project and informing him that unless he does so measures will be taken to enforce his compliance.

The powers have irrevocably decided to settle the Cretan question immediately and will not hesitate to send their fleet to the Dardanelles and beyond, if necessary.

Commissioner to Porto Rico.

Plainfield, N. J., Sept. 26.—Dr. H. K. Carroll has been appointed by President McKinley a commissioner to Porto Rico, and will sail by the transport Chester on October 5. His mission is to investigate and report on the civil administration of that island and get information needed by the United States for its future government.

GARCIA IS INTERVIEWED

Independence Alone Will Satisfy the Cuban People.

UNITED STATES SUPREME

The Cuban General Says His Disagreement With Gen. Shafter Was Due to the Latter's Broken Promise. That This Government is Now the Only One to Be Recognized in Cuba.

Santiago de uba, Sept. 26.—The Herald publishes an interesting interview with the Cuban leader, General Garcia, in which se says:

"I should like it clearly set out that I had no personal quarrel with General Shafter. He had given me a distinct promise that the American and Cuban troops should enter the town together.

"That promise he has denied, but, nevertheless, it was so. I felt keenly the indignity and neglect of the Cuban troops, and still more strongly the fact that the Spanish officials still retained office in Santiago. I could no longer obey instructions to co-operate with the American army, and as this feeling was antagonistic to the orders I had received from my commander-in-chief, I resigned my command, writing a letter to General Shafter, which has been published."

"My resignation was accepted. Probably the cause was that it was feared that on the publication of my letter to General Shafter some feeling might be stirred up against me in the United States, and therefore it would be impolitic to continue me in my command, but my letter caused exactly the reverse result.

"I have received from the United States thousands of letters of congratulation. I do not think it has caused me to be in any way persona non grata to the American people or the American government.

"I do not recognize any government on this island save that of the United States. From the moment the American troops landed on this soil but one government is represented in Cuba. There was a Cuban revolutionary army in arms against Spain, acting under orders of General Gomez. The so-called provisional government we do not recognize.

"My view is that a sum should be raised sufficient to pay these men, say, two months' wages. With this in their pocket they would be able to return and commence peaceful pursuits. At present daily rations are served out to them. Many live long distances from their homes, some a hundred and fifty miles. They can only draw one day's rations, with the result that they cannot leave camp more than one day.

"If, say, two months' wages were given to them, which was the principle the Spaniards adopted in 1878, they would gladly take advantage of furloughs, and then the Cuban military rule, allowing no man to carry his arms and munitions on furlough would result in their practical disarmament.

"Regarding the future government of the island, I desire publicly and definitely to state that nothing save independence will satisfy us. We believe we shall receive fair treatment at the hands of the American people. I hope to see America retain the island until a stable government, based on the free will of the people, has been established.

"General Lawton has done much to conciliate many whom General Shafter's action embittered. I think the good faith of the United States' actions is now fully recignized, but tthe question of the payment of the army is a great stumbling block that should be settled on a permanent base to allow the cultivation of estates and the rehabilitation of the country."

For American Pork.

Berlin, Sept. 26.—The chamber of commerce of Hamburg has taken up the fight in behalf of American pork. Published statistics show that there has not been a single case of trichinisis in Prussia or Hamburg due to American pork, for fifteen years. The report concludes:

"While these facts are not disproved and the statements as to the adulteration of American lard are uncorroborated, evidence has been found showing that all the repressive measures against foreign, and especially against American meats, must be held to be unreasonable and as gravely injuring German economic interests."

Gen. Wood's Jurisdiction.

Santiago de Cuba, Sept. 26.—President McKinley has extended tthe jurisdiction of military governor, and General Wood's authority now embraces the whole province of Santiago de Cuba, and he has appointed Lieutenant Colonel A. A. Wiley of the Fifth immunes, lieutenant governor, with the duties of reorganizing the civil courts and the administration of all civil affairs in eastern Cuba.

Lieutenant Colonel Wiley's residence is in Montgomery, Ala. He is one of the counsel of the Plant system and has been serving as judge advocate since his arrival in Santiago.

A Prize from the Colon.

Washingtin Sept. 26.—The most beautiful of all the souvenirs of the great naval battle of July 3, off Santiago, has reached the navy department from Captain Converse, commanding the Montgomery, at Guantanamo. It is a bronze bust of Christopher Columbus, taken from the flagship Cristobal Colon, which lies below the surface of the ocean twenty miles from Santiago.

Germany Not Causing Trouble.

Washington, Sept. 26.—The officials of the war department pronounce to be without foundation the alarmist stories coming from San Francisco, that Germany has shown a disposition to arm the Philippine insurgents with a view to inciting them to harrass the American army at Manila.

SENATOR MORRELL TO RESIGN

He Will Probably Retire from Public Life Next Month.

Burlington, Vt., Sept. 26.—United States Senator Morrill is said to meditaing resigning at the coming session of the Vermont legislature, which will meet about the second week in October, and the question of his successor is already being discussed.

There is an unwritten law in the state, which has never been departed from in the last fifty years, that one United States senator shall come from the east side of the state and the other from the west side.

The mountain range which divides the state pretty nearly in the middle is the dividing line. Senator Morrill is from the east side, and two candidates to succeed him—Representative Grout and ex-Governor Dillingham—have already developed in this section. Several candidates on the west side are also being talked of, but the state is so committed to the precedent of selecting one senator from each side of the state that it is believed it will never depart from it.

Justin S. Morrill was born at Strafford, Vt., on April 14, 1810. Without seeking a nomination, in 1854 he was unanimously named for Congress, and on December 3, 1855, began his long career in Congress.

He continued an active member of the House until his election to the Senate in 1867, and has been elected to succeed himself at the expiration of each of his terms. He enjoys the distinction of having served continuously in Congress for a greater length of time than any other man in the history of the country.

Much Illness in Manila.

Manila, Sept. 26.—There is no material change in the situation here. All parties are awaiting the action of the Paris peace conference.

The sanitary conditions are of the most menacing character. Six hundred and eighty soldiers are now in the general hospital. They are suffering from typhoid and dysentery for the most part, and the new cases run from ten to fifteen daily.

Within the walled city the conditions are even worse. Ten Spanish prisoners died of typhoid fever Friday. Hundreds of others are sick despite the efforts of the Americans to keep the place clean.

The American officials realize that matters must continue to grow worse unless orders come to remove the prisoners, either to Spain or orrigidor island, where they could be kept safely away from infection.

The hospital ship Rio sailed Thursday, having one hundred and fifty invalids on board.

The Raleigh, Boston and Callao have gone to Iloilo to take possession of the place.

Seven insurgents were arrested on Thursday charged with impressing men in the city for Aguinaldo's army. Three are held for examination. One of the dictator's aids has been sent down from Malolos to be present at the hearing.

Gomez Denies He Has Resigned.

Havana, Sept. 26.—The captain general's body guard at eight o'clock this morning will form in the Plaza risto and, headed by a band, will proceed to the Cathedral to render military honors during the removal of the bones of Columbus from the monument where they now rest and their transportation to Spain.

General Maximo Gomez some time since arrived at the camp of General Rojas, in the Santa lara province.

General Gomez gives emphatic denial to the published report that he has presented his resignation as commander-in-chief of the Cuban army.

An American subject, named Von Holwenstein, who was sentenced by the Spanish government for complicity in the insurrection in Cuba, and who has been confined seven months, has been released by order of Captain General Blanco and sailed Saturday on the steamer City of Washington for New York. The American commissioners paid his passage.

Great Britains Friendship.

Washington, Sept. 26.—An instance of the notable desire of the British government to cultivate friendly relations with the United States is given in the course of some mail reports recently reaching the state department from the United States embassy at London. This refers to the great military manoeuvres which were recently conducted on Salisbury Plain, in the first week of the present month.

These manoeuvres took place in the presence of the commander-in-chief of the British army, the secretary of state for war, several members of the royal family, the foreign military attaches, and a vast crowd of people, and the national flag of the United States was placed side by side with the British royal standard, the Union Jack and the white naval ensign upon the principal marquee at the saluting point. There were no other flags on the tent in question, but the four mentioned.

A New German Invention.

Berlin, Sept. 26.—A new and highly important invention was tested at the German naval manoeuvres, ending last week. It was in the shape of a Greek Phoenician fire, invented by a Berlin engineer. It ignites on contact with the air or water and cannot be quenched by either water or earth. It burns with a brilliant flame, exceeding big searchlights, and it can be sunk under water or under ground and when again brought to the surface instantly bursts into a flame at any desired point.

It was tested during the night evolutions off the island of Heligoland and off Kiel and proved most efficient in detecting the presence of the enemy.

French Marksmanship.

London, Sept. 26.—The French Mediterranean squadron, consisting of six vessels, gave an exhibition of firing in the presence of the minister of marine at Toulon last week the range being two miles. The ships fired 350 shells at a wooden ship before setting her on fire and sinking her. The result, nevertheless, was considered satisfactory.

Chili and Argentine Agree.

Buenos Ayres, Sept. 24.—It is reported that an amicable agreement between the Argentine and Chilian governments has been signed.

WAR INQUIRY BEGINS

First Meeting of the Investigating Committee Held.

WORK MUST BE THOROUGH

Eight Members of President McKinley's Investigation Committee Present at the First Meeting in the Capital. Two Hours Listening to Instructions from the President Before the Committee Met.

Washington, Sept. 26.—President McKinley's commission to investigate the conduct of the war, held its first meeting in the quarters of the board of ordnance and fortifications in the war department Saturday.

There were eight members of the commission present. They were Major Grenville M. Dodge of New York, olonel J. A. Sexton of Illinois, Captain E. P. Howell of Georgia, Major General J. M. Wilson, chief of engineers of the United States army, Charles Denby of Indiana, former minister to China former Governor Urban A. Woodbury of Vermont, former Governor James A. Beaver of Pennsylvania, and Major General Alexander McD. McCook, U. S. A., retired.

In addition to these men, Dr. Phineas D. Connor of Cincinnati, Ohio, has accepted an appointment as the medical member of the commission, the membership of which has thus been filled. Dr. Connor's appointment was recommended by Dr. Keen of Philadelphia, when he declined.

Before their first meeting at the war department the eight commissioners and Major Mills of the inspector general's department, who has been ordered to duty as recorder to the commission, visited the White House and called on President McKinley.

They were with the president nearly two hours and received from him instructions outlining the scope of the investigations he desired them to make.

When they left the White House they had instructions to make an investigation of a much more far reaching character than might seem to have been indicated by the wording of the president's telegrams to the men who were first asked to serve.

As was indicated by this telegram, the quartermaster's, commissary and medical departments, being the ones most severely criticised, are to be investigated most thoroughly, but the commission is not to be confined to these, but is to go into the general conduct of the war.

The commission remained in session at the war department until half past one o'clock perfecting an organization.

General Grenville M. Dodge was elected president of the commission; Major S. C. Mills, U. S. A., recorder, and Mr. Richard Weightman of Washington, secretary. Three army officers will be chosen as sergeant-at-arms.

The scope of the work and the method of procedure were not decided upon. The commission will meet at ten o'clock this morning to lay out its plan of work. It is expected that Dr. Connor will be present.

After the adjournment of the meeting General Dodge said that the meetings would be secret for the present, and it had not been decided whether persons would be examined in public. The commission will be sub-divided into three committees so that the investigation can be conducted on three different lines simultaneously.

It is realized that a hard task is ahead of the investigation. There are no formal charges upon which to act and at the outset the operations of the commission will be of a dragnet character. The investigators will have to develop the charges and then inquire into them.

It is thought that the commission will make its first inquiries in the Secretary's office, the adjutant General's office and the office of the major general commanding the army, taking cognizance of the orders which were issued for the conduct of the war and same manner the officers of the Surgeon General, quartermaster general and Commissary General will be examined into to ascertain the character of the orders issued, and whether they were carried out.

It is not known whether the commission will visit the camps, but it is thought probable that such journeys will be made, as it will be more expeditious and economical than bringing witnesses to Washington.

Before that is done, however, there is a cast amount of work at hand in the department here. It is probable that most of this work will be done by the commission in secret, and that the public will be taken into confidence only when witnesses are examined.

Washington, Sept. 26.—That President McKinley is determined that the investigation of the war department's conduct of the war shall be thorough is evidenced by the expression of his wishes Saturday before the commission. In his talk to the commission the president made it very clear that the investigation was not to be confined to the bureaus of the war department and to subordinate officials, but was to take in the war department and the secretary of war himself.

He told the commissioners that he was receiving a large number of letters from different parts of the country saying that no investigation was needed, but that Secretary Alger should be dismissed.

He gave them to understand that he could not for an instant consider the dismissal of the secretary of war before a thorough investigation had been made, and the secretary had been given every opportunity to be heard.

This was interpreted by some of the members of the commission to indicate that their investigation is not to stop short of the secretary of war, and that the political fate of Secretary Alger will depend upon their action.

Yellow Fever at Jackson.

Jackson, Miss., Sept. 26.—Another case of yellow fever has appeared in Jackson. The patient is a 13-year old messenger boy named Harry Wright. Dr. Purnell, state health officer, has issued a proclamation advising a total depopulation of the town. Preparations are now being made to send out a special train load of refugees.

POST OFFICES SWAMPED.

Fall Trade Causes a Rush of Business.

Washington, Sept. 26.—The rush of business incident to the reviving fall trade has about swamped the big postoffices of the country, and the department here has been compelled to add to the working force of all the main postoffices in order to enable them to keep up with current work. In New York and other places it has been impossible to keep ahead of the volume of business now pouring in, for reports to the department show that they are four or five days behind with second class matter at New York. Twenty extra employes were taken on to catch up with this department, and it was only by extending the working hours that the accumulated matter was at last gotten out. Postmaster an Cott complains that the space in the basement of the New York postoffice devoted to the handling of second class mail matter is not large enough for him to place a sufficient number of clerks to keep up with the work. He is constantly embarrassed by this fact and it is getting to be a frequent occurrence for the mails to accumulate.

The Brooklyn force has been increased lately at the request of Postmaster Wilson, and further additions will be made in the near future.

Assistant Postmaster General Heath states that during the past few weeks it has been found necessary to increase the working force in every large city in the country.

Platt's Slate Made Up.

For Governor—Theodore Roosevelt of New York.

Lieutenant Governor—Timothy L. Woodruff of Kings.

Treasurer—John P. Jaeckel of Cayuga.

State Engineer—Not selected (perhaps Col. George E. Waring of New York.

The Black managers have decided not to make a fight on the organization of the convention, and it will be organized with Sereno E. Payne of Cayuga as temporary chairman and Senator Horace G. White of Syracuse as permanent chairman.

Chauncey M. Depew will name Mr. Roosevelt and Delegates Cullinan of Oswego, Farnham of Orange and Wallace of Queens will second it.

A bitter fight is on between the Platt men, who have prepared the above slate, and the supporters of Governor Black.

This bitterness is expected to be accentuated by the arrival of Governor Black. The governor will reach here at 9.30 to-day and plunge into the fight at once.

After a lengthy telephone talk with the governor at a late hour last night, Louis F. Payn said:

"The governor will go into the convention and will remain in the race until it is run, if he doesn't get more than ten votes."

The governor will be substituted in the Rensselaer delegation and will have a seat on the floor. If the present feeling continues to develop, nobody here would be surprised if the openly denounces Thomas C. Platt on the floor of the convention.

Chinese Emperor Dead.

London, Sept. 26.—The Daily Telegraph's Hong Kong correspondent telegraphs:

"Although there is no positive information, all the evidence tends to the conviction that the emperor is dead. A private dispatch says he died on September 21, directly he issued the edict giving the dowager empress the regency. Nobody doubts that Yang and Chang Yin Huen, who was minister at Washington in 1895, are both innocent of the charge of poisoning the emperor."

The Pekin correspondent of the Daily Mail says:

"The head eunuch at the palace informs me that the emperor is seriously indisposed and that his death is not unlikely."

The Maria Teresa Afloat.

Playa del Este, Sept. 26.—The wrecking company engaged under Lieutenant Hobson, in the work of saving the wrecked Spanish warships, has succeeded in floating the cruiser Infanta Maria Teresa.

The cruiser, after being floated, was taken in tow by the Potomac and, convoyed by the cruiser Newark, Scorpion and the Alvarado, proceeded for Guantanamo bay, where she arrived Saturday night.

The successful issue of the attempt to float her was greeted with the blowing of whistles, the firing of national salutes and by cheers, in which the Cubans joined, disturbing the noon siesta.

Troops for Cuba in October.

Washington, Sept. 26.—General Miles says that the first United States troops will be sent to Cuba about October 20. There will be more than three thousand men. A part will be regulars, and they will probably be under the command of General Wade.

When asked if the evacuation would begin on the arrival of these troops he would not reply, but this is the president's plan, as stated by one who talked with the president:

When Acting Secretary of War Meikeljohn was asked as to the time the troops would begin to move, he said he thought the president did not now plan to move them before November 1.

An Independent Ticket.

New York, Sept. 26.—The declination by Theodore Roosevelt of the nomination for governor, tendered him by the Independent citizens' committee has not discouraged that body.

The Independents have decided to go on with their work, and to substitute nother name than that of Roosevelt or the first place on their ticket. Just what that name will be hey would not say yesterday, but it is known that a number of men have been talked of for the position.

Democratic Plans.

The sub-committee of the Democratic State committee appointed to select the chairman of the convention met in Newark Saturday and selected ex-Prosecutor William B. Gourley, of Paterson, for temporary chairman. Senator Daly, of Hudson county, was also nominated, but only received two of the seven votes of the sub-committee for the place.

Committeeman E. P. Budd, of Burlington county, was present to talk with the other members of the committee about the platform. Mr. Budd was appointed chairman of a sub-committee to outline a platform to be submitted to the committee on resolutions at the convention when appointed. Mr. Budd's plan was to confine the platform to State issues. In this Mr. Budd was supported by other members of the sub-committee.

Senator Daly protested against this. He was opposed to side-tracking National issues. The Senator is an ardent silver man, and believes the party should endorse the National platform of 1896. William D. Wolfskiel, of Union county, another member of the State committee, who was present at the conference, approved of Senator Daly's attitude.

Practice Against Theory.

The claim that the value of farm property is enhanced by the construction of stone roads and that the county expenditures for such roads will be more than made up by the increase in taxable property does not seem to be borne out in Burlington county.

Burlington has built more stone roads under the new State road law than any county. Most of its trunk roads have been macadamized, and hundreds of its fertile farms now front on thoroughfares equal to any in the State. The farmers, who at first were skeptical as to the advantages claimed for the improved roads, now freely admit their benefit in the saving of horseflesh and the facilities afforded in the marketing of crops.

In spite of the facts, however, the assessed valuation of property in Burlington county this year is $107,000 less than last, and the decrease is attributed to a decline in farm values.

Reaching Out.

Great cities from little efforts may grow in this State. Jersey City wants to absorb Hoboken, Bayonne and Harrison: Paterson would take in its populous suburbs, and Newark would like to embrace the Oranges. Such ambitions may be chilled by the Legislature, but they bespeak for the great centres named a creditable desire for advancement even to the limit of county boundaries.—New York Press.

And don't forget that there is a Greater Plainfield, as promising a municipality as there is in New Jersey.

Navy—Personnel Bill.

A bill of great importance to the navy, reported by Congressman Foss of Illinois and already referred to the committee of the whole, will be taken up probably by the next session of congress for final disposition. This proposes to reorganize the whole personnel of the navy by amalgamating the line and staff in rank and duty. The profound interest felt in everything which can increase the efficiency of this branch of military service justifies some comment on the topic. Since the civil war, when steam became the prime ship motor, there has been a tendency of the line or fighting and navigating officers to regard the engineer force as their inferiors. When steam enginery became a necessity of ships, it was necessary to supply its officers from civil life, and the professional naval man naturally looked down on them. The feeling even remained after engineering became a part of the regular Annapolis course and engineers were graduates of the academy, for once an engineer always an engineer. The cleavage between the two kinds of officers worked detrimentally in many ways. The new bill amalgamates them and regards the engineer detail as one at any time likely to be changed for deck duty or vice versa. In other words, the new naval officer must be fit to take his turn at any time in the engine room, if necessary. The less accomplished officers not equipped for such heavy all round work will be gradually weeded out by voluntary or enforced retirement. This change of course will greatly add to the importance of studies in steam and electric engineering at the academy and will graduate a body of men far more masterly in their profession. It is getting to be a recognized fact on a warship that no man is fully ripe for command till he knows his machinery as well as his guns.

There are other provisions in the bill for the correction of minor evils which have gradually grown up, but the elimination of the friction in feeling and duty between staff and line is the principal aim. The bill was mainly drawn up by a body of naval experts, including line and staff officers, and has been fully indorsed by the naval board. It is believed that it will be of the greatest effect in improving the personnel of our naval officers, already a noble body of men with manifold gifts. The crew which fights the warship is the great factor of victory and the officers are the brains of that crew.

A New View of the Turk.

The stories of the Armenian massacres, with their atrocious detail of pillage, murder and every horrible passion let loose, have been made the subject of careful inquiry by Mr. Sidney Whitman, who writes of them in Harper's Magazine. He has come to the conclusion that the Turk has been grossly slandered and presents his reasons, based on personal research. The Turks of course adopted severe methods of repression against the revolutionary Armenians, who came mostly from Russian territory. The Armenians in Asiatic Turkey had long lived on perfectly familiar and friendly terms with their Mohammedan neighbors at the time of the insurrection in 1895. Even the Kurds, the most intractable and savage of the Turkish population, had been cordial in their relations. It was the Armenian revolutionists who brought down the whole cataclysm of evils on the heads of their brethren. The Armenian language, creed and schools were always free in Turkey. No social restrictions of any kind had been imposed on them. Their lives and property had been as secure as those of any Turkish subjects. They enjoyed such a degree of liberty and social freedom as no alien race ever enjoyed in Russia. The rebellion instigated among the Armenians by the emissaries who came over the Russian frontier was suppressed, according to Mr. Whitman, with as little severity as possible, and the outrages on the part of a few bands of fanatical Kurds were outside of government responsibility. Indeed the perpetrators of the outrages were severely punished by the pasha commanding the disturbed district, and the victims were cordially assisted by the resident Mohammedans with money and protection.

Mr. Whitman's investigation of the outrages, made among Christians and Mohammedans of every class, Turkish officials, Christian missionaries and Armenians themselves of the better class, convinced him that the stories of Armenian atrocity were so vastly exaggerated as to be little better than an inverted pyramid of lies. The convictions formed by Mr. Whitman seem to be that the Turks in dealing with the last attempts at Armenian revolution did so with as little cruelty and barbarism as could be used, and that the monstrous deeds with which Europe and America rang, narrated from Armenian sources, had but little true basis except so far as they were perpetrated by lawless ruffians.

In their accounts of the trolley opening at Dunellen on Thursday night, both Plainfield papers stated that Alderman "Jacobs" of New Brunswick, was toastmaster. It was Alderman Jaques who was toastmaster at the banquet. It is apparent that Plainfield reporters are not used to champagne.—New Brunswick Times.

That's tough on us. But it happens, though, that the original copy read "Jaques," which was changed to "Jacobs" after it had been put in type, on the admonition of one of the leading lights of the banquet. Allow us to say, however, that plain soda is the extent to which Press men indulge.

Before Justice of the Peace Miller in Vineland, Friday night, a jury found a verdict of $70 and costs against Charles Bateman and his brother Albert, for so cruelly overdriving a liveryman's horse that it had to be killed. Considering the crime, prison stripes would be a fashionable attire for these men.

Aren't the trolley magnates treading on dangerous grounds when they break a bottle of wine over a trolley car to mark the opening of the Dunellen line in an auspicious manner. Think of the W. C. T. U. resolutions that such an act is possible to inspire.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

A number of Plainfield people will be interested to know that John Keefe, formerly employed as a boy for F. L. C. Martin, the cycle dealer in this city, is now making a great hit at fancy and trick bicycle riding at Tony Pastor's Theatre in New York. Many of his friends have been into the city to see Mr. Keefe and they say he is a great favorite with the patrons at this theatre.

Miss Gertie Gilson, who is this season one of the important factors in the success of Davis & Keogh's unique comedy, "Have You Seen Smith?" to be presented at Music Hall Friday night, is extremely witty in conversation and during a recent trip of the company several of the members were discussing a well-known manager who is known chiefly by the large amounts of money he owes for salaries. One of the company remarked: "I don't like him because he always exaggerates everything so." "Yes," replied Miss Gilson, "he can't even start a bank account without overdrawing it."

De Wolf Hopper will be seen for but two weeks longer at the Knickerbocker Theatre, in Sousa and Klein's Comic opera, "The Charlatan." Since the opening night Mr. Hopper has added immensely to the effectiveness of the comedy scenes of the opera, and his topical verses in "The Legend of the Frog," never fail of applause. The numerous changes made in the opera since the opening night have all come in for liberal commendation.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Plainfield is getting to be so proud that the more unbendable of the citizens refer to Elizabeth now as "our thriving suburban section." And all this since John Kean gave $250,000 to link these sections with the trolley.—New York Press.

James E. Martine, known throughout New Jersey as the "Farmer Orator," is not a candidate for the nomination of Senator in Union county, to succeed Foster M. Voorhees. Mr. Martine's friends, however, are urging him as a Democratic candidate for the Congressional convention.—Newark News.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

The Westfield Standard has the following to say about a Plainfielder:

Not everybody in Westfield knows that her neighbor, Plainfield, possesses in her public library one of the finest canvasses inspired by our Civil War—Col. Julian Scott's "Death of Gen. Sedgwick," a piece eight by twelve feet dimensions. Col. Scott is not only one of the most modest but the most absent minded of men. (And absence of mind is, by the way, the power of intense presence of mind upon some one pursuit.) Sitting at a Clover Club dinner once when the late "Bill Nye" was speaking Col. Scott instinctively sketched the scene—the big billiard ball head and prominent eyeglasses of the speaker and the diners in various attitudes. Something like a year after, when Col. Scott received his copy of the Clover Club Year-Book, he found therein an engraving of the sketch, the lettering of the menu from Huitres to Entremets Sucrees distinctly readable beneath the picture.

CURED OF ASTHMA

AFTER 35 YEARS OF SUFFERING.

It will be gratifying to Asthmatic readers to learn that an absolute cure has at last been discovered by Dr. Rudolph Schiffmann. That the remedy is an effectual one cannot be doubted after perusal of such tesimony as that of C. W. Van Antwerp, Fulton, N. Y., who says:— "Your Asthma Cure is the best I ever used. I tried it according to directions, and one box entirely cured me of asthma, and I have not had it since. I can now go to bed and sleep all night with perfect comfort, which I have not done before for 35 years, and I thank you for the health that I now enjoy. I hope that you will publish this letter, that others may learn of its wonderful virtues."

Schiffmann's Asthma Cure is sold by all druggists at 50c. and $1.00 per package, or can be obtained by writing direct to Dr. R. Shiffmann, Box 804, St. Paul, Minn.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, Sept. 26—Rev. Frank Fletcher spent Saturday calling on Plainfield friends.

Mayor Brakeley's daughter lost an open-faced silver watch Friday morning on her way to school at the Plainfield Seminary. She had it while on the trolley car, but after getting off in Plainfield she looked for the watch and found it gone. A solid silver pin used to fasten the watch and chain, was also lost.

Many of the householders go to Plainfield to buy their groceries now that the trolley comes right up in town. This was noticed particularly Saturday night when a great many seemed to forget their local merchants, and went out of town after their Sunday dinners.

Mrs. P. C. Smith, of North avenue, entertained her Sunday-school class at her home Thursday afternoon from 2 o'clock until 7 o'clock. The young folks stayed to tea, and enjoyed a merry evening with games and music.

After 6 o'clock, when the trolley cars change from 12 to 15 minutes schedule, they are run as far as Taylor's Hotel, instead of being stopped in front of the station.

The Democratic primaries, to elect delegates to the State, county and Congressional conventions, will be held tonight in the Council chambers.

Mrs. Annie Abbott and Miss Helen Terry spent Saturday with Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Abbott, of Somerville.

Miss Mabel and Miss Ethel Jamison and Miss May Apgar visited the battleships in Brooklyn Saturday.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Westfield, Sept. 26.—The Bergen Point Tennis Club played the Westfield Tennis Club on the courts at the Westfield club Saturday afternoon until the rain compelled them to postpone the tournament. Three sets were played and resulted as follows: Seymore and Ayres, of Bayonne, beat Carberry and Whitehead by scores of 6 to 4, 6 to 2, and were defeated by the score of 6 to 3. Cottrel and Southard, of Bayonne, defeated Condit and Warneke by the scores of 6 to 3 and 6 to 2. Richardson and Knight, of Westfield, defeated Grant and Imbrey by a score of 6 to 3, and then as it had started to rain the other games were postponed. A supper was served in the clubhouse, after which dancing was indulged in until 12 o'clock.

It is expected that at the meeting of the Township Committee to be held Thursday evening the Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railroad Company will ask for a franchise on Mountain avenue to the borough line. The opposition which has been manifest against this line being built is rapidly dying away, and the people living along the proposed route are now anxious to have the road built.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular; free.

ORIGIN OF THE FLAG OF TRUCE.

White Samite of the Holy Grail Was Probably Its Inspiration.

An exchange of prisoners under a flag of truce, notably a press correspondent for a brother of General Weyler, brings to mind the origin of this custom. It is due to the church, and took its rise, as an institution, in the tenth or eleventh century. "La paix et la treve de Dieu" (The peace and the truce of God") was an agreement between the turbulent barons and the church, as severe injury and loss was most frequently the result of the private warfares which constantly raged. To protect itself somewhat, but more especially as the guardian of justice and the preservation of moral order, the church established a system which has exercised a beneficent influence down to this day.

The agreement stipulated a cessation of hostilities on certain festivals and saints' days, and from Saturday to Monday. The barons and warrior class pledged during the time of war to extend full protection to women, pilgrims, priests, monks, travellers, merchants, and agriculturalists; to abstain from the destruction or injury of farm implements, the burning of crops and the killing of live stock of the peasants. Penalties in violation of this agreement comprised money fines, bafflings, banishment and excommunication.

Originating in the south of France, this system was extended and adopted through the whole of France, Italy, Spain, Germany and England, and, in 1095 Pope Urban II. proclaimed its universal extension throughout Christendom.

The crown, in time, assumed this protective power and the phrase was changed to "La paix et la treve du Roi," or "The peace and truce of the king." The republics recognized the time-honored institution, and the simple unfolding of a white cloth will instantly cause a cessation of hostilities. The adoption of a white emblem appears to be lost in tradition, as authorities do not reveal it. Doubtless it is similar, or may have arisen through a belief in the white Samite which shielded the Holy Grail from the gaze of unbelievers. Emblematic of purity, associated with the mythical knights of the round table, and used in the crusades, it is probable that this sacred truce flag may have originated from the Samite of the Holy Grail.

Some of the conditions surrounding it at the present time are worthy of consideration, viz.: The admission of the flag of truce cannot be insisted upon; unnecessary frequency of presentation is avoided, owing to the possibility that an unfair advantage may be taken; if presented during an engagement firing is not required to cease nor, if the bearer be killed or wounded is there ground for complaint. The truce emblem can be retained, if admitted, during an engagement.

In naval combats the ensign is run up with the national flag of the enemy, and, indeed, upon the land as well. Penalities are incurred if the truce emblem be wrongfully used, the severest being the ignominious death of a spy.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

AFRAID OF THE GLASS EYE.

Japanese Coolies Would Not Serve the Owner of It.

A year or two ago an artist from San Francisco who wore a glass eye came to Yokohama and established himself in a little bungalow on the outskirts of the city.

The weather was extremely warm, and before the stranger had become settled he was besieged by a number of coolies who wanted to get the job of fanning him at night. The artist looked over the applicants and finally selected an old man who brought excellent recommendations from his last employer.

When it was time to retire the artist took out his glass eye, laid it on a stand at his bedside and went to bed. The old man picked up his fan and the San Francisco man was soon fast asleep. He slept peacefully for an hour or two when he was awakened by a chorus of buzzing insects about his head. He looked about him and found that the man whom he had hired to fan him had gone.

The next morning when he went in search of another coolie he was amazed to discover that no one would work for him. He was looked upon as a wizard and worker of miracles, with whom it was unsafe to be alone. The old man had gone among his friends and told how the Californian had taken out his eye at night and laid it on a stand in order that he might watch his servant at night and see that he kept his fan in motion. The old coolie's story created such excitement that the San Francisco man was never able to get another Japanese to fan him after that. —Yorkville Yeoman.

The Chinese Who Served with Dewey.

The Chinese servants ordinarily used for fetching and carrying were impressed into service, and showed courage and skill. They showed as much nerve as the Americans. They aided at the whips and in lifting and carrying the ammunition. Their faces were as impassive as when serving dinner in Hong Kong harbor. They chattered to each other in their own language, and laughed in their Celestial way when a shot, striking the foremast, shook the ship, caused the paint to scale off the mast a foot from us, and the angle lines which strengthen it inside to rattle loudly. 'Velly good," said one, and mechanically resumed his task.—Atlantic Monthly.

The Price for Inexperience.

Lady—But it seems to me you ask very high wages when you acknowledge that you haven't had much experience.

Bridget—Sure, marm, ain't it harder for me when I don't know how?

BATTLING WITH THE ELEMENTS.

The Fury of a June Storm About Key West and the Cuban Coast.

Will the Cuban question drag along until the summer which is the season of awful tempests in West Indian and Carribean waters? Obviously it ought to be settled before summer or the advent of the rainy season on land and the hurricanes on sea will render it impossible of settlement until fall. Throughout the summer months the risk of wreck in the northern part of the Carribean Sea is so great that the most powerful men-of-war are not proof against these sudden storms even while riding in harbor. In 1782 the Ville de Paris, the Centaur and the Ramilies foundered in a gale, and a whole fleet of West Indiamen was sunk in 1830, also while lying to in a hurricane. The wind suddenly shifted from west to east and blew equally heavy and every ship in harbor, says the London Nautical Magazine, "under a square course foundered with the loss of their various crews."

These southern storms which are generated under the equator move like the Gulf Stream in a northerly direction and come into collision with the archipelago of islands in the northern limit of the Carribean Sea. Of these islands the three or four largest, namely Cuba, San Domingo, Hayti and Porto Rico form a continual barrier opposed obliquely to the trade winds. And as a mass of moving atmosphere, coming from the north, also presses down upon the islands in its southwestern progress, the obstruction which the islands thus affords produces a constant tendency to atmospheric disturbance and a consequent eddying motion which sweeps along the coasts gathering rapidly increased powers of destruction as it proceeds.

Probably the most thrilling example of these Southern ocean disasters was that which occurred in the harbor of Apia, ten years ago. It was so terrible an event that it is said to have actually subdued a rebellion, and the natives certain that Heaven was angry with them were so awed by the storm of that year that no power on earth could again stir them to revolt.

In 1888 there were complications between Great Britain, Germany and the United States in Samoa. A native Chief Tamasese, was the Kaiser's favorite for the crown and the German gunboats Eber and Adler were sent to Apia in his behalf. England sent the Calliope and the United States despatched the Trenton and four other war vessels in order to check the Kaiser and to maintain order.

One evening these various war vessels were all lying at anchor as proudly as Sennacherib's host in the harbor of Apia, awaiting hostilities on shore. Without much warning one of these fierce gales struck the harbor, and in less time than it takes to say "Cock Robin," the attention of the seamen was suddenly diverted from the doings of Tomasese and his fellow conspirators; hatches were battered down, topsails reefed; the upper spars were girt; great guns were securely fastened in their places; additional anchors dropped and ample cables played out to allow the ships to heave to and fro in a heavy sea. The various captains were thundering orders to their crews and the latter were rushing madly to their posts of duty, when suddenly the cables dragged and the immense war vessels were pitching hither and thither like chips in whirlpool while the terrified and crazed natives looked on in amazement, believing as they did in their superstitious Samoan way that the Angel of Death spread his wings on the blast. After a short but brave battle against a terrific wind and a high rolling sea the German gunboat Eber went down, sending a last puff of white smoke into the air as the waters quenched the fires of her boilers below. Seventy-five brave seamen went down with her, four of their bodies being sometime later washed on the shore. The crew of the Nipsic, seeing their ship now dragging anchor before the storm detached a Krupp gun from the gun carriage and fastening it to an eight-inch hawser, swung it as an additional anchor into the sea. While doing this the Nipsic was rammed by the Olga losing two of her boats in addition to other injuries and her smoke pipe. With her smoke pipe gone steam was impossible to be kept up so the Nipsic was beached upon the sands and in an attempt to lower one of her remaining boats some of the crew were thrown out and drowned; others with great difficulty, and by sliding to shore on life lines were saved in quite a miraculous way. In less than five minutes the Alder drifted broadside on the reef where her sister ship had foundered. In another moment she was lifted bodily out of the sea on the crest of a gigantic wave and later pitched over on her side, drowning twenty of her crew. While this distressing series of incidents was happening in one part of the harbor, the Vandalia of the American squadron was in another place running before the storm into the British ship Calliope. She was beached with great difficulty, many of her crew meantime dropping into the surging angry sea. In the last effort her brave captain was knocked down by a machine gun that had broken loose, rolling over him on deck and killing him outright. His body was washed off and he sank in a moment. Next morning when the muster roll on the Vandalia was had no bird can safely fly through, surpass in their horrible and lonely desolation those inhabitable regions which Mr. Fronde in his "Oceana" has marked for such marvellous achievements of the human race.

Württemberg.

Stuttgart. Dem württembergischen Gustav Adolf-Verein hat der verstorbene Apotheker Hayer sein ganzes Vermögen, 300,000 Mark, vermacht. Das Kapital muß als Stiftung vewaltet werden, deren jährliche Zinsen (12,000 Mark) zur Unterstützung evangelischer Diasporagemeinden beim Bau ihrer Gotteshäuser verwendet werden.—Die Deutsche Verlagsanstalt feierte am 1. September ihr 50jähriges Jubiläum. Am 1. September 1848 gründete Eduard Hallberger das Verlagsgeschäft, aus dem am 1. Juli 1881 die jetzige Aktiengesellschaft hervorging. Hallberger starb bekanntlich vor der Gründung der Aktiengesellschaft, die er testamentarisch anordnete, im August 1880.

Alpirsbach. Kürzlich beging die hiesige Gemeinde das 800jährige Jubiläum der Einweihung der prächtigen romanischen ehemaligen Klosterkirche. Das frühere Benediktinerkloster Alpirsbach ist die älteste Stiftung der Hohenzollern, indem Graf Adalbert von Zollern in Verbindung mit zwei anderen Edlen das Kloster 1095 stiftete. Damals ward der Bau der Kirche begonnen und diese 1098 am 29. August im Beisein der Stifter durch den Bischof Gebhard von Konstanz eingeweiht. Graf Adalbert trat selbst in das von ihm gestiftete Kloster als Mönch ein und fand in der Klosterkirche seine letzte Ruhestätte.

Ellwangen. Der vom hiesigen Schwurgericht wegen Mordes zum Tode verurtheilte Wirth Georg Joas ist vom König zu lebenslänglicher Zuchthausstrafe begnadigt worden.

Heilbronn. Der Postsekretär Wilhelm Rall von hier, ein „eingefleischter" Vegetarianer und Impfgegner, war vom Schöffengericht Heilbronn wegen zweier Verfehlungen gegen das Impfgesetz zu einer Geldstrafe von 10 Mark verurtheilt worden. Rall, der wegen Impfweigerung schon zwei Mal bestraft ist, legte Berufung ein, indem er sich auf eine Entscheidung des Oberlandesgerichts in Frankfurt berief, wonach eine mehrmalige Bestrafung eines Impfgegners nicht zulässig sei. Die Strafkammer Heilbronn schloß sich jedoch der Auffassung des Oberlandesgerichts in Stuttgart an, das die Berechtigung der Bestrafung einer jeden neuen Verfehlung anerkennt; es verwarf somit die Berufung.

Teinach. Eine standesamtliche Eheschließung mußte hier wiederholt werden. Der Vater des Bräutigams hatte seinerzeit als Schultheiß seinen Stellvertreter beauftragt, die standesamtliche Ehe seines Sohnes zu schließen. Da aber dieser stellvertretende Gemeinderath nicht als Standesbeamter vereidigt war, wurde bei einer Durchsicht der Akten die Eheschließung vom Gericht als nichtig erklärt. Das Ehepaar hatte schon drei Jahre glücklich zusammengelebt, und so ließ es sich gern zum zweiten Mal im „Kästle" aushängen und nunmehr die giltige Eheschließung vornehmen.

Dezember 1896 errichteten Stiftung im Betrage von 20,000 Mark, deren Erträgnisse zur sofortigen Unterstützung hilfsbedürftiger, in der Behandlung eines Stadtarztes stehender Kranken verwendet werden, eine Zustiftung von weiteren 20,000 Mark gemacht.

Pforzheim. Neulich Abends vor Dunkelwerden stürzte sich ein etwa elfjähriges Mädchen, Anna Göhringer, das bei zwei daselbst wohnenden Näherinnen kleine Dienstleistungen verrichtete, vom zweiten Stock des Hauses Bleichstraße 15 herunter und erlitt dabei einen Schädelbruch, an dem es noch in der folgenden Nacht starb. Wie die Untersuchung ergab, haben die beiden Näherinnen, Geschwister Jost, das Mädchen des Diebstahls bezichtigt; als es nicht gestehen wollte, schlossen sie es in einem Zimmer ein und drohten ihm mit der Polizei. Aus Furcht davor verübte das Kind Selbstmord.

Mannheim. Binnen kurzer Zeit sind zwei als Virtuosen geschätzte Mitglieder des Mannheimer Hoftheaterorchesters in Folge von Ueberanstrengung geisteskrank geworden. Der ausgezeichnete Cellist Albert Hartmann starb vor Kurzem in Bensheim und der bekannte Pistonvirtuose Traugott Ast wurde dieser Tage im hiesigen Allgemeinen Krankenhause durch den Tod von seinem umnachteten Dasein erlöst.

Well, Mr. Merchant-who-thinks-of-advertising, this is only one of the many corners in THE DAILY PRESS—it isn't the best located one, either; we can give you better—and if this attracts your attention in our endeavor to tell you how good advertising will get you a hearing before the purchasing public, doesn't common sense teach you that if you were having people reading your trade story instead of you're reading our argument about it, that it would be better for your business.

Chapter XXV.

"Roydon, dear, I have an invitation for you," said Lady Garth, as she came down-stairs on the third morning after the Baronet's proposal to his cousin, and found him strolling aimlessly around the garden with his hands in his pockets, his face full of dejection.

"Mother mine," he said, without interest, "I do not want to go anywhere."

"But you must think of your health, Roydon," said his mother, with a sigh. "I am sure you will not get strong again while you stay here meeting Evangeline every day!"

Lady Garth shook her head.

"It is very brave of you, my dear Roydon, to make light of your disappointment, and very considerate towards your cousin, who would be much disturbed, I am sure, if she knew how deeply you feel her rejection. But if Evangeline is deceived, I am not; and since she seems quite determined upon this mad marriage with a pauper——"

"Mother!" Roy cried warningly, and her ladyship waved her hand.

"Well, with Mr. Damian, then. I am sure that it must be very hard for you to be constantly meeting her and thinking of your disappointment! I am surprised that Evangeline herself has not seen the advisability of going away for a little while. She had an invitation to go to Switzerland with the Ponsonbys. Since she has chosen to remain in the house, I have secured an invitation for you to spend a few weeks at Westwood. Lady Bettaby says that she will soon nurse you back to health, with the aid of the moor air and cheerful society. I told her, of course, of your illness, but not of the cause. I am afraid she would think badly of Evangeline if I did."

With her usual readiness to believe only what she wished, her ladyship had chosen to ignore the share that Lilac had had in causing the illness, and in some ingenious manner managed to ascribe it all to Evangeline's unkindness and infatuation for the penniless Eric Damian.

"Lady Bettaby expects you to-morrow," she went on. "She has enclosed a note for you. You will go, won't you, Roydon, dear? You will start to-morrow?"

"Very well, mother, if you wish it." The young Baronet was too passively indifferent to give much consideration to the question. One place was as good as another, since in none could he see Lilac, and he was quite willing to let his mother arrange what he should do.

"You might wire to Lady Bettaby, then," said Lady Garth, with a sigh of relief at his ready acquiescence; for she was anxious about his health, and hoped that among the young and pretty women that were generally to be met with at Westwood Roy might find it easier to forget his disappointment.

"Tell her that you will arrive by the noon train. It is a very good one, and you will not need to leave here till nine."

The Baronet wrote out the telegram obediently, and made his preparations in the mechanical way in which he had done everything since his illness.

In the morning he came down to breakfast ready dressed for his journey, and found Evangeline waiting to pour out his coffee for him. As usual, Lady Garth was breakfasting in her own room.

"Well, Evie, have you had an answer yet to your telegram?" he said, after they had exchanged their customary cousinly morning kiss. "I am afraid it will take some time because of the journey from Blinkville." His cousin's love-story was the only subject in which he showed any interest, and he had tried to relieve her anxiety in the same way each morning since her message had been despatched.

On this morning the encouragement was not needed.

"The answer has just come," said Evangeline.

"Indeed! I did not hear the telegraph boy. Well, Evie?"

"He is coming."

"I am glad of that. I thought he would."

"Oh, Roy, I do wish that you were as happy as I am!" said Evangeline, inconsequently; and then, as though the thought of his happiness had suggested the question, she asked, "You will spend all your time at Westwood, won't you? I mean—you will not go elsewhere without letting us know?" Roy raised his eyebrows in surprise at the earnestness with which his cousin asked the question.

"I have the post-card ready written in my pocket, if you would like to see it."

Evangeline took it with a smile and read the message, in which he informed his mother that he had arrived safely, and that Lady Bettaby had met him at the station.

"You naughty boy!" she said, laughing. "How do you know that your news will be true?"

"Because her ladyship is such a motherly soul, and my mother has been persuading her that I am a pitiable invalid."

But the prophecy, though reasonable, was not destined to be fulfilled. When Evangeline saw the post-card again the next morning, the sentence had been crossed out, and in its place Sir Roy had written—

"The Emmotts are staying here, and Sabina drove down in the dog-cart to meet me."

CHAPTER XXVI.

In spite of her anxiety to find out what had really become of Lilac, it took Evangeline more than a week to discover that the Californian girl was staying with the author's mother, and that the old lady resided in Liverpool. Meanwhile she had said nothing of her suspicion to Roy, for fear of raising false hopes in his heart. She would see Lilac, she told herself, and ascertain whether she had really sacrificed her own happiness in the mistaken idea that it would help Evangeline to gain hers; and then, if her suspicion proved true, as she felt that it must, she would send Roy to her, and the lovers would be happy once more.

Nine days after Lilac's unfortunate visit to the Hall she was in her room burning the few letters that she had received from Roy, when Mrs. Mowbray tapped at the door.

"A lady has called to see you, dear. She is waiting down-stairs."

"A lady to see me?" echoed the girl, rather listlessly. Not Miss Emmott, surely?"

"No, dear. She gives her name as 'Miss Garth,' so I suppose that she is Sir Roydon's cousin."

Lilac flushed and rose at once.

"I do not think that it can be. Evangeline would not come to see me."

She moved to the door as she spoke, when Mrs. Mowbray laid her hand upon her arm, saying pleadingly—

"Lilac, dear, if she has come to tell you that anything has altered or has not been quite as you thought, you will not let it ruin Mark's happiness now, will you, dear? Perhaps it is selfish for me to ask it, but it would break my poor boy's heart, I am sure, if any change came now."

"You need not be afraid, dear Mrs. Mowbray," said Lilac hopelessly—nothing can happen to make a change now;" and she walked slowly downstairs, wondering what could possibly have brought Evangeline to see her.

She found the heiress waiting for her in the drawing-room, and Evangeline rose instantly with outstretched hands.

"Why, Lilac, how thin and pale you have grown!" she said, and bent forward to kiss her.

Lilac was trying hard not to cry. It would not do to let her know how hard the sacrifice had been. She wished that the heiress had been cold and scornful, as on the day when she left Delverton Hall with the avowed intention of marrying Mowbray. Her kinder mood made it so much harder for Lilac to prevent herself from giving way to tears. But she resisted the inclination, and remained outwardly calm and composed.

"I am quite well," she said, with a hopelessness in her tone that brought tears into Evangeline's sympatehtic eyes. "It is very good of you to come and see me. It was hard to think that I had made you my enemy when I was so fond of you, Evangeline, and you had been so kind to me."

"We will not talk about that wretched scene," said Evangeline." I thought I had good cause to be indignant with you and to think badly of you, and I have just begun to perceive that I may have made a very serious mistake, and that I ought to have known you better than to believe that you would enjoy our hospitality and friendship when you were in love with somebody else all the time, and never meant to marry Roy. I ought to have known that you were incapable of such a thing; but you made it very hard for me to understand, dear. However, before I repent in sackcloth and ashes, as I feel inclined to do, I want to catechise you, dear."

"Yes?" said Lilac, meekly preparing herself for some sharp questioning.

The interrogatories were harder than she expected, however, and she stared in surprise when Evangeline asked her first question.

"Now tell me, dear—which do you care for most, this Mr. Mowbray or Roy?"

Lilac started to her feet, her face flushed with indignation.

"How dare you ask me a question like that?" she demanded; and Evangeline smiled cheerfully, for Lilac's indignation strengthened her belief in the theory she had formed with respect to her flight from the Hall.

"Well, perhaps it is not quite fair to ask you that until I have given you a little news. I came here to tell you something that will really interest you, I know, after the interest you took in my love-story."

"I think I know what it is," said Lilac, almost in a whisper.

Evangeline did not appear to notice the interruption.

"You remember," she went on cheerfully, "on that night when you found me crying in my room, I told you there was somebody I cared for that I ought not to care for, because I had given my love unasked to somebody who did not care for me, and I would not tell you his name because I was so ashamed—you remember, dear?"

Lilac nodded.

"Well, I could not tell you the name then," Evangeline went on; "but I can now, because it was a mistake. He did care for me after all."

"I know," said Lilac simply, wondering that Evangeline could be so cruel as to come to her for sympathy in her happiness, so blind as not to see that it had been gained at the cost of her own broken heart.

"I do not think that you do know," went on Evangeline, all her suspicions verified by the girl's attitude. "That is why I have come to tell you his name. It is Eric Damian."

With a troubled look Lilac passed her hand across her forehead.

"I do not understand you—I am afraid I am stupid," she said dreamily. "You say that you once cared for somebody called 'Eric Damian?'"

"I care for him still with my whole heart," said Evangeline energetically, "and I am looking forward to becoming his wife!"

"But you have promised to marry—Roy!" Her voice faltered over the name.

"Indeed I have not! When he thought he had lost you, the foolish boy, simply to make me happy, was absurd enough to ask me to accept him, and I discovered what a mistake you had made when he showed me your letter."

"But you kissed him!" Lilac could not believe her ears.

"Yes—for bringing me news of Eric. How did you know?"

Lilac did not answer. She was murmuring, in strange dull tones that chilled Evangeline—

"And Lady Garth did not tell me—Lady Garth did not tell me!"

The heiress put her arms around her.

"Don't, Lilac—don't! It is not too late to set things straight. Roy is breaking his heart for you. If you love him——"

Lilac interrupted her with sudden fierceness.

"It is too late! I have promised to marry Mark to-morrow, and I cannot go back from my word!"

CHAPTER XVII.

When Sabina Emmott persuaded her father that his health would suffer if he did not accept an invitation from Lady Bettaby to spend a few weeks at her hospitable country-house, on the moors she did not do so in the expectation that she would meet Sir Roydon Garth, any more than she did it out of regard for the Major's health, which was excellent. She had almost dismissed the hope of following up her manoeuvering on board the Gemini on account of the difficulty in finding out how her plot against Lilac had progressed.

The Major's daughter was undoubtedly as fond of the handsome young Baronet as she could be of anybody but herself; and she coveted the title of "Lady Garth;" but Miss Sabina was far too sensible to lose any opportunity of making a good match through mere personal preferences, and she jumped at the chance of visiting Westwood, which had become quite famous for the number of matches made there. Lady Bettaby, a good looking widow of forty, with no children of her own to look after, had a perfect mania for match-making, and Sabina counted upon meeting at her house at least one eligible man, whom her ladyship would perhaps do her best to coerce into falling in love with her.

Sabina, who made a point of devoting herself to her father when she had no other claim upon her time, was reading aloud to him a dull newspaper article on Army matters when Sir Roydon's letter arrived, and, as Lady Bettaby looked up from its perusal and glanced out of the window, she caught sight of father and daughter seated in a couple of wicker chairs under a giant cedar on the lawn.

"What a devoted daughter dear Sabina is!" she said to her cousin, the Honourable Newton Dene, with whom she had been chatting when the telegram arrived.

Newton Dene, being a confirmed bachelor of fifty, without means, had failed in every way to attract Miss Emmott, and was able therefore to criticise her freely.

"Don't you think that she makes a little too much parade of her devotion, Decima?" he said, in his soft spiritless tones.

Her ladyship shrugged her shoulders: It was a gesture that she had learned abroad and executed excellently, as she knew.

"I wonder if Sabina has ever met the Baronet!" she went on. "I must go and ask her."

"And lay your first mine two minutes after the poor invalid has claimed your protection! I shall make a mem. in my note-book never to come here when I am ill and unable to defend myself."

Her ladyship was already out in the sunny garden. As she approached the couple under the cedar, Major Emmott sprang up and offerd her his chair. Lady Bettaby shook her head.

"I have come only for a moment to appeal to your good nature," she said—"yours especially, Sabina."

Miss Emmott turned her head and glanced up at her ladyship with her bright little eyes.

"Anything that I can do for you, dear Lady Bettaby, will delight me," she said; and her ladyship shrugged her shoulders.

"But this is to be kind to a poor invalid I have coming—an old friend of mine who is just recovering from a short but serious illness and wants brightening up. You would certainly succeed in doing it, Sabina dear, if you were willing to help me."

The prospect did not sound inviting, so the girl said diplomatically—

"I shall be delighted, if we are still here when your friend comes. But papa was wondering whether we ought to trespass upon your kindness any longer. We have been here three weeks already. When does this lady you speak of arrive?"

"It is not a lady," corrected her ladyship quickly, giving the information which Sabina had been anxious to obtain. "And you must not talk about leaving us yet, Major Emmott," she went on, turning to the old soldier, who had not thought of doing so—"just, too, when I need dear Sabina's services and yours! Sir Roydon Garth has had some serious disappointment, I believe, which has affected his health, and I have sent for him to cheer him up a little. Lady Garth is very anxious about him."

"Oh, Garth and I are old friends!" said the Major; then he glanced at his daughter. "But I do not know whether Sir Roydon will like to see us, dear."

"Sir Roydon always seemed pleased with your society, papa," answered the girl, demurely; "I think that you will be able to keep him interested."

The absence on his daughter's part, of any apparent personal interest in the Baronet's visit suddenly reminded the old soldier of the avowal she had made when he informed her of Sir Roydon's engagement to the Californian girl whom the Baronet had confided to his care. He waited until their hostess had left them; then he twirled his fierce military moustache.

"I am afraid, Sabina, that you do not care for Garth," he said rather nervously; "I hope, however, that you will try to feel as favourably disposed towards him as you can. Although I have never let you guess the fact, I have always looked upon Garth as the man I should choose for you to marry."

"But, papa, Sir Roydon would never think of marrying me," said Sabina, with demure modesty; and the Major glanced at her proudly.

"I do not know, Sabina. You are in all respects worthy of him; and now that he has found how mistaken he was in that Miss Marvel, I have no doubt he will be in a mood to appreciate goodness and nobility of character at their true value. You will treat him kindly?"

"For your sake—yes, papa. Do you think it would look kind if I drove down to the station to meet him when he arrives to-morrow?" she asked innocently.

When Miss Emmott was alone in her own room that night, she looked at herself in the glass and smiled at the reflection.

"Fate is playing into your hands, Sabina, dear," she said. "You shall marry Sir Roydon Garth, Baronet!"

The next morning she dressed with more than ordinary care, choosing a delicate arrangement of green, with a neat little driving-hat to match, and set out in the dog-cart for the station, rejoicing over the fact that she had won her father's permission to a course that in any other circumstances he would have condemned. Sabina drove smartly, and she knew that she never looked so well as when managing a horse.

When Roy, in accordance with Lady Garth's arrangement, arrived at Westwood station at noon, looking thin, careworn, and dejected, he glanced round in vain for Lady Bettaby's kindly face on the platform. The Major's daughter, with due regard for the value of first impressions, had come down without a groom, and was holding in the spirited mare outside the station.

"Anybody to meet me from Lady Bettaby's?" the Baronet asked of the man who was looking after his luggage.

The man touched his hat.

"Yes, sir—young lady in a dog-cart."

Roy wondered who on earth it could be.—

"I suppose you will have your trunk sent up, sir?" said the man.

"Yes, please."

Roy walked out of the station with some little curiosity, in spite of his apathy, as to who the young lady could be, and a flood of bitter memories came back at the sight of the small neat figure perched on the high dog-cart, and holding the reins with firm neatly-gloved little hands.

Sabina was right in thinking that her unexpected appearance would make an impression; but it was not the impression she had counted upon. As Roy glanced at her, the scene came back to him of his parting from Lilac in the "Golden Hotel" at San Francisco, and he did not even notice the green costume which had been put on for his special delectation; for his thoughts were with a sweet-faced girl in a blue cotton dress, who had looked up into his face as he clasped her in his arms and made him think that she loved him.

Miss Emmott was chagrined at the absolute indifference with which Roy accepted the fact of her presence, and she whipped the mare viciously as soon as the Baronet had taken his seat by her side.

The Baronet did not seem inclined to start conversation on his own account, and Sabina felt that she must nerve herself for an effort, so in as sympathetic a voice as possible she said abruptly—

"I am so sorry about your trouble, Sir Roydon!"

"My trouble?" questioned the young man; and his tone did not encourage Miss Emmott to think that her sympathy would be appreciated. But she kept on valiantly.

"Your disappointment with regard to Miss Marvel."

"Has Lady Bettaby told you about it?" he asked. And Sabina shook her head with a very vigorus and birdlike movement.

"No. I do not think that her ladyship knows. The voyage revealed to me that Miss Marvel did not really care for you, and your illness explains the rest. I know that you do not like me to speak of it; but I cannot help telling you how sorry I feel. I cannot understand how she could like Mr. Mowbray better than you. He was such an insignificant-looking man, while you are"—she paused for a moment, then added—"so different!"—as if she had been going to say something else.

The Baronet's silence did not encourage her to proceed; and as she neared the house Sabina changed the subject by talking about her father and the pleasure that he would feel at meeting Sir Roydon again. She was not sorry when the journey was over.

"It is very hard," she said to herself, as she was changing her dress for luncheon. "A man who suffers in silence is rather difficult to deal with; and I wish I knew what has really become of Lilac. Surely she cannot have married Mowbray, after all!"

AN IRISHMAN'S FATE IN SPAIN.

Strange Story of a Brave O'Donnell Who Met Death Bravely.

In the early part of this century three brothers named O'Donnell left their native country—Ireland of course—and went to live in Spain, where they all had extraordinary careers; one died in 1867, after he had become the Duke of Tetuan, though he was better known as General O'Donnell; he was one of the most brilliant military men of his time. The youngest brother was cut off in his youth, but nothing in the lives of the others is so strange and touching as his death.

In 1822 there was a war in Spain regarding the succession to the throne, and young O'Donnell declared himself for Isabella, who was, indeed, soon proclaimed queen; but before that time O'Donnell fell a prisoner to General Zumalacarrequy, a leader of the Carlist forces. The young Irishman looked upon this as almost a piece of good luck, for the Carlist leader was an old schoolmate of his. The two friends celebrated this meeting after a separation of years as a festive occasion, and as they ate supper otgether and drank toasts to old times, Zumalacarrequy said:

"Your captivity will be brief, my friend. I am just about to send off a flag of truce to your general to negotiate an exchange of prisoners, so that you may expect to be free to-morrow."

The flag of truce was, indeed, sent, but the result was terribly unexpected. The general of the Christianos (that was the name given to Isabella's party) answered the Carlist envoy by saying:

"I will show you how I treat rebels," and forthwith he had all his Carlist prisoners brought out and shot down before the eyes of the Christians, and the officer had no better news than the story of their death to take back to his chief

The next morning Zumalcarrequy came into his tent, where his prisoner was breakfasting, wearing an unhappy expression. He sat down in silence.

"What is the matter?" asked O'Donnell. "Have you slept badly, or was your chocolate burnt?"

"I am immensely disturbed," was the answer, and he told how the Carlist prisoners had been shot, and added: "I must make reprisals. My friend, in one hour's time you must be shot, no matter how I feel about it."

O'Donnell set down his cup, after finishing his chocolate, and said: "Yes, that is a matter of course; you must not distress yourself about it; I would act in the same way myself. Now give me a couple of cigarettes and writing material, for I must write a letter, which I will trouble you to take care of after my execution."

As he was finishing the letter the guard came to take out the prisoners. O'Donnell got up at once, shook hands with the man who was both his friend and his enemy, lit another cigarette and walked out to be shot.

GOLF.

Next Saturday the Harbor Hill Golf Club, of West New Brighton, will play a match with the Hillside team in this city.

Despite the disagreeable weather last Saturday afternoon there were a number of golf enthusiasts on the links of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club. Late in the afternoon it began to rain and this caused the players to seek shelter in the club house, where a social time and dinner was enjoyed. The two features of the day was the monthly handicap and the play for the Mrs. Fisk cup. Considerable interest was taken in these events and a number of good scores were made. In the monthly handicap contest the following scores were recorded: C. W. Abbott 86, A. R. Fisk 81, G. H. Ryder 104, H. V. Ryder 102, J. H. P. Wharton 82, Clifford Wharton, Jr. 97. In the contest for the Mrs. Fisk cup the scores made are as follows: C. W. Abbott 86, C. F. Walz, A. W. Fish 97, W. F. Murray 111, A. R. Fisk 81, G. H. Ryder 104, H. V. Ryder 102, J. H. P. Wharton 82, Clifford Wharton 97, J. W. Sandford 103, H. C. Tracy 97. During the afternoon there were a number of the fair sex present and an informal tea was given which was greatly enjoyed by those who participated. Next Saturday afternoon a match game will be played on the links with the Harbor Hill team of West New Brighton.

SATURDAY'S RACE MEET.

Ray Dawson and Milton Brown were thought to have the second heat for a surety, but George Voorhees and Gabriel from New Brunswick were too strong a combination. Both teams held back until the last lap when they ranged up side by side. It was nip and tuck until they rounded the last turn when the Brunswick team opened up half-a-dozen lengths between them, and the crack riders were successively passed by the Pierce Wheelmen team and Mooney and his mate who won the coveted places.

The hottest race of the day was the final of the tandem. Dodd and Richter took the lead again while Voorhees and Gabriel watched them carefully. The Brunswick boys came down the stretch like a whirlwind and won by a length from the Pierce team while the Plainfield combination took third by half a length.

HURTS LEGITIMATE BUSINESS.

Complaint Made About the Existence of Night Lunch Wagons.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—

I noticed in your issue of recent date that there is going to be another lunch wagon. I would like to know what is the use of a man hiring a store and paying rent of say $30, $40 or $50 a month to build up a lunch business when a man comes along and gets a license for $25 a year and takes a whole lot of his business and stands his wagon on the public streets when the license ordinance says plainly that a peddler shall not stand over ten minutes in any one place.

If these people want to go into the lunch business so bad, why not hire a store as we do. He then would be on an equal footing with us all There are plenty of stores vacant.

In the first place there is no need here for any lunch wagon. Stores are open here where lunch can be procured at the same price that they charge and are open until 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning. If the license for this other wagon is granted, why not all of us get wagons and shut up our stores.

All I ask is fair play.

THE BRIDGEPORT MYSTERY.

Conclusive Evidence that Dr. Nancy Guilford is the Guilty Party.

Bridgeport, Ct., Sept. 26.—According to Police Superintendent Birmingham, there is hardly a link missing in the chain of evidence that is being gradually forged connecting Dr. Nancy Guilford with the dismemberment of the body of Emma Gill, who lived at Southington, Conn.

Witnesses have been found who have partially identified Harry Guilford, the son of Dr. Nancy Guilford, as being near the Bishop avenue quarry on the Sunday night that the body was thrown into the Yellow Mill pond.

The route Mrs. Guilford and her son took the first time they left the Gilbert street house, presumably with the mutilated body of Emma Gill, is known but the route taken the second time, when the trunk was thrown into the river, is yet to be learned. The police have practically traced out the second route. They have, they say, found the carriage that was used to carry the body to the Yellow Mill pond.

The Gilbert street house will be entered to-day and the bath tub examined. A bad odor has been coming from it recently and the police have no doubt that the body was cut up in it. Fragments of a heel from a woman's shoe, the metal skeleton of a lady's pocketbook and some corset steels were found in the furnace. The fire had not entirely consumed them.

Walter C. Foster was discharged from custody. Howard Guernsey was released on furnishing a bond of $500, and Harry Guilford, Rosa and Clara Bell Drayton, servants in Dr. Guilford's house, were all held in $1,500 bail for an examination on October 1.

Harry Oxley was also held in the same amount. Superintendent Birmingham says that he sent Emma Gill to Dr. Guilford's for treatment and provided the money.

A BRIDAL EPISODE.

The Artistic Effect Not Appreciated by the Prespiring Bearers.

At a recent fashionable wedding not a thousand miles from Chicago some very picturesque features prevailed. Bowers and flowery terraces decked the grounds of the handsome residence of the bride's father, yachts with gay pennants flying were anchored at the foot of the garden, flower girls and chorus girls led the way to the little neighborhood church, singing and strewing roses in the path of the lovely bride, and all was as delightfully decorative as high Chicago society art could make it. Along the flower-strewn way the bride slowly advanced, carried on a sedan chair by four stately bearers—her brothers and cousins. These wore tall silk hats, by the way, but that is merely the usual touch of Chicago improvement on old French styles. At intervals—it was a warm September morning—the four bearers set down their lovely burden—so the story goes—and mopped the moist brows under the tall silk hats. On they moved until again warm and weary. Finally—it is told the brother of the bride leaned to the window of the sedan chair and expostulated:

"Bertha," he said, "for heaven's sake, kick the bottom out and walk; it'll look just the same."—Detroit Free Press.

NEW DEPARTURE IN GLASS-MAKING

Machine for Blowing Hollow Articles Instead of Air from a Man's Lungs.

Molten glass has long been molded into a great variety of ware, but the blowpipe driven by air from a man's lungs has been deemed indispensable for shaping jars and other hollow articles, as well as window glass. A great invention bids fair to deprive the glass-blower of his vocation, just as many time-honored craftsmen in the iron trade have found their occupations gone. The first use of the new glassmaking machines is in the manufacture of fruit jars at Muncie, Indiana. One blowing machine is said to do away with the services of three men, and it is estimated that the same product can be turned out with only two-thirds as many workmen employed. The introduction of these machines in glassmaking is regarded as fully as revolutionary in that trade as was the introduction of the Bessemer converter and the open hearth furnace in the iron trade, or the typesetting machine self-binding harvester, etc., in their respective fields.—Railway Review.

STRANGE MONEY IN THE MOUNTAINS

Trading Done in Skins Which a Buyer Collects Four Times a Year.

"The strangest money I ever saw," said a drummer for a Main street house the other evening, "was in the mountain districts of Kentucky and West Virginia. Last summer I was making my semi-annual tour through this district and I stopped one day at a little grocery and saloon, not to sell goods, but to get a drink of the 'mountain dew.' While I was pouring out my drink a big husky mountaineer entered the place and called for a drink. As he finished gulping it down he reached into a big bulky pocket and drew forth what looked to be a coon skin. He laid the skin on the counter, the barkeeper took the skin and opening a drawer, hauled out a rabbit skin, which I suppose was the change. The mountaineer picked up the rabbit skin and started to the front part of the store, which was the grocery. He there bought a twist of tobacco and tendered the rabbit skin in payment. He received a big twist of long green, and I was surprised to see the storekeeper reach in another drawer and tender him a squirrel skin. The mountaineer tucked the squirrel skin in his pocket, walked out, unhitched his horse and rode away.

"I became interested and engaged the proprietor in conversation. He told me that sometimes he would go months without seeing any real money and that the mountaineers used the skins in all kinds of trades, such as buying horses, etc. He said that four times a year a hide buyer from Lexington or Cincinnati visited the country and bought up all the skins, which were generally concentrated in the few stores in the vicinity."—Louisville Dispatch.

SAWDUST EXPLOSIONS.

Legislation to Stop Lumbermen from Filling up the Ottawa River.

Who ever heard of sawdust explosions? They are common enough in Canada. Navigation on the Ottawa river has been seriously impeded at times by the explosion of sawdust, and the Dominion Government has at last decided to take steps to prevent any practice which will enhance the possibility of these explosions taking place. One would hardly suppose that sawdust dumped into the river would in course of time reform itself into a gas generator which would keep the surface of the stream in a constant state of upheaval. But it is true to such an extent that small boats have been injured by the submarine convulsions.

The bottom of the Ottawa River is covered with a deep layer of sawdust dumped there by the lumbermen, who have carried on their log-cutting industry on its banks and tributaries for years. The dust, becoming water soaked, sinks to the bottom, and in the course of time rots and generates a highly explosive gas. The latter rises to the surface, each bubble being joined or reinforced by other bubbles on the way up. Contact with air seems to be as destrictive as touch-fire to this gas, and the moment the surface is reached it explodes with a loud report. Legislation may in time do away with the annoyance, but even if no more sawdust is thrown into the stream henceforth, the millions of tons already there will take a long time ot work off their gas-generating qualities.—Washington Star.

PITIFUL CAUSES OF CHEAP BIBLES.

The Spread of the Gospel Accomplished by Starvation Wages.

Why are Bibles so cheap? The labor question seems to enter into consideration of the subject. The printing of the Sacred Word is subject to precisely the same laws of supply and demand as the printing of the strip of calico. Some one asks: "Is it not the zenith of inconsistency to find clergymen in their anxiety to have cheap religious books encourage the manufacture of Bibles by inadequately paid labor?" The trouble seems to be that in binding women do the work in Scotland at from 4 to 10 shillings a week, whereas in London the men can barely live when doing the same work at 32 shillings. There does, indeed, seem to be something pitiful when a family of Bible binders may be starving on 4 to 10 shillings a week. The general secretary of the English Bookbinders' Society in an appeal to the public writes: "Before lauding the cheapest Bibles, the officials of Bible societies should make sure that they have been produced by labor for which fair and proper wages have been paid."—New York Times.

A Valuable Find.

A citizen of Kharhoff, Russia, recently purchased a statue of Apollo Belvidere, which one of his children soon afterward overturned and broke. Out of its hollow interior rolled a little bundle, which, on being opened, was found to contain Russian banknotes to the value of three thousand rubles, together with a declaration by one Chevalier, Irionun Prokheroff, to the effect that the money contained in the handkerchief was the proceeds of his gambling transactions, and was designed to build a church. The slip bore a date in the year 1840. It is supposed, therefore, that the owner died suddenly, and thus was unable to carry out his pious design.—New York Tribune.

Warm Affection.

"Do you love me so very much?" she cooed.

"Love you!" said the manly young fellow. "Why, every time I try to write a letter to you the ink in my fountain pen boils."

"Well, you're a beauty, you are!" Jones—Shorry I (hic) can't return the compliment.—Pick-Me-Up.

Rainbow Colors Didn't Match.

A woman told a story the other day of those bygone times when everything in a woman's costume must match, "especially in children's clothes," said the woman. "Sash, stockings, neck ribbon, hair ribbon—all were required to be of not only the same color but the same shade. I was very particular in this respect, and my little daughter was naturally imbued with the same faith. One day when we were visiting in the country a shower came up which, clearing away as suddenly as it had come, left a beautiful rainbow behind it. 'Come quick,' I cried to my little daughter. 'and see the rainbow.' Now, it happened that the child had never seen a rainbow before. 'Dear me!' she cried at the first glance: 'Violet, indigo blue, green, yellow, orange and red. What horrid taste! Why, nothing matches!'"—Philadelphia Press.

In a Hurry.

"Why do you want so many men put to work on your new house?" asked the builder. "Are you in a hurry for it?"

"Hurry," replied the man who was paying the bills. "Well, I should say I was. My wife has expressed herself as satisfied with the plans of this house, and I want to see if I can't get it built before she tires of it and wants me to sell it."—Chicago Post.

Much Uncertainty About the State Convention.

DONNELLY IS IN THE LEAD.

THE PLATFORM WILL BE DRAWN TO SATISFY ALL FACTIONS.

There are Whispers that Benjamin F. Lee or Some Other Dark Horse May Appear to Carry Off the Honor—Mayor Seymour Has Made Inroads into the Chances of Senator Daly.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, Sept. 27.—Every one knew what the Republican State convention held here last week was to do. No one can begin to guess what the Democratic State convention, to be held in the same hall tomorrow, will do. Unless all the signs fail it will be one of the most interesting and exciting gatherings of its kind held in the State in several years.

Thus far word has been received from but few of the counties as to the leaning and preferences of their several delegations. Hunterdon is said to be divided between Daly and Seymour. Hudson is without a candidate, and may go into convention wholly uncommitted. Essex prefers Prosecutor Crane, with a sprinkling of votes for Seymour. The South Jersey contingent is more in doubt. There will probably be a smaller sprinkling of Bryanites among them than some ardent Bryanites have expected.

The Daly following may be more numerous. But it will fall short of the Hoboken Senator's predictions. Mayor Seymour, of Newark, seems to have made serious inroads upon his territory. This may be because, as the result of his dalliance with the Congressional nomination in Hudson, Mr. Daly has come to be regarded as only a name in the controversy, and because the Newark Mayor is looked upon as the aggressive representative of the sentiment for which Mr. Daly has most conspicuously stood. And again, it may be due to Colonel Edward Livingston Price's skilful manipulations of his fellows in the Democratic State committee. If the Daly idea should be reflected in the platform, Seymour might take first rank among the aspirants.

The policy of the managers is, however, to avoid in the convention's deliverance all reference to distracting and dividing side issues, and to make the campaign on newer and liver issues that all live Democrats can espouse. A sub-committee on platform, named by the State committee, is busy now in the preparation of the document. It will avoid all reference to the Chicago platform, eschew Bryan and ignore silver, but make guarded declarations for bimetallism. Beyond that it will pay heed only to State issues. The Republican platform devoted half a column of space to the defence of its State policy, with an evident anticipation of being forced to make a fight for supremacy on domestic issues.

Prosecutor Crane and Mayor Seymour, of Essex, and General Donnelly, of Mercer, continue to be the aspirants most talked of in connection with the nomination for Governor. Donnelly is more talked of than either of the others. One hears it said with ominous frequency in Democratic circles that the name may be a bad one to conjure with. There is a marked improvement toward Benjamin F. Lee. Mr. Lee was mentioned early in the canvass as an especially available man. Somehow or other it got abroad that he would not consent. It can be stated authoritatively that, while he is not eager, he would yet accept the nomination tendered to him with practical unanimity. There is a widespread notion, too, that a new name—one heretofore unmentioned—is to be sprung on the convention by the leaders.

Streets in Bad Shape.

Some of the streets in the West End are not fit to be called streets, for they look more like cow paths. Considering the amount of tax received from that end of town it seems as though the Council ought to provide better streets. On West Third street, near Spooner avenue, there is one block that has nine different grades, it is said.

Tents at Pompton Floored.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Pompton Lake, Sept. 27—The whole of the Second Battalion, Third New Jersey Volunteers, has been provided with board floors for their tents. Overcoats have not yet been issued. The National Guard overcoats, which the men are now using, may be exchanged for the regulation army overcoats.

STILL ON THE BADGER.

NAVAL RESERVES HOPE TO BE MUSTERED OUT BY OCTOBER 1ST.

But the Boys Have Become so Accustomed to Disappointment That They Won't be Surprised at Most Anything.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Charlestown, Mass., Sept. 27.—A week ago the Badger's crew looked forward to an early mustering out. A bulletin was published cutting down furloughs to twenty-four hours, and the two half-watches that had gone on extended furloughs were telegraphed for. This, with the sailing orders for League Island navy yard, created a wave of enthusiasm which was speedily checked by the order from the commandant of the yard to take aboard 550 tons of coal before leaving.

The boys have become so accustomed to disappointments in regard to being discharged that they merely groaned in unison, put on their coaling suits and started in. The captain of the Massapequa, the collier from which the coal is being taken, reported fifteen tons a day as the average for a single bucket. The Badger's boys averaged a little over 100, and as one of the crew put it, "we are so good at the business that Uncle Sam will keep us to coal ship for him."

Saturday, a week ago, the ladies of the church, about thirty in number, visited the ship and were entertained by the crew as well as circumstances would permit. They were presented with two framed photographs of the ship and her crew, and in return they insisted upon furnishing the Badger's mascot, the dog taken from the prize, with a silver collar.

While nothing is known officially about sailing orders, it is confidently expected that all hands look forward to being mustered out by October 1st.

SNEAK THIEVES AT WORK

CASH DRAWER IN SCHEUER'S STORE ROBBED OF $30.

Obtained Entrance Through the Rear Cellar Door—Thought That the Thieves Were Acquainted With the Store.

Sneak thieves are again at work in this city, but the police have thus far been unable to locate them. Recently a thief or thieves entered the grocery store of S. Scheuer & Co., of West Front street, and stole $30 from the cash box in the office.

The money was taken during the night and an entrance was effected to the store through the cellar from the rear. An investigation proved this fact, for it could be seen where the parties entered. Nightwatchman Rockafellow is supposed to look after the place in addition to the protection afforded by the regular police, but he says that he saw no suspicious characters about the place the time the robbery took place.

When Mr. Schloss entered the store the following morning he discovered the loss of the money, but nothing else was disturbed about the store. This leads Mr. Schloss to believe that the thieves were well acquainted with the store and only had one object in view, that of taking the amount of money secured.

The police have no clews as to who the guilty party or parties are.

Writ of Error Obtained for Roesel, Has Been Dismissed.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, Sept. 27—At a conference of the Court of Errors and Appeals yesterday the writ of error taken out by counsel for Louis Roesel, who was convicted in the Union County Court of the murder of James C. Pitts at Summit, was dismissed.

Roesel was sentenced August 1st to be hanged August 25th. His counsel carried the matter to the Court of Errors and Appeals, contending that the May term of the Union court had been previously adjourned sine die and was not in authority to impose sentence at the time it did.

Soldiers Instead of Gold Hunters.

Word has been received from two Plainfield boys, Wm. Higgins and Alfred Montjoy, who left home a year ago last summer. The lads started for the Klondike and got as far as San Francisco when news of the approaching difficulties with Spain reached them and they directed their steps southwards. When volunteers were called for both young men joined the First Louisiana Volunteers. They expect soon to be mustered out, but Higgins likes army life so well that he is going to join the signal corps.

A Borough Primary.

TO GATHER AT SEASIDE.

ENDEAVORERS' STATE CONVENTION WILL BEGIN TOMORROW.

Plainfield Will Send a Big Delegation—Special Train Will Start from Somerville for Delegates from This Section.

Once every year there is a gathering of the Christian Endeavorers from all over Jersey to the State convention. Two years ago the convention was held in Plainfield, and for four days the city was literally in possession of the Endeavorers. Last year Paterson entertained the delegatee. This year the great army of young workers are to gather at the seashore. Asbury Park has been named, and beginning tomorrow there will be a long procession of young people en route for that well known seaside resort.

Plainfield has, since the Christian Endeavor Society appeared in New Jersey, been one of the foremost of the Jersey cities in the work. This year a large delegation will go from here. The Jersey Central Railroad has made provision to send a special train to Asbury Park for the convenience of the delegates of this section. The train will start from Somerville tomorrow morning and stop at the other stations in this neighborhood to take on board the delegates.

Asbury Park is particularly fitted to handle such an army of invasion owing to the countless hotels that are to be found there at every turn. The Endeavorers will be well quartered. Most of the Plainfielders will stop at the Willard. A few are to be located at the headquarters of the State officers on Third avenue.

The Plainfield delegation will be composed of the following:

Rev. J. W. Richardson, Mrs. Jere. Manning, Mrs. Catherine Randolph, Mr. Howard Randolph, Miss Mary Randolph, Mr. L. W. Randolph, Mrs. L. W. Randolph, Mr. Robert Love, Miss Emma V. Fish, Miss Minnie G. Morse, Mrs. Harriet Runyon, Miss Elma Runyon, Miss Adelaide Runyon, Miss Cora Brokaw, Miss Mary Berkaw, Miss Swackhamer, Mrs. R. A. JERSEY K. OF P. NOMINATIONS.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Woodbury, Sept. 26—For some weeks past lodges of the Knights of Pythias in New Jersey have been sending to Grand Keeper of Records and Seals George E. Pieeson, of this city, nominations for grand officers to be voted for at the December elections. Mr. Pierson has received nominations from 100 lodges out of the 142 in the State. Somers T. Hayhurst, Lambertville; William McCullough, Swedesborough; C. M. Kilburn, New Brunswick; DeWitt C. Bolton, of Paterson, and Daniel S. Rockafeller, Somerville.

SCHOOL BOYS TO TRY FOR THE PRESS MEDAL.

All-Round Championship of Plainfield High School.

HELD FRIDAY AFTERNOON.

NINE EVENTS TO BE CONTESTED AT THE CRESCENT OVAL.

A Meeting of the Athletic Association Yesterday Arranged the Details—Events to Be Handicapped—Most of the Contestants Are As Yet Untried—Much Interest Shown By High School Boys.

It is now the turn of the boys of the Plainfield High School to renew their activity in athletic sports. While there is not sufficient material in the school for a football eleven, general athletics have taken a boom within the last week. It has been the custom of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association to hold its handicap games in the fall of every year. The Daily Press medal for the all round championship of the High School has been a prominent factor in attracting the boys to enter the games and has yearly produced exciting contests. This year The Daily Press medal will bring out a number of the scholastic athletes who will meet for their annual competition at the Crescent Oval Friday afternoon.

The Daily Press medal was first offered in 1894, when it was won by Edgar I. Serrell, of the class of '95. In 1895 George Proctor Smith, of '98, was the victor. No field games were held the year following. Last year Carroll L. Runyon, of '99, won the medal by clever work. As all the prominent athletes have now left the High School, it is an open question as to who will be the winner this year. The result will be an increase in the interest among both contestants and audience.

A meeting of the Athletic Association was held yesterday afternoon when it was decided to hold the fall handicap games at the Crescent Oval Friday afternoon. They will be open only to the boys of the High School. It was then announced that The Daily Press medal would be offered again this year. It will be a handsome silver medal appropriately engraved. The list of events was left to the Advisory Board. The entries will close Wednesday afternoon. The handicapping will be done by the Advisory Board, which is composed of Albert B. Meredith, Thomas A. Cuming and Charles B. Morse, assisted by the former president of the association, Carroll L. Runyon, whose class acquaintance with the boys makes him particularly fitted for the work.

The Advisory Board held a meeting yesterday afternoon when the following list of events was selected: 100-yard dash, 440-yard run, ½-mile walk, ½-mile bicycle race, 1-mile bicycle race, running broad jump, running high jump, putting the shot, three-legged race.

Tickets for the field games have been issued and will be sold by the members. Admission will be sold by the members. Admissions will be ten cents which will admit to the grand stand.

There are now over a dozen of the High School boys who have expressed a wish to contest for the all-round championship. Most of them will take part in every event. The events will all be handicap so as to give all a chance. The points in the events will be scored five points for first place, three points for second and one point for third.

GROCERS IN POLITICS.

AGAINST VOORHEES ON ACCOUNT OF TRADING STAMPS.

Former Councilman Westphal, a Republican, Makes a Decided Stand in the Grocers' Association Meeting Last Night.

The regular meeting of the Grocers' Association was held last evening and former Councilman Westphal created quite a sensation by introducing a strong argument why the grocers should not vote for Foster Voorhees for Governor.

The argument was that Mr. Voorhees had failed to sign the anti-trading stamp bill, which it was the wish of the grocers in this State that he should do. He set forth the intended action of the grocers at Paterson against Mr. Voorhees and thought that the Plainfield grocers should take the same action on the subject. Mr. Westphal talked at some length on the subject, but his fellow-members did not decide to act in the matter.

Y.M.C.A. GYM. NOW OPEN

INTEREST IN ATHLETICS IS HIGH AT THE VERY START.

The Gymnasium Has Been Undergoing Repairs for the Last Month—A New Game Called "King Pin" Introduced.

After being closed twenty-six days for repairs, the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium was informally opened last night to its members. The interest in the athletic department of the institution has not lagged during the summer as was forcibly illustrated by the twenty-five members who were present last night to use the privileges.

The gymnasium has been thoroughly overhauled and put in first-class condition. The tank and the locker rooms have been enameled white and make a very pretty appearance. No classes were formed last night, but the physical director will begin to organize them along during this month.

The summer memberships expire September 1st and several of the summer members became so accustomed to using the gymnasium and the tank that they have taken a full membership. It promises to be one of the liveliest seasons in the history of the Y. M. C. A. C. E. A. Heywood, the physical director, has introduced a new system of gymnastics to develop men. Now the poorest, physically, can come in and begin any time, and at the same there will always be enough work for the most advanced.

Basket ball is looking up, and the candidates for the regular team will practice for the first time Friday night at 8:30 o'clock. The season will no doubt be an active one, and some big matches are sure to be scheduled. The management of the team has not yet been decided upon.

In addition to the regular team, Mr. Heywood has determined to organize three more teams, if he has material enough to do so, among the members. These last teams, though, will not play with any outside teams either here or elsewhere, but will compete among themselves for a banner. Other athletic and gymnastic contests will be arranged later on for medals, and all who attain to a certain average will be eligible for the prizes.

A new game for the Juniors has been introduced called "King Pin." It consists of an upright pin on which rings are to be thrown. It requires some little skill to do this successfully, and the game promises to be popular.

STREET WORK.

Small Improvements Being Made in Several Parts of the City.

William Hand, who is macadamizing West Sixth street beyond Grant avenue for the property-owners, hired the city steam roller and sprinkler Thursday to put the finishing touches on the work. After the men had finished that job, they took the roller to Grant avenue and smoothed down the rodbed which was torn up by the recent rains.

Work is progressing slowly on the streets, culverts and storm sewers. Much of the water that used formerly to go to Grant avenue now finds its way down the Plainfield avenue storm sewer. It is proposed to run another pipe diagonally across South Second street at Grant avenue to the twenty-four-inch storm sewer to still further relieve the surface at Grant avenue.

There is still some cleaning to be done about the Grant avenue storm sewer. During the heavy rain three weeks ago, when the men should have been at the grates scraping away the debris which had accumulated during the rain, they were off in another part of the city felling trees. The gratings became so clogged with branches and mud that the water could not flow through. This water, standing there, did considerable damage which is not all effaced yet.

Has Not Forfeited Franchise.

A Fredonian reporter interviewed E. H. Radel, secretary of the Brunswick Traction Company, this morning, regarding the reported forfeiture of the right to extend its line through Somerville because the tracks had not been laid over the entire proposed route. Secretary Radel characterized the rumor as the veriest bosh and said that as soon as the Central Railroad finished its viaduct the trolley tracks will be laid.—New Brunswick Fredonian.

King's Daughters Elect.

Last evening there was a meeting of the Brightside Circle, King's Daughters, at the home of Miss Claypool, on Grandview avenue, at which time the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. J. A. Powlison; vice-president, Miss Claypool; secretary, Miss Kiernan; treasurer, Mrs. Frank Jones. The next meeting will be held the last of October.

Miss Trewin, of Newark, spent Sunday with Plainfield relatives.

EIGHTY YEARS OF LIFE.

ETHAN LANPHEAR RECITES HIS OWN CAREER INTERESTINGLY.

It Fills a Book of 160 Pages—Exploits His Views on the Great Moral Questions—Reviews Troubles in the Church.

"Life, Travels and Observations of Eighty Years" is the title of an interesting little volume which Ethan Lanphear, of Central avenue, has recently issued. The book is typographically beautiful consisting of 160 pages and a number of illustrations. It was written by Mr. Lanphear since his eightieth birthday, March 2, 1898.

It is divided into four chapters, all of which are very interesting reading though they are made up wholly of incidents in the author's life. He devotes considerable space to exploiting his ideas on the great moral questions of the day, such as temperance, church connections, theology and its various phases as viewed by different denominations.

The third chapter is the most interesting locally. It deals with the author's exciting experiences in local church life with a frankness that makes it almost sensational in a way. His recitation of the charges made against him in the Seventh-Day Baptist church is very out-spoken, though he mentions no names. He also rehearses the attempt to divide the city park into building lots without mincing words of his opinion of the men that endeavored to engineer the deal to consummation. He claims to have been instrumental in preserving the city park as it is.

The last chapter of the book is devoted to his personal history, religious opinion and sundry topics.

Only 100 copies of the book were issued, and the edition has nearly been exhausted.

TRAMP'S UGLY MANNER.

THREATENED TO HARM MRS. EDEN BOICE YESTERDAY MORNING.

The Tramp Said "Let Me in Here or I'll Do You," and When the Door Was Shut in His Face Threatened to Break It In.

"Let me in here or I'll do you!"

These were the words that greeted the ears of Mrs. Eden Boice, of West Third street, corner Central avenue, early yesterday morning.

The person addressing Mrs. Boice was a large man of the tramp style. His clothes were of the worst sort and his general make-up filled one with horror. He was insulting and bold, and when he appeared at the back door of Mrs. Boice's house and asked for something to eat, he did so with a spirit of hatred and determination. Mrs. Boice was greatly frightened and immediately screamed for help.

This incensed the tramp and he ran into the yard, where he picked up a large stone. When he returned he found that Mrs. Boice had locked her doors and windows. This excited him still further and he threatened to break the door in and to smash the windows.

Mrs. Boice continued to scream and finally her cries reached the ears of neighbors. Presently an officer appeared and learned the trouble. As the officer appeared the tramp disappeared and after searching for nearly an hour the officer was obliged to give up all hope of finding the hobo.

In the meantime Mrs. Boice had suffered from the severe shock and her nerves were much affected. It was sometime afterward before she fully recovered her composure. She then related how she had been insulted by the tramp and how he threatened her life. From the description given of him he was a total stranger in these parts, but it will not be well for him if he is caught roaming about the city.

FOR COLORED PUPILS.

Plainfield Young People Who Will Attend Bordentown Industrial School.

Three years ago the Bordentown Industrial School for colored people was started with 23 scholars. Today there are 185 scholars on the roll. The school will re-open October 1st, and among those from this city who will attend are Miss Edith Johnson, Miss Lottie Johnson and Samuel Boldin, Jr. William Kline, of this city, is a special agent for the school and has succeeded in securing the admission of a number of scholars from this vicinity.

The school is located on what is known as the Parnell estate and J. M. Gregory, formerly Dean of Howard University, is the principal. Mr. Kline simply performs his work for the honor that is in it, and there is no money consideration attached.

Silas Yerkes, of Sixth street, is out of town for a few days on business.

Mrs. Amanda Tomlinson, of West Fifth street, has returned home after a visit with her son, Rev. Everett Tomlinson, of Elizabeth.

ROUGH MAN HELD UP UNPROTECTED WOMAN.

ACCOSTED IN THE DARK.

MRS. JOSEPH NAYLOR, OF LINCOLN, WAS THE VICTIM.

Her Screams for Help Were Heard by College Boys Who Came to the Rescue Just in Time—The Desperado Disappeared in the Darkness—Mrs. Naylor Fainted Away—Ruffian Described.

(Special To The Daily Press.)

Lincoln, September 27—While returning from a shopping trip to New Brunswick last night, Mrs. Joseph Naylor, of Lincoln, had an exciting and unpleasant encounter with a desperate tramp whom she encountered near Bound Brook.

Mrs. Naylor had taken a trolley car from New Brunswick to Bound Brook, but owing to an accident on the line she was delayed in getting to the latter place until 7:30 o'clock. It was then too late to get a train to her house, a little over two miles distant, and she concluded to walk the remainder of the journey.

She had her arms full of bundles. It was quite dark, and she decided to walk along the tracks of the Lehigh Valley Railroad. She had gone about a quarter of a mile when she met a heavy-set, rough-looking man. The stranger planted himself directly in her path and asked in a threatening voice;

"Where are you going, woman?"

"I am going home," answered Mrs. Naylor who by this time was thoroughly frightened. Thinking that the stranger was probably bent on securing money she thought she would avoid trouble if she offered him her pocketbook. Instead of accepting the pocketbook the ruffian made a jump for her. Mrs. Naylor decided to put on as plucky a front as possible, and dropping all her bundles but one containing a small kettle she struck him a hard blow over the head with that article. The man was knocked to the ground by the force of the blow. Before he could regain himself and attack her again, Mrs. Naylor was screaming with all her might. A moment later, however, the desperado had grabbed her by the throat and was choking her.

In the meantime, though, her yells had been heard by John and Chauncey Egel, students at the University of Pennsylvania, who resided a short distance away. They hurried in the direction from whence the cries were heard. As the Egel boys neared the scene of the strife the assailant loosened his hold on Mrs. Naylor and ran away in the darkness. Mrs. Naylor was found in an insensible condition, having fainted from fright and the blows which the stranger had struck her with. She recovered in a few minutes and was assisted to the Egel home.

Mrs. Egel described her assailant as a man about twenty-five years of age, shabbily dressed, about five feet ten inches tall and wearing a scraggy beard. The police in neighboring towns have been notified to be on the lookout for him.

TO INCREASE THE MORTGAGE.

Sanitary Company Will Borrow $6,000 of James Clark.

A special meeting of the Plainfield Sanitary Company stockholders will be held at the County Clubhouse Saturday evening for the purpose of ratifying the following resolution adopted by the board of directors:

Whereas, At a meeting of the directors of this company held May 27th, 1898, a resolution afterwards ratified by the stockholders, was adopted, authorizing the making of a mortgage to James Clark as trustee for $5,000. And

Whereas, It has been found necessary for the purpore recited in said resolution to borrow the sum of $6,000, instead of $5,000. Be it Resolved, That the bond and mortgage authorized to be made shall be for the sum of $6,000, and that it shall be made to James Clark and John W. Murray as trustees."

Demonstration of Velox Paper.

A large number of interested people gathered at the rooms of the Plainfield Camera Club last evening and witnessed a demonstration of the new velox developing paper. A man from New York was present and gave the demonstration which proved to be very satisfactory to all present. By using the velox paper developments can be made with gas, electric or day light and is sure to prove very popular.

In Honor of a Guest.

The Misses Giles, of East Sixth street, invited a number of friends in last night, in honor of their friend, Miss Cora Richardson, of Jersey City, who is visiting them. There were about 25 present, and the evening was passed with games and dancing.

Some cough mixtures smother the cough. But the next breeze fans it into life again.

Better put the cough out.

That is, better go deeper and smother the fires of inflammation. Troches cannot do this. Neither can plain cod-liver oil.

But Scott's Emulsion can. The glycerine soothes and makes comfortable; the hypophosphites give power and stability to the nerves; and the oil feeds and strengthens the weakened tissues.

THE CUBAN ASSEMBLY

Will Respect America's Purpose to Restore Order.

CUBANS NOT OPPOSING US

Senor Quesada Speaking for the Provisional Government Explains the Nature of the Assembly Called for Oct. 10 Cubans Will Follow This Government's Lead.

Washington, Sept. 27.—According to Secretary Quesada of the Cuban delegation, the object of the Cuban assembly called for October 10, has been generally misunderstood; otherwise it would not have met the reported disapproval of the American commissioners in Havana.

The assembly, he said, would in no way interfere with the matters to be settled by the American government, and would not choose officers for a permanent form of government.

"It is," he continued, "a provisional assembly, which will provide for another more permanent assembly to be elected later. Its members will await the wish of the American commissioners and see what they want before attempting to establish a permanent form of government.

"Complying with the constitution of the republic, the only laws which today have force in Cuba, we have called for this provisional assembly of representatives to meet on October 10, so that the urgent questions dealing with the present and future of Cuba shall be discussed and determined. The reason of our resolution in this matter can be readily understood. When the representatives of the Cuban people in arms assembled at Jimaguaya in September, 1895, they agreed upon and voted a constitution in conformity to the necessities of the war. This constitution was to last two years unless the war ended before. These two years having terminated, the assembly met again and decreed the present constitution organizing the present government according to the exigencies of the revolutionary period.

"This constitution states that when the independence of Cuba shall have been attained a new assembly shall be called to provide for the provisional administration of the government of the republic until the final constituent assembly shall have met.

"It is that assembly of representatives first spoken of that we have called together, and it is not to establish a final political status for Cuba, but to facilitate its accomplishment by a work for which this government council is not empowered. Thus the final government of Cuba will be born of laws and institutions genuinely Cuban, and there will exist in the island a legal entity, which, with the co-operation of the American government, will attend to the settlement of great questions relating to the reorganization of the people, who are suffering from the disastrous effects of a war that has brought them to a most critical condition.

"Following this line of conduct, we shall give our most efficient aid to the American government. Its task is our task, and the policy of the United States inspires us with full faith, and we have absolute confidence in its intentions."

Senor Quesada said he voiced the sentiments of President Maso in these matters.

Collections and Offerings.

I went to church not long ago, says a writer in the Albany Journal, and heard the following tale given in explanation of the words "collection" and "offering," and the difference between them.

A certain small boy had a dog which he had named Fido. The boy was very fond of Fido. One day at dinner the boy's father noticed him taking the best of the portion of roast beef which had fallen to his lot and placing it on another plate. Upon inquiry the father learned that the meat was for the dog, Fido. "My son," said papa, "it would be better if you ate that meat yourself and gave Fido some of the scraps which are left." The boy protested, but the father was obdurate. At the conclusion of the meal the boy took out to Fido a plate heaped with scraps of the roast. "Here, Fido," said the boy, "I wanted to make you an offering, but here is only a collection."

The celebration at the end of the first year is called the cotton wedding; two years, paper; three years, leather; five years, wooden; ten years, tin; twelve years, silk and fine linen; fifteen years, crystal; twenty years, china; twenty-five years, silver; thirtieth year, pearls; fortieth year, rubies; fiftieth year, golden; seventy-fifth year, diamond.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

OREGON'S CHAPLAIN ON TRIAL.

Will He Plead Mental Irresponsibility for Remarks About Sampson and Evans?

Denver, Col., Sept. 27.—The court martial convened for the trial of Chaplain Joseph P. McIntyre of the battleship Oregon met here at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon. It was ushered in with a sensation.

Instead of the calling of witnesses to inaugurate the trial, as is customary, Attorney Earl M. Cranston, attorney for the accused, made an address to the court.

Although the text of that address is unknown, the doors being closed, those who are best qualified to judge of such matters, assert that it is a practical admission of the charges and specifications and a proposition to submit to the court the expert testimony of Drs. Eskridge and Pershing.

These two physicians are specialists in nervous disorders. They made an examination of Chaplain McIntyre on Saturday. This was done at the instance of friends of McIntyre, who think that by reason of great mental excitement resulting from his experience in the Santiago campaign he was not responsible for utterances he may have made in his lecture delivered here on August 8.

The object sought in trying to have the testimony of these specialists submitted would obviously be to waive a trial and throw the chaplain on the mercy of the court.

The charges against Chaplain McIntyre are three: Scandalous conduct tending to the destruction of good morals, conduct to the prejudice of good order and discipline, and conduct unbecoming an officer of the United States navy.

The specifications are ten in number and comprise quotations from a newspaper report of the lecture which the chaplain delivered in the Trinity Methodist Episcopal church here on August 8, and in which he is alleged to have questioned the honesty of Admiral Sampson and the courage of Captain Robley D. Evans.

THE ARMY HOSPITAL DISPUTE.

The Conflict Between the Division and Regimental Systems.

Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 27.—Officers of the Twenty-fourth Michigan regiment are very indignant over a dispatch printed in the New York Herald from Washington saying that their regimental hospital is in bad condition. They claim that this report is part of a conspiracy of the medical department to put regimental hospitals in bad repute, so that the divisional system may be maintained.

The Michigan regiment made such a vigorous protest against the divisional hospital that they were allowed to restore regimental hospitals.

Colonel Gardiner was very indignant yesterday morning and emphatically denied that the charges were true.

Surgeon H. A. Haze characterized the statements as utterly without foundation. The officers of the regiment are determined to uphold their regimental hospital, and have large numbers of affidavits to prove its superiority over the division system.

Democratic Convention.

Syracuse, Sept. 27.—The Democratic politicians of the Empire state are gathering here for the convention which opens to-morrow.

Mr. Croker still avers that he has no candidate and that Tammany has none. Senator McCarren said yesterday that the strongest man would win, and that without any dictation from anybody. As to who that man is the senator says he knows no more than the average citizen.

The names of Van Wyck, Herrick, Titus and Earl have been prominently mentioned for the office of governor.

Empire State Politics

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 27.—To-day at ten o'clock will be called to order the state Republican convention. A complete state ticket is to be nominated. Much interest has centered in the gubernatorial contest between Hon. Theodore Roosevelt and the present encumbent, Hon. Frank S. Black. It now looks as if Roosevelt would be named on the first ballot. Beside the 700 odd delegates the town is well filled with prominent Republican politicians from all parts of the state and more than ordinary interest is manifested.

Sullivan the Winner

New York, Sept. 27.—After 5 rounds of fast fighting at the Greater New York A. C., at Coney Island, last night, Dave Sullivan, the Boston featherweight, was declared a winner over Solly Smith of Los Angeles, al.

Smith failed to respond when the fifth round was called, explaining that the bones in his left forearm had been broken in the second round while delivering a blow. Smith showed a swollen wrist as evidence that his statement was correct.

The Situation in China.

Washington, Sept. 27.—Mr. Wu Ting Fang, the hinese minister, said yesterday that he had received no word concerning the reported death of the emperor beyond press reports. The troublous condition of affairs in China is exciting much apprehension here, mainly because of the threatening attitude of the great powers and their readiness to seize upon any pretext for further encroachments upon Chinese territory.

Gen. Shafter's Plans.

San Francisco Sept. 27.—Advices from General Shafter to friends in this city say that he will soon return to resume his station here as commander of the department of California, relieving General Merriam, who will, probably, be assigned to his former duties as commander of the department of the Columbia.

Secretary Alger Expected on Wednesday

Washington, Sept. 27.—Secretary Alger has sent word to the war department from Jacksonville, Fla., that he expects to be in Washington to-morrow. Acting Secretary Meikeljohn will then go on leave of absence to recuperate from the severe strain he has been under for so many months.

Forest Fires in Wyoming.

Cheyenne, Wyoming, Sept. 27.—Reports from various parts of the state show that serious forest fires are burning in many places.

SITUATION AT MANILA

Exaggerated Accounts of Sickness Among Our Troops.

INSURGENTS ARE ACTIVE

A Despatch from Gen. Otis. The Americans Likely to Seize the Entire Insurgent Fleet. The Rebels Destroying Property and Crops.

Adjutant General, Washington:

Understand reporters send exaggerated accounts of sickness. Total in hospital to-day, highest of any day, 529; typhoid fever patients, 95; all doing well and mostly convalescent; about 1,200 excused from duty; mostly slight ailments, showing condition fair for this latitude. Nineteen deaths from disease this month; 23 in August.

OTIS,
Commanding.

Manila, Sept. 27.—When the United States revenue cutter McCulloch captured the insurgent steamer Abbey, formerly the Pasig, sixty miles south of Manila, the Abbey, it is believed, having landed seven thousand rifles, an insurgent gunboat followed the American vessel into Cavite, and now the Americans contemplate taking possession of the entire insurgent fleet, because the vessels are flying an unrecognized flag and are liable to seizure, as pirates, by the war vessels of any nation.

Americans cruisers have gone north, where the steamer Filipinas is landing troops.

Two steamers which have just arrived here brought many Spanish officials and refugees from the southeast of the island of Luzon. They report that the insurgents are overrunning the country, destroying property and the hemp crops. Sanguinary conflicts have taken place at Cebu and Iloilo.

There has been an outbreak of small pox in the California regiment here; but only six cases of a mild type have been reported.

Currency of Porto Rico.

Washington Sept. 27.—Secretary Gage has decided to let the vexed question of the ratio of the silver currency of Porto Rico to our own go over till the assembling of Congress in December. This is but a temporary question, since the ultimate policy of the United States will be to introduce its own currency on the island, but as this change cannot be brought about rapidly, considerable confusion and many troublesome complications cannot fail to arise in the meantime from the continued use of the present currency of the island, whatever ratio to our own may finally be established.

The custom house authorities have been directed, till Congress decides otherwise, to adhere to the two to one ratio established by the military governor, which makes the peso equivalent to our 50-cent piece.

Secretary Gage outlined a plan a few weeks ago, for using the existing currency by retaining on one side its present inscription, and on the other stamping the United States equivalent. On the peso, for instance, one side would bear the Spanish coat of arms, and the words "Isla de Puerto Rico," while the other would be stamped just as is one side of our fifty-cent pieces.

2,000 Men at Fort Slocum.

Fort Slocum, Sept. 26.—The mobilization of the Twenty-second regiment has increased the garrison at this post to two thousand officers and men. Every available spot on the island is occupied by tents and equipage. The overcrowded condition of the garrison, combined with the fact that several additional batteries of artillery are under orders to come here within a few days, makes it almost certain that the Twenty-second regiment will be ordered away so that there may be room for the regulars.

The health of the men is excellent, but they are tired of garrison duty, and any change will be welcome, whether it be Porto Rico, Havana or home.

Sickness at Dawson.

Port Townsend, Wash., Sept. 27.—The steamship Topeka has arrived with 150 Klondikers, the most of whom have brought little gold.

They estimate that there were three thousand cases of typhoid fever in Dawson on September 6. Deaths occur daily of which no record is made.

Among the Topeka's passengers was Joseph Ladue, the founder of Dawson. He admits that there is much sickness, but says that when anyone is taken sick anywhere along the Yukon he is sent to Dawson, which gets the credit.

To Succed Dr. Hall

New York, Sept. 27.—It is asserted on high authority that a successor to the late Rev. Dr. John Hall as pastor of the Fifth avenue Presbyterian church has been chosen and that the man is the Rev. Dr. George T. Purves of Princeton Theological seminary.

Dr. Purves is one of the most eminent divines of the Presbyterian faith.

Patchen and Gentry to Race.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 27.—President Robert Aull of the St. Louis Fair Association has arranged to have a match race between the famous pacers, John R. Gentry and Joe Patchen, held at the fair grounds on Wednesday, October 5.

The Victoria Jubilee Bridge.

Montreal, Sept. 27.—There are about three hundred and fifty men at work on the Victoria jubilee bridge and the extension of the tracks at both ends of it, with a view to having it as nearly completed as possible before winter sets in.

The Evacuation of Cuba.

Havana, Sept. 27.—The American evacuation commission has been officially notified that Manzanillo will be evacuated by October 7.

PORTABLE ARMY HOSPITALS.

Quartermaster General Opened Bids for Sixty Sectional Buildings.

New York, Sept. 27.—Colonel Amos S. Kimball, deputy quartermaster general, yesterday opened bids for sixty portable hospitals, some of which will be erected at Fort Hamilton.

Many of these hospitals will be made ready to be sent to the island of Porto Rico.

The only difference essential in the construction for use in the colder temperature of the north is, those used up here will have double floors, lined in between with felt.

Each hospital will accommodate forty patients, and is to be nineteen feet three inches wide and 121 feet long, to be constructed in sections, there being, according to the specifications, seven sections of width and forty-four sections of length.

Some of the sections will be hinged to allow of speedy exit in case of fire. There will be ample ventilation by means of traps in the ceiling.

These hospital buildings are to be constructed of North Carolina pine, set on cedar posts eighteen inches from the ground, and the roofs are to be covered with painted canvas.

Air ducts are to be provided, especially for those in which it is expected to erect stoves. Bidders were required to state the number of days in which they can finish the work.

Five of these portable hospitals are to be delivered at Fort Hamilton, and five at Washington Barracks, D. C. These are to be set up. The remainder are to be delivered to the quartermaster here, crated and ready for shipment.

These new structures will increase Fort Hamilton's hospital accommodations by 200 beds, leaving portable hospital accommodations of two thousand beds to be sent to Porto Rico or Cuba.

NINE INVESTIGATORS MEET.

Real Work of the Army Inquiry Commission Will Begin To day.

Washington, Sept. 27.—All the members of the war investigating commission assembled promptly at 10 o'clock yesterday in the room reserved for them in the state, war and navy building. The chairman, General Dodge, arrived after most of the members had assembled, including Dr. Connor of Cincinnati, who reached Washington yesterday morning.

Dr. Connor had a conference with the president at the White House shortly before the hour set for the meeting of the commission at the war department.

At ten o'clock the deliberations of the investigators were taken up where they were left on Saturday when the preliminary session was held. The real work for which the commission was appointed will not begin until to-day, the meeting being occupied with a discussion of methods of procedure.

The commission will change its quarters to-day from the state, war and navy building to the Lemon building on New York avenue, a short distance from the war department.

Whee or Leaves Montauk

New York, Sept. 27.—General Joseph Wheeler arrived in this city from Montauk Point at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, en route for Camp Wheeler, near Huntsville, Ala., where he will take command of the cavalry regiments to be assigned there.

General Wheeler was accompanied by his staff, consisting of his son, Lieutenant Joseph Wheeler, Jr., Major W. H. Beach, Lieutenant Matthew A. Batson, Dr. Charles M. Lee and Secretary L. K. Wilson.

The party is staying at the Windsor hotel, where Secretary Wilson is prostrated with a periodical visitation of malarial fever, contracted in the swamps about Santiago. His wiry little chief, however, is hale and hearty, and has thrown himself heart and soul into the plans for his new command.

A Flour Mills Combination.

New York, Sept. 27.—There was a well defined rumor on the Produce Exchange floor yesterday afternoon to the effect that the much mooted combination between several big flour milling firms of the west and the New York concerns had at last been made. Representatives of several mills were seen, but none of them would talk about the rumored consolidation. From men who are supposed to be on the inside, and whose authority is rarely, if ever, disputed on the exchange, facts were obtained which go far to verify the rumor.

Another Coal Strike.

Pittsburg, Sept. 27.—There was a conference of district and national miners' officers here yesterday to prepare a march into the fourth pool on the Monongahela river, where the scale is violated. The strike will open to-day with a march against the pits, headed by a brass band.

The big victory of the miners in the third pool has aroused diggers all over the district to a high pitch of enthusiasm and one of the hottest strikes in the history of the district is threatened.

Tornado in Tonawanda

Tonawanda, N. Y., Sept. 27.—At about five o'clock last evening this city was visited by a tornado which demolished houses, uprooted trees, overturned freight cars and swept a clean path about two hundred yards wide for a distance of ten miles.

The tornado swept over Grand island before reaching this place, and it is reported that several people were killed on the island.

France a Filipino Ally.

London, Sept. 27.—The correspondent of the Globe at Hong Kong telegraphs that he has learned from a trustworthy Filipino source that France has promised to recognize the Filipino republic.

It is asserted that negotiations to this end are now proceeding at Manila, where there are three French warships.

The Buffalo Going to the Pacific.

Washington, Sept. 27.—The navy department has decided to send the cruiser Buffalo, now at New York, to the Pacific station. She probably will go to Honolulu, and in the event that she is needed to reinforce Dewey's fleet, she can receive her orders at that place by dispatch boat.

JUSTICE FOR DREYFUS

French Cabinet Decides in Favor of Revision,

AND THE PEOPLE APPROVE

The Documents to Be Sent to the Court of Cessation. The Minster of Justice Has Announced that he Has Given Instruction to Proceed Against Any One Attacking the Army.

Paris, Sept. 27.—At a meeting of the cabinet Monday morning, all the ministers being present, a decision was taken in favor of a revision of the trial of Albert Dreyfus, the captain of artillery who was degraded on charges of selling military secrets to a foreign power, and sentenced to imprisonment on Devil's island, near Cayenne, and the documents in the case will be sent to the court of cessation.

The crowds of people outside the ministry of the interior, where the cabinet council was held, loudly cheered the ministers, and there were shouts of "Vive Brisson!" "Vive la revision!"

The cabinet ordered the minister of justice, M. Sarrien, to lay before the court of cessation the petition of Mme. Dreyfus, wife of the prisoner of Devil's island, for a revision of her husband's case.

The court, therefore, will decide the legal question as to whether the first trial of Captain Dreyfus was vitiated by the forgery committed by the late Lieutenant Colonel Henry, who was a witness before the court martial, and who confessed to having forged a document in the case.

The minister of justice has announced that he has given instructions that proceedings are to be taken immediately against any one attacking the army.

Henri Rochefort, in his paper, the Intransigeant, accuses Major Esterhazy of having been bribed by the so-called Dreyfus syndicate, to "cover himself with dishonor by confession to a forgery, of which charge he was twice acquitted." M. Rochefort asserts that he paid Esterhazy 1,000 francs for copies of all the documents in the case, and that, in addition, with two other newspaper men, he paid Esterhazy, who was literally without a centime, 800 francs monthly to prevent him from dying of hunger while waiting to obtain a pension.

Continuing, M. Rochefort says: "Recently, without any apparent incentive, Esterhazy mysteriously went to London, abandoning his three hundred francs monthly. Why this emigration? Who paid for his journey? With what money has Esterhazy paid for his meals?"

The Figaro says: "The government may safely decide in favor of or against a revision, but its duty is to come to a prompt determination."

M. Clemenceau, in the Aurore, says "France is divided into two camps, those who conceive that the interests of the country depend upon the concealment of facts by lies, and those who have a sufficiently high esteem for the country not to separate patriotism from the aspirations of justice and truth."

A Bank Teller Shot.

Blissfield, Mich., Sept. 27.—While passing the postoffice here at about 12.30 o'clock Sunday morning, Samuel Rothfuss, teller in the Blissfield State Bank, was held up by robbers intent upon robbing the postoffice.

They commanded him to hold up his hands, and in doing so he exposed a revolver, whereupon one of the men fired upon him.

Rothfuss fell to the sidewalk, but returned the fire, firing three shots, which failed to take effect, and the robbers escaped with as stolen team.

The Ashes of Columbus.

Havana, Sept. 27.—At nine o'clock yesterday morning the remains of Columbus were exhumed in the presence of General Blanco, Secretary Govin, the civil governor, the bishop, the dean of the cathedral and other authorities.

THE GILL MYSTERY SOLVED.

Bridgeport Police Say that Oxley and the Two Drayton Women Have Confessed.

Bridgeport, Conn., Sept. 27.—The death of Emma Gill, the Bridgeport police say, is now an open book. All those alleged to be implicated in the crime are under arrest save tthe person whose hand brought an untimely end to the victim and subsequently dismembered her body. That person, the police say, is Mrs. Nancy Guilford.

The police say that Harry Oxley has confessed to complicity in the crime, and that Rosa Drayton and her daughter Clara, laundress and housemaid respectively in the employ of Nancy Guilford, confessed yesterday to that portion of the crime with which they were acquainted.

The police say further that these confessions bear out the theory contained in their statement made public on Saturday as to the circumstances of the dismemberment and disposal of the body of Emma Gill.

Harry Oxley of Southington, who is alleged to have paid Dr. Nancy Guilford for performing a criminal operation on Emma Gill, which resulted fatally, has been rearrested charged with mansiaughter.

Extradition papers were made out yestetrday for the return of Miss Guilford to this city. She is now under arrest at Elmira for alleged complicity in the crime.

The police say that Mrs. Guilford is "under cover near Wellsburg, N. Y., and will soon be compelled to come out of her hiding place owing to her fast diminishing funds."

A RIVAL OF THE L. A. W.

Stevens, John Zimmerman, H. T. Barlow, W. J. Wigmore, James P. Logne, John Ruel, R. A. Miller, E. P. Thompson and Eddie Stout. Those present appointed themselves a committee-at-large to circulate the agreement among the rest of the sixty-three professionals entered for the races, and appeal to them to sign the document.

Filipinos in Chicago.

Chicago, Sept. 27.—Felipe Agoncilla, second in power among the Filipinos to Aguinaldo, and his private secretary, Sixto Hopez, arrived in this city at 8.35 o'clock Monday morning over the Chicago & Northwestern railroad.

They were accompanied by Major General Greene and his aides, Captain W. G. Bates and Lieutenant Schuyler Schieffelin. After a two hours' stay in the city the party left at 10.30 o'clock over the Pennsylvania route for Washington.

A Lynching in Tennessee.

Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 27.—A dispatch to the Sentinel from Mountain City, Tenn., says that at about two o'clock Monday morning a mob of 100 men overpowered the Johnson county jailer and took John Williams, a negro, who seriously stabbed Sherman Dunn and assaulted Mrs. Mollie Shelton in this county a week ago, from the jail, and hung him to a tree about one mile back of the town.

Elizabeth Jumps In.

It is just as was expected. Elizabeth Republicans now step to the front and proclaim their intention of gathering in the Senatorial nomination to be made by their party in Union county. In a long editorial yesterday's Elizabeth Journal presented the county seat's claims upon the honor. Incidentally it indulged in some office-holding statistics that proved quite interesting. Here is what it says in this respect:

The city of Plainfield has the Sheriff, the Jail Warden, the County Attorney, the Assistant County Clerk, the Director of the Board of Freeholders and one member of the Assembly.

The city of Rahway has the Law Judge, the County Clerk, the Clerk of the Board of Freeholders and the Under Sheriff.

The city of Elizabeth has the Surrogate, the County Collector, the Prosecutor and two Assemblymen. It has had the Senator, and the list shows that with that official Elizabeth has still proportionately a much smaller number of county officers than either Plainfield or Rahway.

With perfect propriety, therefore, the city of Elizabeth may come before the Republican county convention and claim the right to name a candidate for Senator as a part of her equitable proportion of the county offices. But this, with her usual diffidence, she has not done. Elizabeth has, as already stated, been urged by other cities and by the townships, to present a candidate, and has responded to the request. If better men than Elizabeth can name, or stronger claims than Elizabeth can advance are presented before the next Republican county convention, without a doubt the convention will give them the consideration they deserve.

The candidates that Elizabeth offers are Judge Cross, former Mayor Rankin and William H. Corbin.

All About Mr. Martine.

James E. Martine has almost totally abstained from political actitity for the past few months, but somehow or other the political writers are bound to have him in the foremost ranks. Read the following from the New Jersey page of The Tribune:

James E. Martine, the evergreen and always effervescent "Farmer Orator" of Plainfield, has graciously consented, 'tis said, to accept the Democratic nomination for Senator in Union county. James has always been willing to contribute his share to the gayety of nations, and by accepting a nomination for something at this time he will put the general public under another obligation to him. His appearance as a candidate must necessarily cause great rejoicing, especially in the neighborhood of that stalwart Democratic organ. "The Summit Record."

The Elizabeth Journal has the following introductory comment in reproducing the editorial about Mr. Martine's political activity printed in The Daily Press the other day:

James E. Martine will not be the Democratic candidate for Congress in this district, for State Senator in this county or for any other elective office, if the Plainfield Press speaks by the book. It has this to say of the ever-genial and thoroughly gentlemanly "Farmer Orator."

Feminine Presumption.

The women of the Town Improvement Associatiod of Plainfield are agitating the subject of the Central Railroad of New Jersey building steps along the depot platform at the North Avenue station so as to reduce the height of the step that has to be taken to board the passenger coaches. It is claimed that the steps from the depot platform to the car platforms are so high as to make boarding a train a disagreeable and, at times, an embarassing performance for women.—Newark Evening News.

Isn't it a bit presumptious for women to want to vote if they can't get on a train alone. The political train has some very difficult platforms at times.

A Parental Pleasure.

When we mentioned Si Drake, the sage of Lincoln, as the man who would be the happiest delegate to the Republican State convention to vote for Foster Voorhees we overlooked the fact that the candidates own father would be accorded that supreme

MARION GRACE PERKINS.

This young woman has obtained notoriety in connection with the great Bridgeport, Conn., murder mystery. The dismembered body of the murdered girl was positively identified by Mr. Frank Perkins as that of his daughter. Miss Perkins returned to her home just as the ghastly remains were about to be interred.

pleasure. The elder Mr. Voorhees was up in the gallery with the Hunterdon county delegation, and voted for his son's nomination along with the rest. His grey head and smooth, venerable face were all that made him conspicuous.

A man whom the Summit Record familiarly speaks of as "Danny Mac" has been appointed on the police force of Summit. Judging from the biography of his life and the various things "Danny" has been mixed up in, as published by The Record, he is a terror. Still, sometimes men with bad records reform and make good policemen. The Record seems to forget that.

The promise of Mahlon Pitney to retire from Congress is signed and sealed. The Congressional convention of the Fourth district has named John I. Blair Reilly to make the fight in place of Mr. Pitney. Besides attending to his law business Mr. Pitney will undoubtedly bide his time for a chance at the New Jersey Governorship.

The Democrats in the Sixth Congressional district will put up a lively fight against Congressman Parker. The candidates mentioned include Colonel Campbell and Lieutenant-Colonel Brientnall, of the First Regiment, and George F. Fortmeyer, of East Orange. Colonel Campbell is, however, not considered prominently.

Newark Republican leaders are following the example set in Union county. They are discussing a plan to abolish Assembly nominations by districts altogether and nominate for the county of Essex at large. Newark proposes to lay hold of seven of the eleven Assemblymen the county is entitled to.

The Republican Congressional convention for this district will be held in the Lyceum Theatre, Elizabeth, on October 6th. Representative C. N. Fowler undoubtedly will be the nominee.

Millard F. Ross authorizes the New Brunswick Times to make the statement that he is not now, has not been and will not be a candidate for Congress from the Third Congressional district.

Elizabeth's twenty-five delegates to the Democratic State convention will be divided between Mayor Seymour, of Newark, and Senator Daly, of Jersey City.

With the Inter-State Fair and the Democratic State convention this week, Trenton will be well supplied with pumpkins and politics.

Platt says Roosevelt will be the Republican candidate for Governor in New York. There are others who say it looks Black for Platt.

New Jersey takes the cake again. Four Governors in one year is a record which no other commonwealth can show up.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

At the county convention Plainfield Republicans will present the name of Ernest R. Ackerman, of West Eighth street, as their candidate for Senator. Mr. Ackerman has expressed his willingness to accept the nomination, without any pledges of any sort. It was urged, in order to induce him to consent to run, that the nomination of a strong Plainfield Republican would strengthen the ticket, equalize the interest in the county, do much to harmonize local differences, and thereby contribute to the success of the Republican ticket.—Tribune.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

In securing Davis & Keogh's latest farce-comedy, "Have You Seen Smith" for the next attraction at Music Hall Manager Edwards have captured a play that will undoubtedly meet with the full approval of his patrons. According to competent critics who have seen it, "Have You Seen Smith?" is a bottle of sparkling, effervescent humor that bubbles over continually from the rise of the curtain till its fall and intoxicates with delight all who have the good fortune to see. The story deals principally with a quartette of people who have been divorced, each couple subsequently marrying the discarded half of the other people. Both families live in a double house, through the centre of which a dead line has been drawn. In spite of the decrees of court and the subsequent marriages, both men cherish a secret affection for their former wives and both plan to visit Asbury Park. On their arrival there each learns of the other's presence, and they endeavor to avoid a meeting, neither man knowing that the other has his wife along. They are assisted in their endeavors by "Willie B Dunn," and "Baron Moquette," and "J. John Smith," with the final result that a mutual discovery takes place. The third act brings them to a barber-shop of the "Baron" where their troubles are finally adjusted. The play abounds in ludicrous situations and quick, snappy, humorous action, and the lines are said to be a constant thunder-storm of wit. The piece has been elaborately mounted scenically. Both the Asbury Park scene and the barber-shop are novelties in the scenic artists line.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

The soldiers at Pompton Lake appreciate the action of The Daily Press in sending the boys a copy of the paper every night. Private Haurand told a Press reporter yesterday that each copy of the paper passed through thirty pairs of hands before it was thrown aside.

"To let" reads a real estate dealer's placard tacked up on the side of what is left of old "Battle Row" on West Fourth street since it was destroyed by fire late last May. There is no roof on the building and with the exception of the side walls, which are still standing, the place is a mass of blackened timbers and crumbling ruins, with shelter enough perhaps for rats, but not for human beings.

Gilbert Fletcher, of New York, spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Emmons, of Jackson avenue.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, Sept. 27.—John Fenner has returned from his two weeks' vacation, and has gone back to his situation in George Schenck's store.

Now that North avenue is all macadamized and rolled down hard and firm, the authorities are determined to put a stop to riding bicycles on the sidewalk. The ordinance has not been enforced lately, and will probably not be strictly enforced anywhere except in the business portion of the borough.

Mr. and Mrs. Adam Dealaman and Miss Ella Boice left today for Niagara Falls with the Grocers' Association of Newark. They will return Thursday.

F. J. Sylvester and family, of Poughkeepsie, have moved to the borough, and have rented James Craig's house on Dunellen avenue.

The Woman's Auxiliary of Holy Innocents' church will hold a missionary meeting tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Terry visited the Brooklyn Navy Yard yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Fredericks spent Sunday with relatives in Somerville.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

New Market, Sept. 27.—The Misses Gilpin, of New York, have been visiting Miss Mary Faulkner.

People who had occasion to pass the old Seventh-Day Baptist church yesterday afternoon, were startled by a low moaning sound that seemed to proceed from somewhere under the front steps. The sound was almost human, and frightened the children who heard it very much. Finally one young school boy, braver than the rest, got down on his knees and investigated, and found that it was a cat that had attempted to crawl through a hole, and contrary to the general opinion on such subjects could not draw her body through an aperture through which her head went quite easily. A few cuts with a knife liberated poor pussy who showed her thanks to her rescuer by faint meows.

Mrs. George Turner, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. C. H. Ward, has returned to her home in Philadelphia.

Miss Lillian Bowers, of Annandale, has been spending a week in town.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Sept. 27—Hervey Marsh is managing a boys' race to be held over the Mountain avenue course Saturday afternoon, October 1st, at 5:30 o'clock. A number of the boys in the village have promised to enter and a good race is looked for, as some of the little fellows can push a wheel pretty fast.

Rev. Mr. Peterson, of Dunellen, occupied the pulpit in the Baptist church Sunday morning. In the evening Rev. Mr. Taft, a missionary, who has labored for ten years in Japan, gave a very interesting talk upon the missionary work being done in that country. Rev. Mr. Braker preached in New York city.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Westfield, Sept. 27—Mrs. Elizabeth Parmentier, widow of the late Joseph H. Parmentier, died Sunday afternoon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. R. Brainerd, on Prospect street. Mrs. Parmentier was 76 years of age and was apparently in good health until her death, which was caused by heart failure. She had been a resident of Union county for the past 45 years. The funeral services were held from her late residence this afternoon at 3 o'clock with the Rev. Henry Ketcham, the former pastor of the Congregational church, officiating. Interment was in Fairview cemetery.

Phillip Wesp, who lives at Germantown, near this town, was arrested recently on the complaint of his daughter, who claimed that he had been opening letters that were addressed to her. The worriment drove him out of his head and Saturday evening he was running around the yard at his home, when Florin Mack, a neighbor, tried to quiet him. This made Mrs. Julia Zimmerman, the daughter, angry, and she came down town and swore out a warrant for Mack's arrest. The hearing was held in the town rooms last evening before Justice Collins, and Mack was discharged, as the witnesses all testified that they had seen no disorderly conduct on the part of Mack. The case against Wesp comes up before Commissioner Whitehead at Newark this afternoon.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular; free.

THE CUBAN BLOODHOUNDS.

They Were Introduced Into the South to Hunt Slaves.

The first Cuban bloodhounds landed upon this continent were imported two hundred years ago by Spanish planters of Louisiana, then Spanish territory. We all know what the dons were about 1700. Negroes were cheaper then, and if a slave gave trouble it did not much matter that the bloodhound's hold upon his throat was broken only by the tearing of the flesh and tendons. Many times in those days the fugitive negro did not live after his capture. If he succeeded in gaining a tree, his olive-skinned masters shot him out as they would a squirrel. If on the ground when caught the dogs killed him, sometimes before the arrival of the horsemen, who had ridden hard to be in at the death.

The Cuban hound was a valuable dog, and he was well treated. In some of the old court records of Louisiana are bills of sale of him. In instances the prices ran as high as $800 a pair. The breed spread all through the south, although I have never heard of the dogs being used as man hunters in the upper tier of southern states. I doubt that one has ever been laid upon the trail of a negro in Virginia, North Carolina or Maryland.

As a matter of course, the planters of this century were careful to protect their slaves as far as possible from attacks by the animals. This was generally easy. The runaway slave invariably made for the swamp at the back of the plantation. It contained many streams and lagoons, which aided him in throwing the dogs off the scent. If the worst came to the worst he could always climb a tree.

The bloodhound is now used only in the pursuit of criminals. Every southern penitentiary has a brace or more of them. They are not infrequently a part of the sheriff's outfit. The breed is not always pure, but the dogs serve their purpose better than fairly well. Their keenness of scent is one of the most remarkable things in nature, though it is of value chiefly in the more thinly settled region. It seems incredible that the mere temporary pressure of a man's boot or shoe upon the ground should leave a traceable scent for twenty-four hours, providing that there has been no rain, but there is no doubt that it does. Sometimes in the south a murderer breaks jail. Until the universal introduction of chilled steel cages this was not a difficult matter. Dogs are telegraphed for at a distance probably of 150 miles. They arrive a day after the escape. They are led in leach to the point where the criminal is supposed to have made his exit and uncoupled. They take up the scent instantly and follow it rapidly. The man must have crossed much water or confused his trail with the hurrying footsteps of dozens of others to throw them off. Always supposing that twenty-four hours is the extreme limit of "law" allowed the fugitive, the bloodhounds are the best means of effecting his capture. Having far to travel, they do not bay. They have no breath to waste.

In the first canto of "The Lady of the Lake," Scott remarks that "the deep-mouthed bloodhound's mellow bay resounded up the rocky way." That was the English bloodhound. The English bloodhound, or the bloodhound of the continent for that matter, not only bays, but has a remarkably sonorous and beautiful voice. He "opens," as it is technically termed, upon a cold trail and keeps it up until the quarry is sighted or run down.

He is of great size, with deep chest, powerful shoulders, massive head, drooping jaws and long ears, a remarkably sagacious and affectionate animal, courageous, though not especially savage, and one of the best friends man ever had. This hound is known in the old prints as the "sleuth" hound, or "slot" hound, taken from the old "sleuth" or "slot"—otherwise "trail"—of the deer. He is called the bloodhound, not because he is particularly fond of blood as a matter of diet, but because, having once found the blood-trail of a wounded animal, he follows it with wonderful stanchness. He will, in fact, unless taken off by force, follow it until he drops, and rising will stagger along until he falls again.

The English bloodhound is not used in the south. That is where Mrs. Stowe's error was made. The dog there is the Cuban bloodhound. He differs materially from his English cousin. He is larger, fiercer and swifter, with more of a bulldog cut about his head. He is probably a descendant of a bull cross. He is invariably mute until his quarry is sighted. Almost any dog will give tongue when he comes within view of the object of his pursuit after a long chase. This dog is not a snapper, as is the English. He is a pinning dog, which comes probably from his bull strain. Once his teeth are locked, they can be disengaged only by the ingenious method of grasping his nostrils and shutting off his breath. —H. S. Canfield in Chicago Times Herald.

SLEEPING IN SIGNAL TOWERS.

A New Attitude of Railroad Managers to Men Guilty of a Grave Fault.

When the soldiers sleep on picket duty in time of war they are liable to be courtmartialed and shot. Soldiers know that, and still not even the fear of death is sufficient to keep them awake always. A momentary lapse of alert, waging intelligence on the part of a railroad man sometimes means the loss of life and property. When railroad men are found asleep at their posts they are not taken out and shot; they are simply discharged. At least that was the invariable rule up to a very recent time; no railroad officials would even inquire into the particulars of a case of this kind. Recently there has arisen a promise of greater leniency with regard to the man found asleep on duty. Some railroad men have worked on the question carefully and intelligently. They have considered the fact that not even fear of death will keep the sentinel awake always, and have realized that the lower penalty of discharge must therefore be ineffective sometimes. They have reasoned that men have always slept and probably always will sleep at certain times when they should be awake. Beginning with this fact, there has been evolved a change of attitude on the part of the railroad toward its employees. A man is charged to stay awake just as emphatically as ever before; but the mere fact of being asleep is no longer considered the gravest infraction of duty. The thing that men are discharged for under this new system is the giving of a wrong signal. That is, they are discharged for making mistakes that might cause a wreck, whatever may have been the reason for making them. Going to sleep, it is argued, is not in itself the gravest mistake. The mental attitude of the railroad toward its employee under this system is something like this:

"Don't go to sleep! In the name of everything good and holy don't go to sleep! But if you do, wake up thoroughly before you act. Don't touch a signal before you count twenty-five, or before you wash your face, or before you do something else to convince yourself that you are wide enough awake to act reasonably and rationally."

Investigators have found that a man who has slept will upon waking take the most desperate chances to cover up his fault when discharge is the inevitable result of detection. Take for an example the case of a tower operator on a block system where the home system is normally set at danger. A man, and especially a very tired man, never knows upon waking how long he has been asleep. It might seem to him hours since he let the last train into his block. In reality only one short minute might have elapsed since he leaned his tired head upon his desk and sank into the unconsciousness of utter exhaustion. If he woke up and saw a train standing at the tower his first wild impulse, under the old system of discharge, would be to throw things wide open and take the chances of a clear track. He would do this rather than resort to the telegraph, which would inform him as to the position of trains, but would also inform the despatcher's office of his condition. If anything had happened to the forward train and it had come to a stop without protecting its rear (it is generally some such combination of errors that causes a wreck under modern methods of railroading), the rear train would inevitably crash into it and spill things. Not even an elaborate interlocking system, such as is in operation on the New York Central, is an absolute protection, because machines get out of order and make as serious mistakes as men. For the safety of lives and property it is necessary to depend upon the employees, and it may also be said that no present employee of any railroad has ever made a mistake, when you consider a "mistake" in the technical railroad sense of having caused a wreck. Railroads discharge men every day for proving themselves human, and no railroad will take a man from another road without a clean record.

It speaks well for this new method that wherever it has been tried it has continued in use.—New York Sun.

Als der Gefängnißverwalter des königlichen Amtsgerichtsgefängnisses kürzlich in der Frühe die Zellen revidiren wollte, wurde er von einem Gefangenen, der in der Nacht während des Gewitters den Ofen beseitigt hatte und dann durch das Feuerloch in den Gang geschlüpft war, überfallen. Der Gefangnißverwalter war kräftig genug, den Angreifer nach heftigem Ringen zu überwältigen.

Neustadt. Jüngst am Nachmittag platzte bei einer Reparaturarbeit am Gaskessel der neuen Gasfabrik der Gasbeutel. Vier Arbeiter wurden dabei in einen Graben geschleudert, wo sie betäubt aufgefunden und nach längeren Wiederbelebungs-Versuchen wieder zu sich gebracht wurden. Inzwischen hatte sich der gefüllte Gaskessel entleert, so daß die Anstalt Mühe hatte, das für den Abend nöthige Gas zu beschaffen.

HOW BIG GUNS ARE AIMED.

The Range-Finder Used on Seacoast Defences and Battleships.

The range-finder used on our seacoast defenses is not a Government secret, but is a patended appliance, an improvement upon a system that has been in use since ancient times. There are in use three sets of apparatus somewhat different from each other, which were invented by Captain Watkins, an English engineer; Lieutenant Lewis, of our army, and Lieutenant Fisk, of our navy. They were very complicated, and it is difficult to explain their operation so it can be understood by laymen. All such inventions are an appliance of the mathematical principle that, knowing the base of a triangle and the two angles at its extremities, one can calculate the distance between them. On coast defenses the base of the triangle is permanent, with fixed objects to mark its terminus. The angles are ascertained by observations through instruments made for that purpose, and when they are known there is a series of printed calculations covering all possible situations which enables the gunner to catch the distance of his target at a glance.

At sea, when a vessel is moving, the base is fixed and measured upon the deck. A telescope is placed at either end of that line, and the lenses of both are focussed upon the object to be shot at. An observation is then taken, a rapid mathematical calculation is made, the book of tables is referred to, and in a moment the gunner may know whether the enemy's cruiser is five and one half or six and one-fourth miles away, or any other given distance. This, of course, requires a great deal of technical skill and mathematical ability, but it is said to be absolutely accurate, and the apparatus is so sensitive and regulated to such a fine degree that by turning a key a monster gun weighing a hundred tons can be instantly adjusted so that with a given quantity of powder it will carry a projectile of a given weight exactly the distance which the range-finder has determined. Of course, the gunner must know the contents of his cartridge, because that is a material factor in his problem. He must also make allowances for the wind, for the resistance of the atmosphere, for the curvature of the earth and for the movement of the enemy's fleet if it is in motion. The range-finder is, however, a great deal more accurate than the human eye, and persons with defective vision will often insist that a gun is badly aimed and find out to the contrary after the shot is fired.

Although we have guns on our battle ships and in the fortresses on the coast that will carry a projectile thirteen miles it would be folly to attempt to use them at that distance, because, owing to the curvature of the earth, it would be impossible to see the target. A man in a small boat upon the surface of the water cannot see more than four miles. From the bridge of an ordinary man-of-war, which may be thirty feet from the water, a man with good eyesight or with a glass can see eight or nine miles. A man at the masthead can see ten or twelve miles, but very indistinctly, and that is the limit of human of human vision on a level surface.—W. E. Curtis, in Chicago Record.

It Pleases Pickpockets.

"It is very kind of the railway companies to put up those notices, "Beware of pickpockets!' If it wasn't for them signs we pickpockets would have to go out of the business," said a pickpocket to the policeman who had arrested him.

"These signs were put up to spoil your trade," replied the constable.

"But they don't," said the pickpocket. "As soon as a country bumpkin reads the notice, if he has any money he puts his hand on it. We know then he has money and where he keeps it. We follow him up, and as soon as he takes his hands out of his pockets we put ours in. Twig? Great thing fer the perfesh, these notices. Don't tell me after this that corporations have no souls."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

It did not take Evangeline long to recover from the shock of hearing that Lilac assuredly was to marry Mark Mowbray, and that the Californian girl felt herself bound in honour not to break off the engagement which she had entered into when she felt sure that Roy did not love her. The tone in which Lilac made her announcement was sufficient to tell her that all her love was still Roy's. She put her arm tenderly around the heart-broken girl's waist.

"You must not say that it is too late, Lilac dear," she said gently. "It is not as if you were married already. You must tell Mr. Mowbray everything, and he will release you from your promise. It is not to be thought of that you should ruin your own life and Roy's just because of a mistake."

Lilac sat cold and motionless, a picture of stony despair, and did not answer.

"I can ask you now, Lilac dear," her friend went on, "which of them is it that you really love—Roy or this Mr. Mowbray, whom you say that you are going to marry to-morow?"

"No, no—it is to late to ask now!" moaned Lilac.

Evangeline began to grow impatient with her.

"It is not too late until you are married. You know that it would be wrong of you to marry Mr. Mowbray while your heart was with Roy. I do not see how you can hesitate."

"But I told Mark that it was quite certain that there was no chance of my changing; and he has been very kind to me," said Lilac hopelessly.

"Of course he has been kind to you! Nobody could help being that!" said Evangeline with spirit. "He cannot expect your heart in exchange for a little kindness—can he? And, when you told him that you would not change, it was because you were fully persuaded that Roy was going to marry me—wasn't it? I do not know how much of your story you have told to Mr. Mowbray."

"He knows how much I care for Roy, and he understands why I have promised to marry him—because he is my only friend in the world and cares for me so much."

"Then the case is very simple. Your promise is quite conditional upon Roy's not caring for you, and, since he is really breaking his heart over you, the promise does not hold. Of course you think that you must make Roy suffer rather than the other. That is the worst of us silly women! We always jump to the conclusion that the thing is right which costs us most. But, thank Heaven, you have a disinterested person to advise you; and I say most decidedly, without a shadow of a doubt, that your only right course is to tell Mr. Mowbray that you have made a mistake. I wish that I had brought Roy with me to tell you so! He thinks that you fell in love with Mr. Mowbray on the journey. Men are so blind! And I did not like to suggest the real story until I had made sure that it was the right one. Of course I did not suspect it myself until I saw your letter, you silly foolish darling!"

She stooped to kiss the girl's cold cheek; and, melted by the caress, Lilac burst into tears, and, throwing her arms around Evangeline's neck, sobbed as if her heart would break. For ten minutes her friend could think of nothing but soothing her. Then, when at last the overwrought girl grew calmer, Evangeline thought it was time to look for some return for all her exhortations.

"You will ask Mr. Mowbray to release you—won't you, Lilac dear?" she said gently, as if she were talking to a child; and Lilac nodded. "Go to him now," said Evangeline, who was still rather afraid of her friend's passion for self-sacrifice; and she was sorry to hear that the author was not in the house, and was not expected to return until late in the evening. He had gone up to London to make some necessary arrangements with his publishers before leaving England on the morrow for his honeymoon, and it would be several hours before his return.

"And the marriage was to take place to-morrow?" said Evangeline, anxiously.

"Yes—at ten o'clock."

"Can I remain here with you until Mr. Mowbray returns?" she asked; and Lilac, well pleased, agreed. She was afraid of being left alone with her own thoughts.

"Come, and I will introduce you to Mrs. Mowbray," she said, rising and leading the way into the room where Mark's mother sat anxiously awaiting the result of the interview, which, from the first moment of hearing Evangeline's name, she had feared boded no good for her son's happiness.

The marks of tears on Lilac's face made her more nervous still, and there was a pathetic anxiety in her kindly old face as she greeted the heiress and indorsed Lilac's proposal that she should stay to dinner. Lilac herself had run away to wash away the telltale traces of tears, and the old lady seized the opportunity to question Evangeline.

"I am afraid that you have brought dear Lilac important news, Miss Garth," she said. "I see that she has been crying."

"For happiness only, I think, Mrs. Mowbray," said Evangeline, who was too full of Roy's fate and her hopes and fears on his account to consider the Mowbrays' view of the situation; and she went on to explain with her natural frankness. "Lilac has been acting under a false impression, and I have fortunately been able to open her eyes. You have heard, I believe, that she was engaged to my cousin, Sir Roydon Garth, and came to England with the view of making the acquaintance of his friends before their marriage?"

"Yes, yes!" said the old lady, too impatient to listen to the history, with which she was already acquainted. "I hope that you have done nothing to make her regret the step she has taken in engaging herself to my son?"

For a few moments Evangeline reflected.

"She did not claim to be in love with Mr. Mowbray," she said tentatively; and the old lady answered with a quivering voice and an anxiety that touched Evangeline more than she cared to admit to herself.

"No—Lilac was quite honest with Mark; but she has promised to marry him, and if anything makes her draw back now, I am sure that it will break my boy's heart."

There were tears in the old lady's eyes as she spoke, and Evangeline felt very uncomfortable.

"But you would not like your son to marry Lilac if all her thoughts were centered on somebody else?" she said gently.

"I am sure that she would love Mark in time. She could not help it, because he is so good, so kind, and he loves her so passionately. He has loved her from the moment that they first met; and when he thought that she was unattainable, he went about like a man who had no hope in life. It made me miserable; and now, if anything occurs to bar his happiness just as it seems assured, I think that it will kill him."

To Evangeline's dismay the old lady began to weep.

"I cannot tell you how sorry I am to hear that Mr. Mowbray's happiness is so bound up in Lilac," she said, wiping the tears from her own eyes, "because I am sure that it would not be right for her to marry him; and I cannot help telling her so. It would scarcely seem right if my cousin did not care for her; but, now that she knows that she made a terrible mistake in believing that he did not care for her, and that he loves her quite as passionately and devotedly as your son can, I do not see how she can go on with the marriage, or how you can wish it. It seems as if either Mr. Mowbray or my cousin must have his life's happiness ruined; and Lilac certainly loves my cousin, which makes all the difference."

Mrs. Mowbray did nothing but weep; and Evangeline, who was feeling more miserable every moment, was glad to hear Lilac's step outside and to have the tete-a-tete interrupted.

Lilac came in with a face like sunshine. It seemed as if she had washed away with her tears all her doubts and misgivings, and thought now of nothing but the new wonderful fact that Roy loved her after all as she loved him, and that Evangeline's happiness did not depend upon the sacrifice of her own. For a moment she had forgotten Mark; but the sight of his mother's grief recalled him, and her beautiful eyes clouded over at once.

"You have told her?" she asked Evangeline in an undertone; and her friend nodded—she could not trust herself to speak. Lilac glanced once more at the old lady, who was trying in vain to repress her sobs, then threw herself impulsively upon her knees beside her. "Dear Mrs. Mowbray, I am so sorry for your disappointment and Mark's! I am really not worth it. He will find a much better wife than I should have made him; and I could not—it would not be right to marry him, would it, when Roy is ill for love of me, and I care so much for him?"

Mrs. Mowbray stroked her hair caressingly.

"You are bound in honor to Mark, Lilac dear."

"But he will release me, I know. He is so just and generous!" said Lilac confidently.

"And if he does not?" asked the old lady, as Evangeline had done.

Lilac answered solemnly.

"Then I will keep my promise. But I am sure that he will release me when he knows. Mark! What is that?"

It was the sound of a cab stopping before the house.

"It cannot be Mark yet," said Mrs. Mowbray. "He said that he could not be home till after dinner."

But as she spoke the novelist's voice was heard in the hall. He had finished his business in town a little earlier than he expected, and had hastened to get back to his bride-elect.

Evangeline was very glad that he had come. She was anxious to have everything settled and take Lilac back with her to Delverton, where she would telegraph to Roy at Westwood to meet them.

"You had better go to him and tell him all before he sees us together," said Evangeline, who felt that it would be very unpleasant for her to meet and have to speak to this Mr. Mowbray before he knew the object of her visit; and Lilac bowed her head in silence and opened the door.

Evangeline would have given a last word of advice and encouragement, but she caught the old lady's pathetic eyes fixed upon her face and the words froze upon her lips. She listened to Lilac's retreating footsteps as she ran down the half-dozen steps into the hall, and then to the sound of Mark Mowbray's voice. Then a door closed.

"They are gone into the study," said Mrs. Mowbray. "Oh, my poor boy, my poor boy!"

She began to sob again, and, as Evangeline was too anxious to speak, the two sat quietly, both wondering with widely-differing hopes what was passing between the two people in the study, who, but for Evangeline's visit, would have been husband and wife on the morrow.

An hour went by without a word being exchanged between them. Then the old lady broke the long silence.

"He will not release her," she said, or they would not have spent such a time discussing the matter. I am unable to see how anybody can expect him to do so."

Evangeline had already become very anxious on the point. She was about to reply rather hotly, when Mrs. Mowbray held up a warning finger.

"Hush! That was the opening of the study-door. Now we shall know."

They both listened eagerly; but they heard no voices, only the sweep of a dress as Lilac passed the door and went on up-stairs. The old lady waited until the sound had ceased, and then arose.

"She has gone to her room," she said. "I will go and see my boy, if you will excuse me."

Evangeline bowed.

"And I will go to Lilac. Is her room on the floor above?"

"Yes—the first door that you come to."

Evangeline had expected to see her friend in tears; but, when, after a preliminary tap, she opened the door of her room, she found the girl dry-eyed, but with a look of hopeless misery upon her white face which was far more expressive of grief than any tears could have been.

Lilac crossed the room as her friend entered, and spoke in a dull, despairing voice.

"He refuses to release me."

"Then you must release yourself," said the heiress indignantly—"nothing could be more dishonorable than marriage in such circumstances! Mr. Mowbray has sunk in my estimation. You must not marry him!"

Lilac answered with hopeless determination—

"I must, if he will not release me."

"Then I shall have to see him at once and make him release you!" said Evangeline, her temper raised to white heat by the unexpected refusal; and, on the spur of the moment, she ran down stairs and into the study.

She had expected to find Mrs. Mowbray with her son; but the old lady had been met at the study door with the information that Mark wished to be alone, and, when Evangeline entered, she found him by himself.

She introduced herself breathlessly, and, before Mark had any time to protest, launched into an appeal to his better nature, accompanied by a review of the whole situation from her point of view.

Mark, standing by the mantlepiece, with a white drawn face and tightened lips, listened without a word till she had finished. His face looked very different from the bright almost boyish one with sunny blue eyes which Lilac had first seen turned towards her on the deck of the Gemini, for Lilac's appeal had come as a great shock to him when he was congratulating himself that all danger of losing her was past.

Evangeline however was far too indignant with him to feel any pity for the evident signs of suffering upon his handsome face.

"Your love must be a selfish one," she said, "since you think about it rather than of Lilac's happiness."

Mark answered at last.

"Pardon me, Miss Garth," he said gravely—"you misjudge me. My refusal to release Miss Marvel from her engagement arises from the deep interest I take in her happiness. I have never met Sir Roydon Garth; but from all that I have heard I do not think that Miss Marvel's future would be safe in his hands. Although he pretended to be in love with her in San Francisco, he did not marry her there, or even allow her the privilege of considering herself definitely engaged to him, but sent her instead to endure the ordeal of a visit to his relatives while her position was undetermined. He believed unquestioningly an absurd charge made against her by a jealous woman and her fatuous father; and, the instant that she had released him from the shadow of an engagement existing between them, he proposed marriage to—yourself. These do not appear to me to be the actions of a man who is really in love, or who is likely to make any woman who cares for him happy. I think that Miss Marvel's happiness is safer in my own hands."

"But you do not know Roy or you could not speak like that!" cried Evangeline, in distress at this formidable array of charges against her cousin. "If you knew him, you would be sure that he is one of the best and most unselfish and devoted men in the world, and that he loves Lilac even more than you can do."

"I question the last possibility," said Mark, with a grave smile. "If Sir Roydon Garth could show me that he is all you say, or could even satisfy me with regard to the charges I have made against him, I should reconsider my decision; but, if he himself takes no step, I shall make Miss Marvel my wife at the appointed time to-morrow."

"Then to-morrow Sir Roydon Garth shall certainly satisfy you," said Evangeline, jumping at the chance which the novelist himself suggested; "I will telegraph to him at once. At present he is thinking that Lilac left the Hall simply because she preferred you to himself; and he has not yet recovered from the illness which her departure caused."

She paused only to run to tell Lilac of the result of her interview before setting out at once for the telegraph-office. Lilac's attitude annoyed her.

"But what if he does not come?" she said despairingly. "He still thinks that I cared for Mark."

"I am going to explain all that," said Evangeline confidently; and Lilac rejoined doubtingly—

"How can you explain in a telegram?"

"Trust me!" said the heiress; and the next moment she was out in the street composing the text of the telegram as she walked to the nearest post office.

It's the best proof for it comes from Plainfield.

Citizens read this case in point:

Mrs. W. W. Mills, of No. 86 Summit Ave, says:— "Ever since the birth of my last child I have suffered at times with a severe pain across the small of my back and in my hips. If I did any lifting or stooping, my back became lame and sore and though I used plasters they only helped me for the time being. I was feeling very bad last spring when I had my attention called to Doan's Kidney Pills. They were so highly recommended for troubles like mine that I got a box at L. W. Randolph's drug store. I felt their good effects in a few days and when I had finished the one box my back was better and stronger and I had much more energy to attend to my household duties. Doan's Kidney Pills have my endorsement and I am always pleased to reccommend them."

THE CASE OF JACK.

By Juliet Wilbur Tompkins.

"I don't see how I ever came to marry an Englishman," said Mrs. Barry, not for the first time.

"It was the most sensible thing you ever did," said her husband from behind his paper. She came and sat on the arm of his chair.

"I do believe you think I'm in love with you still," she said.

"Well, it looks that way," he answered with British conceit, holding the paper to one side, so that her head might not come between him and the Venezuelan question.

"I don't mind about you," she went on. "You've lived here so long that you're almost as nice as an American, and your voice has nearly lost its English genuflections——"

"Dear me, I must get an English governess," he interposed.

"But sometimes I'm worried about Jack. He isn't one thing or the other, and if we should ever go to war he would hate to fight against England when his grandfather sends him such lovely presents!"

"My son fight against England!" exclaimed Mr. Barry. "I'd like to see him try it, that's all. He will find he has to settle with his father first."

"But, Harold, if he was born here, of course, his natural feelings would be with America, and you know how obstinate Jack is when he makes up his mind. Why, I wouldn't go against my country, not if you commanded me on your bended knees, and he would feel it even more strongly, being a man. You would simply make a breach between you if you tried to interfere."

"A few years in Oxford will change all that," said Mr. Barry, turning over his paper.

"Considering that he isn't going there——" said his wife, decidedly.

"Oh, he's not?"

"If he should it would end in his living there and marrying some dowdy English girl with a six-inch fringe and a solemn reverence for the men of her family, and how would you like that?"

"Better than a nervous American daughter-in-law with a six-inch waist, and no respect for anything in heaven or earth," was the imperturbable answer.

"Of course, you mean Alice," said his wife, indignantly, "though I'm sure she isn't a bit nervous, and nobody laces now. Both her mother and I think Alice and Jack were made for each other, whatever your opinion is."

"H'm." Mr. Barry was deep in his paper.

"Alice hasn't as much character as Jack," she added presently, "but she is sweet and good and lovable, and I don't see why they shouldn't be very happy together. It doesn't matter if he is rather the brighter of the two."

"Is the engagement announced?" asked the husband, sarcastically, but the question was ignored.

"After Jack has graduated from Harvard we will throw them together a great deal," she said. "I hope Jack won't develop the English bashfulness. Was your father a shy man about love making and such things, Harold?"

"Why, he had rather done with that when I met him, but I should fancy he was timid."

"I am so glad. I was afraid it had skipped a generation and was coming out in Jack."

"If it does she probably won't mind helping him out a bit since we are in sensible America. I don't think Jack will need it, though. He inherits considerable determination, not to say obstinacy, from his grandfather."

"That hasn't skipped a generation," said Mrs. Barry, pointedly.

"I've come into enough of it to know that at the proper time Jack is going to Oxford," was the calm reply.

"Which will simply spoil everything," said Mrs. Barry, impatiently. "Alice will be married long before he gets back, and he himself will probably be a victim. Oh, Uncle Dan," as the door opened to admit an elderly man, "you've come just in time. We want a lawyer."

"Has it come to that?" asked the newcomer, looking grieved.

"Harold says that Jack isn't an American at all and will have to join the English army when we go to war," Mrs. Barry said, indignantly. "Just because he himself happened to be born over there. He wants Jack to go to Oxford and marry an English girl whom we won't know or be fond of, when here is Alice just cut out for him, and we've got it all planned. Now tell us, as a lawyer, what Jack's nationality is."

"Well," began Uncle Dan, seriously, "as a child of an American mother and born in this country, I shall call him an American citizen."

"There!" interrupted Mrs. Barry.

"And, being such, he will probably choose for himself not only his college and his wife, but his nationality. If a freeborn American wants to consider himself an Englishman, I don't know anything that is going to stop him."

"That is about it," said Mr. Barry, in a tone of satisfaction.

"But what is your hurry about deciding?" Uncle Dan asked. "How old is the boy, anyway?"

"Just three months to-day," said Mrs. Barry, proudly. "Stay to dinner and you shall see him."

"All the same," said her husband, "until he is old enough to decide for himself, Jack is going to pray for the queen, God bless her!"

"I'll spank him every time he does," said the American half of the coalition. And then they all laughed and went out to dinner.—The Wave.

ORIGIN OF THE PHONOGRAPH.

A Little Song and the Pricking of a Finger Gave the Inspiration.

Possibly the most widely known of all Edison's inventions are the telephone and phonograph, and the latter was discovered by the merest accident—namely, an accident happening to the right man.

"I was singing," says Mr. Edison, "to the mouthpiece of a telephone, when the vibration of the voice sent the fine steel point into my finger. That set me thinking. If I could record the actions of the point, and send the point over the same surface afterward, I saw no reason why the thing would not talk. I tried the experiment first on a strip of telegraph paper, and found that the point made an alphabet.

"I shouted the words 'Halloa! halloa!' into the mouthpiece, ran the paper back over the steel point and heard a faint 'Halloa! halloa!' in return. I determined to make a machine that would work accurately, and gave my assistants instructions, telling them what I had discovered. They laughed at me. That's the whole story. The phonograph is the result of the pricking of a finger."

All this sounds remarkably simple, and Mr. Edison has a habit of speaking of his inventions as though they had dropped from the clouds; but needless to say, after the principle of the phonograph had been discovered, there were days and nights of anxious thought and experiment before the famous talking machine, with which even the nursery is familiar to-day, had reached its present perfection.

RESENTED THE INSULT.

Mary Didn't Propose to Have Her Sobriety Questioned.

Mary G. Johnson is a large and massive colored woman who was recently employed as cook in the family of Herman Simmonds, of Watchung avenue. Because she claims Mrs. Simmonds owes her a month's wages, $14, she brought suit against her in Justice Mosher's court, and the case came to trial this morning.

Mary has worked for Mrs. Simmonds for about five years, so she said, with an occasional intermission, and during that time had no fault to find about getting her money. But last June Mary went to New York one night and didn't return until the following night or early morning, and then, the defendant claimed, in an intoxicated condition.

Mary explained her long absence from the house by saying she had lost herself in the mazes of New York, coming from Thompson street to the Liberty street ferry.

When Counselor W. K. McClure, who represented the defendant, suggested to the girl that perhaps she had been drunk that night, Mary flew into a rage, seized her hat and would have left the court room had it not been for the united efforts of the Justice, the lawyers and half a dozen spectators, more or less.

Mrs. Simmonds claimed that she had paid Mary in full and didn't owe her anything. At the conclusion of the case Justice Mosher reserved his decision.

Pope & Runyon represented the plaintiff.

ABOUT THE DAILY PRESS.

The Popular Paper a Subject of Comment in Elizabeth and Westfield.

The Westfield Republican makes a list of the newspapers in Union county opposed to the Westfield avenue trolley franchise under the Bergen plan. It names the Plainfield Press, Cranford Chronicle, Summit Record, Union County Democrat, Contractor and Gazette, and the Republican.

The Plainfield Press is indignant at being classed with such papers and as an opponent of the Bergen plan, and makes flat denial of the accusation. But look at the list. What is it? Simply a list of most of the Democratic papers in the county.

And this is the keynote of the whole opposition to the magnificent plan to broaden and improve Westfield avenue at no expense to the people of the county, and to equip it with an electric road for their convenience. It is chiefly partisan opposition. Not only the most of the papers, but also the people who oppose it are partisan.

There are some whose individual interests lead them to refuse their assent to the plan, but these are few in number; for the most part the opposition is on party lines, as shown by the list of papers published in Westfield's newest paper.—Elizabeth Journal.

The Plainfield Daily Press doesn't admit that it is fighting the Bergen plan, but it is quite unnecessary to say that where there is conspiracy against the common weal, the able Plainfield daily fights it every time.—Westfield Republican.

Robberies Reported.

CHINESE CHARACTERISTICS.

They are Possessed With Strange Ideas of Economy.

The spirit of economy in the Chinese race transcends all that can be imagined. The smallest particle of matter is utilized. The old cast off account book of the merchant is cut into pieces and oiled to serve instead of glass, in windows or lanterns. A coolie who has a six hours' march with a heavy burden will return to his point of departure without having broken his fast, in order to save the two cents his breakfast would have cost away from home. Nothing is more curious than to see them eat, although, with their famous chopsticks, they do not perform all the wonderful feats generally supposed. Everything is served them in bowls, or saucers, and with the chopsticks they raise the pieces of meat or fish to the mouth, with sufficient grace. Each one has a bowl of rice, which he holds near his lips, and with the aid of the chopsticks he pushes the contents into his mouth. It is curious to see them pick up with their chopsticks the grains of rice that fall on the ground. The children are taught this art from their earliest years, nothing must be lost, not even the smallest grain.—St. Louis Republican.

Salutes on the Sea.

There is no naval ceremony more rigidly observed than the firing of salutes. It is almost a matter of religion with the sea dogs to see that every one entitled to a salute gets it, and in its proper manner, too. Whenever the president is on a warship all other ships of the fleet, and naval stations which they pass, fire a salute of twenty-one guns. When a visiting officer boards a ship he is received by side boys. They stand on each side of the gangway, every hand going up in a salute as the visitor passes. Every man on a warship, from admiral to apprentice boy, salutes the Stars and Stripes on board the vessel, which salute is returned by the officer of the deck. Boat salutes are given by tossing the oars, that is, holding them upright in the air with the blades turned sideways. All officers and men, whether dressed in uniform or not, salute their senior officer on meeting.—Philadelphia Call.

Clock Sympathy.

If we place two clocks on the same shelf and adjust their pendulums to swing in exact unison, and set one of them to running, in the course of time the other will start up in sympathy. Each sound impulse caused by the vibration of the pendulum of the clock that is running is communicated to the other pendulum. Each successive impulse adds to the swing of the sympathetic pendulum, which begins in an exceedingly small way.

Roberts, wrote a letter to the latter this morning and disclosed his whereabouts which is at his boarding place in the West End. Oft Adjourned Case.

Appealed the Case.

Instead of paying a judgment of $3.48, D. J. Galbraith, of North avenue, has appealed a contract case from Justice Mosher's court to the Common Pleas at Elizabeth, and hopes to have the decision reversed when it comes to trial this fall.

—The quarterly meeting of the Woman's Home Mission Society of the First Baptist church will be held tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock in the lecture room of the church.

CRANE STANDS WELL.

BUT THERE ARE MANY OTHER FAVORITE SONS.

Democratic State Convention Held at Trenton Today—Adjourned Until 2:30 o'Clock Without Action—Union County Delayed the Convention.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Trenton, Sept. 28—There are waves on the Democratic sea of State politics. In fact there are many of them. So many that it is difficult to tell just exactly how things stand with the Democrats of New Jersey. The recent troubles of the party in this State have tended to clog the State machinery of the party and the result is apparent here today. There is a host of candidates for the Gubernatorial nomination and each has his following. Among them all, however, Prosecutor Elvin W. Crane, of Newark, stands the most prominent, with General Richard A. Donnelly, of this city, close behind.

The wheels of the party machinery have not revolved as tranquilly as many of the party would have liked to see. There has been too much confusion and delay which, with the booms of the various candidates, have combined to that end. There is plenty of enthusiasm, however, and every good Democrat in the city is supremely confident of the final election of the candidate whoever he happens to be.

The general uncertainty that prevails was apparent among the Union county delegation. The caucus of the delegation was called for 10:30 o'clock in room 26 in the Trenton House. The rank and file of the delegation crowded into the room, but the leaders failed to appear on time. At 11 the caucus was adjourned to the Democratic Lyceum, where there was more room. Half an hour later, the meeting was called together by John L. Crowell, of Rahway, chairman of the county committee.

Plainfield had nearly her whole delegation present and the places of the absentees were soon filled. J. M. Connelly, of Elizabeth, was made chairman, and J. Coudert, of Cranford, secretary.

A committee composed of J. L. Crowell, of Rahway; Captain Collins, of Elizabeth; John Lane, of Summit; E. D. Moffett, of Plainfield, and J. M. C. Marsh, of Westfield, was appointed to examine the credentials of the delegations from the different townships and cities.

In the selection of the county honors at the convention Peter Egenloff, of Elizabeth, was selected as vice-president, and Thomas Lane, of Summit, as secretary.

There was a lively contest over the election of a State committeeman. The contestants in the race were W. D. Wolfskiel, of Elizabeth, the present incumbent; Peter Egenloff, of Elizabeth, and Thomas F. Lane, of Summit. Nobody received a majority on the first ballot and so they tried again. The second ballot resulted in the selection of Peter Egenloff.

The convention committeemen were chosen as follows: Rules, James Brennen, of Elizabeth; organization, Peter Egenloff, of Elizabeth; resolutions, Thomas Lane, of Summit; credentials, John L. Crowell, of Rahway.

An informal ballot on the preference of the delegates was held and resulted as follows: Prosecutor Crane, 21; Mayor Seymour, 19; Senator Daly, 5; Benjamin F. Lee, 2. It was decided after a little argument to allow the delegates to vote individually. The Union county caucus finally adjourned at 12:30 o'clock and the delegates hastened to the Opera House.

PLAINFIELDERS AWHEEL

THEY TOURED TO GETTYSBURG AND THROUGH MARYLAND.

Charles Dunham and G. E. Stillman Returned Sunday After an Eventful Trip—Tandem Scheme Didn't Work

After spending a week awheel in the States of New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Maryland, Charles Dunham, of Central avenue, and G. E. Stillman, of West Seventh street, returned to their respective homes Sunday afternoon. They wheeled from Plainfield to Philadelphia and thence along the Lancaster pike to York, Pa., and on to Gettysburg. There they spent two days in wheeling over the battlefields and saw all there was to be seen. They found their wheels particularly useful there, and were able to see much more than the ordinary tourist.

After leaving Gettysburg they rode to Hagerstown, Md., and then across to Baltimore, where they took the train for home. The roads all the way, with few exceptions, were very poor. There had been little or no rain for four weeks and the dust was several inches thick, completely hiding the rocks in the roadway which made the riding quite exciting.

The most exciting incident of their trip occurred between Hagerstown and Baltimore on a lonely road, ten miles from anywhere. Mr. Stillman encountered a road and two of the spokes in his front wheel snapped allowing the tire to rub against the forks at every turn of the wheel. They had read of the tandem plan of placing the forks of one bicycle on the same axle with the rear forks of another. They tried it and after riding a short distance landed in a heap. The tumble snapped several spokes for Mr. Dunham.

After various attempts to repair the damage, they set out with both front wheels sadly wabbling and managed to reach Baltimore by walking the hills and riding the level stretches slowly.

PLANS FOR SCHOOL MEET

DAILY PRESS MEDAL HAS GREATLY INCREASED INTEREST.

Over a Dozen Boys are After the All-Round Championship—Handicaps to Be Arranged Tonight and Announced Later.

Despite the short notice on which the fall games of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association were arranged, great interest in the games has been manifest among the boys of the school. The Daily Press medal for the all-round championship of the school has awakened new zeal among the scholastic athletes, and fully a dozen of them have expressed a determination to try for it. Besides that, there are a number of the boys who will try in some of the events in which they take a special interest.

The Daily Press medal has been received and is now on exhibition. It is of silver, made in pretty design, and suitably engraved. It is enclosed in a handsome velvet case. It was secured through Asa Collier.

The entries for the events will close this afternoon, after which a meeting of the advisory board will be held and the handicaps arranged. They will be published in tomorrow's Daily Press. The games will be held Friday afternoon at the Crescent Oval, beginning at 2:30 o'clock. The bicycle events will be under L. A. W. sanction.

The officials have been selected as follows: Referee, Thomas A. Cuming; track judges, Albert B. Meredith, Ira W. Travell, George Weeks Sandford; field judges, Carroll L. Runyon, Walter L. Long; timers, J. W. VanSickle, Thomas Quinn, Walter B. Rittenhouse; starter, H. C. VanEmburgh; clerk of the course, Charles B. Morse.

Want to Conduct a Temperance Rally.

Ethan Lanphear, of Central avenue, has received a communication from the celebrated temperance workers, the Beveridges, in which they state that they have combined with Volney B. Cushing, of Maine, and they would like to come to Plainfield for a short time. Their terms are $25 and anyone who is sufficiently interested in the matter can communicate with Mr. Lanphear regarding a temperance rally.

Sermon to Women.

It has been the custom of Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, to preach an annual sermon to women. This year it will be preached Sunday evening. The members of the chapter of King's Daughters connected with the church will act as ushers.

The Next Republican Primaries.

GREAT ARMY OF ENDEAVORERS NOW AT THE SEASHORE.

Plainfield Delegation Went By Special Train and Are Now Quartered at Willard Hotel and the Albemarle.

Asbury Park, Sept. 28.—Asbury Park has been invaded. Every new train brings fresh recruits to the invading army which is now in complete possession. The annual convention of the Christian Endeavor Societies of the State, which begins here this afternoon, promises to be the greatest yet in the records of the State organization. Asbury Park, with its large auditoriums and multitude of hotels, seems particularly fitted for the gathering, while the delegates are enabled to get a breath of the delightful sea breezes while enjoying the good things of this annual meeting of the Endeavorers from every part of the State.

The special train bearing the delegates from Plainfield and vicinity arrived here this morning after a pleasurable trip. There was a reception committee awaiting them at the station and plenty to direct them to their quarters.

The morning has been devoted to the reception of the delegates and locating them in their different headquarters. Although the city is crowded, everybody appears happy and satified. The Asbury Park Endeavorers have already proved themseves splendid hosts and their arrangements for the care and comfort of their guests has been very satisfactory.

The Plainfield delegation is now quartered at the Willard Hotel, with the exception of a few who, with E. E. Anthony, are stopping with the State officers at the Albemarle. The Plainfield party consists of the following:

Rev. J. W. Richardson, Mrs. Jere. Manning, Mrs. Catherine Randolph, Mr. Howard Randolph, Miss Mary Randolph, Mr. L. W. Randolph, Mrs. L. W. Randolph, Mr. Robert Love, Miss Emma V. CHURCH ANNIVERSARY.

Dunellen Methodist Church to Hold a Week's Special Services.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, Sept. 28.—From October 16th to the 20th, the Methodist Episcopal church here will celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary. It is an occasion long looked forward to by both pastor and people, and will no doubt be the means of aiding the church both financially as well as spiritually.

The exercises will begin Sunday, the 16th, when there will be special preaching and speaking. In addition to the services Sunday there will be reunions of the people with former members and friends of the church Monday and Tuesday evenings. At these gatherings addresses will be delivered by former pastors. Invitations have been extended to the churches of the borough as well as to churches in neighboring towns, and there is no doubt but what a large gathering of friends from all over will attend the services.

Wednesday evening congratulatory addresses will be delivered by the town pastors and also by visiting clergymen.

The Ladies' Aid Society will provide a dinner Thursday evening. Preceding the dinner an attractive entertainment will be given.

The speakers who have so far been secured to make addresses are Rev. Dr. C. S. Woodruff and wife, of Dover; Rev. Dr. Simpson, of Hackensack; Rev. T. D. Frazee, of Staten Island; Rev. S. D. Jones, of Stony Point, N. Y., and Rev. George Angleman, of Junction.

Will be a Fine Tour.

Mr. Honeyman's next tour is to be to the Holy Land and Egypt. He has announced it by beautiful itineraries, which can be had upon inquiry at 181 North avenue. This will be, undoubtedly, the finest tour in the entire series of the "Honeyman's Private Tours," which are so well-known and have proved so successful.

PLAINFIELD REPRESENTED.

GRAND JURY HAS 98 COMPLAINTS TO LOOK AFTER.

Former Mayor Place is Foreman of the Grand Jury—Grand Jury Now Occupied With the Blume Case—Other Cases to be Tried During the Term—A Full List of the Jurymen.

(Special To The Daily Press.)

Somerville, Sept. 28—The September term of the Somerset County Court opened here yesterday morning, and what promises to be a busy time for lawyers and judges was fairly begun. Judge Magie made no formal charge to the Grand Jury, but stated that if at any time they needed information to ask for it. There are 98 complaints to look after.

The court calendar shows thirty-two civil cases, not all of which will come to trial during this term of court.

The cases that occupied the attention of the court yesterday were those of Andrew Meyers against J. C. M. Blume, and Elizabeth Meyers against J. C. M. Blume. Reed and Coddington, of Plainfield, were for the defense in both cases.

Codington & Swackhamer, of Plainfield, represent the defendant in the case of Thomas Dowd against the Watchung Water Company, and Pope & Runyon, of that city, the plaintiff in the case of Fredericks & Wolf against Florence Howtell et als, contract on lien claim. The case of J. A. Blatz against George Rilling is set down for this term. Murphy & Blatz represent the plaintiff, and Councilman Walter L. Hetfield the defendant. All these cases will be tried in a few days.

There are no very important cases on for this term. Several cases have been appealed from the Justices' courts in the borough of North Plainfield, and will be tried this term. Charles F. Debele against Howell Thatcher from Justice Thomas', and H. J. Heinz et als against W. L. Smalley et als, from Justice Mattison's. This last case was tried May 16th. These are the only cases of interest to Plainfield.

Thomas, Edwin S. Voorhees, Albert S. Lewis, Wm. H. Terhune, Benj. F. Welch, John C. Staats, Charles E. Austin, Wm. Kirch, George W. Hope, Peter Gulick, Henry Reimer, Rynear N. Quick, Wm. DEATHS AT THE PLAINS.

TWO OLD AND WELL-KNOWN CITIZENS PASS AWAY.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Sept. 28—Orman Noble died at the home of his son on Park avenue last evening at 9 o'clock. Mr. Noble has been ailing for a long time and for several weeks has been confined to his bed and his friends and family have known that the end was near.

Mr. Noble was one of the oldest residents of the village, having reached the ripe old age of seventy-five years, and has been a resident of the village nearly all his life. A widow and two sons survive him, Morton C., who is in business in Newark, and Wm. B., who holds a responsible position with the Nassau Bank, of New York city. Mr. Noble leaves many friends, who will miss his familiar face and pleasant word for everyone. Interment will be in the family plot in the Baptist cemetery. Notice of funeral later.

Wm. Jamison, father of Mrs. Abram Wade, died suddenly at his home at Lyons Farms yesterday morning, from a paralytic stroke. Mr. Jamison for years ran a truck farm in Washington Valley and was well known through this section. His sudden death will be a great shock to his many friends who admired him for his many good deeds. A wife and three children survive him. Mr. Jamison and family during their residence in this section, were active workers in the Methodist church of this village.

WESTPHAL NOT THERE.

FORMER COUNCILMAN DID NOT TRY TO KNIFE VOORHEES.

He Writes That He Was Not Present at the Meeting of Grocers and Had Nothing to Say in Opposition to the Candidate.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—In your issue of yesterday, in giving an account of the proceedings of the Grocers' Association of the city of Plainfield, you state that ex Councilman Westphal, rose and presented a stong argument why the grocers should not vote for Foster Voorhees for Governor.

I desire to stamp the entire story as far as I am concerned, to be a falsehood from beginning to end. I was not at the meeting of the Grocers' Association that night, neither have I attended a meeting of the association for six months past.

From the similarity of the articles in both evening papers, I can only draw the conclusion that it emanated from one source, and I shall endeavor as speedily as possible to bring the individual to an account as soon as I ascertain his identity, as I consider that he could have been inspired with nothing but malevolent feelings and intentions to injure my personal and political reputation.

I hardly deem it necessary to make any reiteration of my party loyalty, as my record in the past speaks for itself. It is hardly probable that I would so debase myself as to go to a convention Thureday as a delegate to nominate Foster M. Voorhees for Governor, and the following Monday advocate the knifing of the very man whom I had the honor to assist in nominating.

As a matter of justice to myself, I insist that this letter be given as conspicuous a position on your title page as the article that calls it forth.

William A. Westphal.

[The foregoing correction by Wm. A. Westphal is but justly due. The article which appeared in yesterday's Press eminated from the usual news channels and was therefore considered authentic. The Daily Press deeply regrets any injury that may have been the unintentional result to Mr. Westphal and gladly publishes the correction which will set right this staunch Republican in public regard.]—Ed.

MONSTER BAKE AT THE PLAINS.

W. S. Emery's Clambake Was a Decided Success All Round.

Scotch Plains was awakened from its usual quiet solicitude last night, it being the occasion of W. S. Emery's annual clambake. Mr. Emery had spared neither time or expense to make the affair a success, and from the way his friends turned out it was all he could have hoped for. An improvised stage had been erected on the lawn in the rear of the hotel, and during the night the guests were entertained with music by Drake's Band, of Elizabeth. During the day a gang from the Plainfield Electric Light Company had erected poles and strung wires so that as soon as the evening gloom had settled the yard was illuminated with numberless electric lights, making the scene as light as day. Shortly after 7 o'clock guests began to arrive, some coming in carriages, by stage, others from a distance coming on the cars. Stages were run to the station for their accommodation. Mr. Emery had provided talent to help entertain his guests, and while they were waiting for the bake to be served a short programme was rendered. About 9 o'clock the bake was pronounced as being "fit for a king," and soon the long tables were filled and clams, chickens, etc., began to disappear with great rapidity, but there was enough and more than enough for all. After the bake the rest of the night was given up to a social time.

HIGH SCHOOL CADETS ELECT.

The Company Will Continue Drill This Winter With Thirty Members.

The Plainfield High School Cadets have reorganized for the coming year. All the old commissioned officers graduated or left school last June and it was necessary to elect an entire new staff. William A. Fisher was chosen captain, Roy H. Radford first lieutenant and George Fosgate second lieutenant. Howard Martin was elected first sergeant. The remainder of the non-commissioned officers will be chosen later when it is seen which of the cadets are best fitted for the places. There will be about thirty cadets in the company. Another meeting of the Cadet Company will be held Thursday to arrange further details for the year's drill. Captain George F. Edwards will be in charge of the cadets as usual.

ACKERMAN FOR SENATOR

PROMINENT PLAINFIELDER WILL BE NAMED AT COUNTY CONVENTION.

Ernest R. Ackerman Will Be Pushed By Local Republicans As the Successor of Governor Voorhees in the Senate

A week ago the advocates of Judge Cross' candidacy for the Republican nomination as State Senator to succeed Governor Voorhees, thought they had a clear field. Although Mayor C. J. Fisk, of this city, had been mentioned for the office, it was understood that the Mayor did not want the nomination under any circumstances.

A new candidate has now entered the field. Ever since there was a good prospect that Union county would have to elect another Senator this fall, the friends of Ernest R. Ackerman have been anxious to have him allow his name to be presented to the county convention as a candidate for the Senatorial nomination. He has at last consented and now Judge Cross, the Elizabeth favorite, finds himself confronted with a powerful rival.

Assemblyman Roger F. Murray, who is one of the leading supporters of Mr. Ackerman, is an indefatigable worker. He will make a strong effort to secure the support of the other townships outside of Elizabeth. It will be in Elizabeth that Mr. Ackerman will meet his greatest opposition. Plainfield will undoubtedly give him its solid support. The attitude of the remainder of the county will depend on what other candidates are put up. Plainfield will be able to exchange votes for Senator for others for some other nomination provided Elizabeth does not get there first.

Judge Cross is conceded a very strong candidate for the nomination and it will be very interesting to watch with just what success the efforts of Mr. Ackerman's friends are met with. It will undoubtedly be a lively time and furnish plenty of interest at primaries and convention.

WEDDED DUSKY BELLE.

YOUNG COLORED COUPLE MARRIED BENEATH FLORAL CIRCLE.

David C. Martin, Popular Driver for Edward White, was the Groom—Miss Curtis the Bride—The Rest of the Bridal Party.

Mrs. Julia Stevenson's house, at 305 Arlington avenue, presented a gay appearance last night at the marriage of her daughter, Miss Jennie B. Curtis, to David C. Martin. The couple are popular young members of colored society here, and the wedding was attended by fifty guests mostly from this city.

The ceremony was performed in the parlor under an arch of golden rod and daisies by Rev. James E. Groves, pastor of Mt. Zion A. M. E. church. To the music of a pretty wedding march the bride and her bridemaid, Miss Maggie Wood, entered the parlor, preceded by the flower girl, Miss Wilhelmenia Wood. The bride was leaning on the arm of William Lee, of Baltimore, a relative, who gave her away.

The groom and the best man entered from another direction, and soon the few words were said which made two hearts one. The best man was Joseph Barrett.

The groom drives one of Edward White's delivery wagons, and is a popular and faithful employe. The couple will continue to reside at the home of the bride.

The Trolley Schedule.

The cars of the Plainfield Street Railway Company on the main line now run as far as the Dunellen railroad station in the daytime, and as far as Taylor's Hotel during the evening. The reason for this is that during the day the cars are run under twelve minutes' headway, while at night fifteen minutes is the rule. Under the twelve minutes' headway the cars do not have time to run the extra distance.

Suffered a Relapse.

Mrs. H. S. Hall, of East Fifth street, who has been quite ill, suffered a relapse yesterday, and is now in a dangerous condition. Yesterday the physician in charge said that she must be moved from the house where she was, so last night Mr. Hall had her taken to Charles VanWinkle's house on the corner of West Fourth street and Madison avenue.

Tough Gang of Boys.

There is a tough gang of young men who loiter around the Watchung avenue bridge that need the attention of both the city and borough police. The profanity and disgraceful acts heard and seen around that section are a disgrace to the neighborhood.

HAVE LOW EXPRESS RATES.

BUILDING ORDINANCE AGAIN HEARD FROM IN COMMITTEE REPORT.

New York Firm Wanted to Take Charge of Board's Exhibit at Paris Exposition—Will Change the Regular Meeting Night—Wanted Lower Rates for Young Commuters from Here.

For such a comparatively weak organization the Plainfield Board of Trade, at its regular meeting last evening, considered several great questions of National importance. There were just eleven members, a quorum, present a few minutes past 8 o'clock when President Lounsbury called the meeting to order.

A communication was received from E. W. Mills, of the U. S. Express Company, in which he stated that Plainfield is now enjoying the lowest of any trunk line rate on express goods, and that the rate is the same as the one in Newark. He stated that the Adams Express Company charge the people of Rahway a higher rate to New York than is paid in this city. The above communication was received in response to a request from the Board that a lower rate be secured if possible.

Another communication was received from Thomas A. Cuming, in which he suggested that the time of meeting be changed from Wednesday evening to some other night. Later in the evening Mr. Laing made a motion that the time be changed from the third Wednesday night in the month to the third Monday night. As an amendment to this motion D. W. Littell moved that the third Tuesday in the month be selected.

At the next meeting of the Board the question of deciding on some other night will be voted upon, as the laws require that due notice be given on such action.

A communication was received from a New York firm in which they stated that they would like to take charge of any exhibits which the Board would make at the Paris Exposition in 1900. This was referred to Charles Hand, chairman of the committee on manufacturers, and the communication received from the San Diego Chamber of Commerce, asking the support and endorsement of the Board in the Nicaragua Canal matter, was kindly received. President Lounsbury felt as though the Board should communicate with the Senator and Congressman from this district and ask them to vote for the construction of the canal. The president and secretary were given the power to take such action.

J. C. Pope, chairman of the membership committee, reported the name of J. Howard Leggett for election, and the name of Ira LaRue was proposed for membership. Mr. Leggett was elected and Mr. LaRue's name will come up at the next meeting.

Mr. Laing made a brief report on the subject of the city building ordinance. He stated that progress could be reported, and that the City Council had thus far made a number of changes for the purpose of adopting the same.

No report was received from the committee on the railroad station. R. B. Rogers thought that if James E. Martine's name was added to that of the committee something would be done. Mr. Lounsbury said that Mr. Martine was not a member of the Board and could not be appointed.

Mr. Lounsbury introduced the subject of lower commutation rates between this city and New York for young people, and stated that the plan as suggested by F. E. Kinsman is not original with him, for the subject had been discussed before he mentioned it. This matter was left to the transportation committee.

During the evening Mr. Bradley, of tha firm of Landis & Hughes, made a few remarks concerning his work in this city of making a birds-eye view map of Plainfield. He showed some of the members samples of his work and stated that he would like to have the co-operation and endorsement of the Board. This concluded the business and the meeting adjourned.

After the meeting the members discussed several subjects, including lower rates for gas, water, etc., and at times the discussion became quite exciting.

A Church Anniversary.

The thirty-first anniversary of the Mt. Olive Baptist church will be observed Oct. 23d, and exercises appropriate to the occasion will be presented.

DANGER IN SODA.

Serious Results Sometimes Follow Its Excessive Use.

Common soda is all right in its place and indispensable in the kitchen and for cooking and washing purposes but it was never intended for a medicine, and people who use it as such will some day regret it.

We refer to the common use of soda to relieve heartburn or sour stomach, a habit which thousands of people practice almost daily, and one which is fought with danger; moreover the soda only gives temporary relief and in the end the stomach trouble gets worse and worse.

The soda acts as a mechanical irritant to the walls of the stomach and bowels and cases are on record where it accumulated in the intestines, causing death by inflammation or peritonitis.

Dr. Harlandson reccommends as the safest and surest cure for sour stomach (acid dyspepsia) an excellent preparation sold by druggists under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. These tablets are large 20 grain lozenges, very pleasant to taste and contain the natural acids, peptones and digestive elements essential to good digestion, and when taken after meals they digest the food perfectly and promptly before it has time to ferment, sour and poison the blood and nervous system.

Dr. Wuerth states that he invariably uses Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets in all cases of stomach derangements and finds them a certain cure not only for sour stomach, but by promptly digesting the food they create a healthy appetite, increase flesh and strenghten the action of the heart and liver. They are not a cathartic, but intended only for stomach diseases and weakness and will be found reliable in any stomach trouble except cancer of the stomach.

The French Premier Ready to Assume Responsibility for Revision.

Paris, Sept. 28.—At a cabinet council held yesterday, at which President Faure presided, the minister of justice read the letter he had addressed to the court of cassation, requesting a revision of the Dreyfus case.

The minister also read a circular which he had caused to be sent to the public prosecutors throughout the country, instructing them to repress energetically any attacks upon the army.

The discussion at the previous cabinet meeting was practically confined to the premier and the minister of justice, MM. Brisson and Sarrien.

Replying to the latter's objections to a revision of the Dreyfus case, based on the negative character of the commission's report and the vote of the chamber of deputies affirming respect for a chose jugee (a case already passed upon by the courts), M. Brisson pointed out that the late Lieutenant Colonel Henry's confession of forgery changed the whole aspect of the case. He concluded:

"If your scruples arise from personal considerations, if you do not deem your self sufficiently armed to undertake without hesitation all your responsibility, you need not leave us. You can remain without having to sign the letter referring the case to the court of cassation. Take the portfolio of the interior. I will take that of justice, and thus all the responsibility will devolve upon me."

M. Sarrien yielded to this appeal.

English and French at Fashoda.

Paris, Sept. 28.—At the cabinet council yesterday the minister for foreign affairs, M. Delcasse, read a telegram from General Sir Herbert Kitchener, the British commander on the Nile, which had been communicated to the French foreign office by the British ambassador here, Sir Edward J. Monson. It was worded as follows:

"Met at Fashoda September 1 Marchand flying French flag. Marchand arrived July 10 with eight officers and 120 Sudanese tirailleurs."

The dispatch also said that Major Marchand told General Kitchener he had sent dispatches to the French government through the Congo and Abyssinia. Neither of these communications however has yet been received by the French minister of foreign affairs. The latter said that no orders had been sent to Major Marchand.

The Launching the Illinois.

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 28.—Except for a few minor details everything is in readiness for the launching of the battleship Illinois at the Newport News shipyard next Tuesday.

The big masts, funnels, and fighting turrets are in position, and workmen will to-day begin greasing the ways and taking the unnecessary blocks from under the keel.

The platform for Miss Leiter, who will name the Illinois, is being erected, and the shipyard is being handsomely decorated. The launching is set for about eleven o'clock in the morning, and will be followed by a dinner at the hamberlin Hotel, Old Point.

Democratic State Convention

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 28.—The state Democratic convention meets in this city to-day. All the indications are that Mayor Van Wyck will receive the nomination for governor, although Croker has not absolutely given the word. Of course the word will be final when he gives it, but he seems to be still guessing.

The state committee met last night and decided on George M. Palmer of Schoharie county for temporary chairman.

Fred C. Schraub of Lowville probably will be chosen as the permanent chairman.

THE ARMY SCANDALS

PLANS FOR INVESTIGATION

Ex-Gov. Woodbury's Son a Major in the Engineer Corps. Attractive Nature of the Appointment. No Charges Against the Engineer Corps. The Time to Be Covered.

Washington, Sept. 28.—An additional interest is lent to the investigation of the president's commission to inquire into the conduct of the war by the circumstance that ex-Governor Woodbury of Vermont, one of the commissioners, has a son, who is one of the beneficiaries of the present administration.

Charles Lincoln Woodbury was appointed from Vermont, on the 19th of last May, a major of volunteers in the engineer corps. To show what an honor that conveyed, it must be observed that of all the staff corps that of the engineers is the most exclusive and the goal of ambition for regular army officers of a strongly scientific bent. There were only twenty-eight appointments or transfers to this corps between the outbreak of the war and the 22nd of August last, and of the whole number only six were civilians, the rest being officers of the regular army. Mr. Woodbury's appointment as one of the six was, therefore, a mark of special favor.

Another civilian appointed about the same time was Hugh H. G. Gordon of Georgia, and it will be observed that ex-Senator John B. Gordon, the young man's father, was one of the first men invited by the president to take part in the so-called invesigation. The senator declined, possibly not wholly for the reasons assigned, but in part because he did not care to be a target for the critics of a whitewashing machine.

It must not be assumed from this that the engineer corps is likely to come in for a raking over. On the contrary, when General John M. Wilson, chief of engineers, was invited to serve on the commission, and ventured to protest that it would be indelicate for him to sit in a commission which would have to investigate his own branch of the service, the president assured him that there were no charges of any sort against the engineers, and hence that he need let no sentimental considerations weigh against his acceptance of the detail.

But in the case of a commissioner like Mr. Woodbury it is different. Young Woodbury naturally has ambitions in his military career which the president and the secretary of war will have it in their power to gratify. The ex-governor has therefore placed himself hors de combat in all that concerns the thoroughness of his inquiries and the weight which will be attached to his share in the verdict in the popular mind.

The commission has decided to limit the period covered by its investigations to that between the beginning of the war and the 31st of August. The last named date was chosen because the departmental accounts and reports will be presumably complete up to that time, and are liable to be incomplete and straggling later.

The commissioners have decided that it will take them two or three months to do all their work on the lines on which they have laid it out. Their mode of procedure will be to inquire first what were the conditions existing in the branches of the service at the hour when war was declared. Then they will trace down to August 31 the various changes, and inquire the reasons for them, the methods by which they were accomplished, and the character and quality of the results as measured by a reasonable standard of excellence.

For Alger to Answer.

To Secretary Alger the commission has addressed six queries for his reply. They are as follows:

1. Plan of campaign proposed immediately after the declaration of war; was it intended to move at once on Havana, or that the campaign should be postponed until the autumn?
2. When was the Santiago campaign determined upon?
3. Why was Tampa selected as the base of operations?
4. Why were summer camps organized at Fernandina, Jacksonville and Tampa?
5. When was the Porto Rico campaign determined upon?
6. Why were the troops held on transports after embarkation at Tampa, and not permitted to sail for several days?

To Restore the Rates

New York, Sept. 28.—Meetings of the passenger and freight committees of the Trunk Line Association were held yesterday at the headquarters in this city.

Now that the differences between the Canadian Pacific road and its American rivals are practically at an end, it is expected that the passenger committee of the association will settle the matter of transcontental rates.

The restoration of these rates took effect last Sunday and was put into immediate operation by a majority of the roads interested, including the Canadian Pacific and Grand Trunk lines.

It is believed that by the middle of next month the restoration will be generally observed.

Nicaragua Canal Survey.

New York, Sept. 28.—The preliminary survey of the route of the proposed Nicaragua canal has been completed, and the engineers returned to this country on the Atlas line steamship Altai Monday night.

They are Andrew Onderdonk, Harvey C. Miller, Louis Hawkins, Eben S. Wheeler, William D. Thomas, Richard B. Post, Percy J. Bruns and Horatio H. Trundle. The engineers say that the plan of the proposed canal is a simple one and that their reports will show that the cut which the Spanish-American war has made an absolute necessity can be made quickly and cheaply.

OCCUPATION OF CUBA.

Gen. Miles Opposed to Sending Troops There Soon.

Washington, Sept. 28.—General Miles is opposed to sending troops to Cuba until December, and has made a recommendation to that effect. He insists that the present period is likely to prove detrimental to the health of the soldiers, and that the month of October is one of the worst in Cuba from a hygienic standpoint.

It is doubtful whether this advice will be accepted by the president, who wishes to put the army of occupation upon the island within a few weeks. In this view he is guided by the recommendation of the war department officers, although the latter, now that General Miles has appeared on the scene, are discreetly withholding their contrary opinions from the public.

General Miles believes also that there should be ample and good accommodations in Cuba for the troops; he is rigidly opposed to camps at home or abroad if the troops are to be kept for weeks in any one place. So he has renewed in strongest terms his protest against the camps in the United States, and has advised sending regulars to army posts, and most of the volunteers back to their states, where they can be quartered economically and with due regard to health and comfort.

It is General Miles's intention to go to Cuba again when the troops are settled there. While he will not assume active command he will exercise the authority vested in him by his rank, and will make his trip something of a tour of inspection.

Iowa and Oregon Start for the Pacific

New York, Sept. 28.—Captain Sumner, acting commandant of the Brooklyn navy yard, received a dispatch from Washington yesterday directing that the battleships Iowa and Oregon be sent away from the yard to-day, and as a result there was great activity aboard both vessels. It had been generally understood that the battleships would not get away from the yard until the supply ship Iris and the collier eltic were ready to make the trip with them around Cape Horn, and no reason was assigned for the sudden order to send the battleships away without the supply ship and the collier.

It was reported that neither the Iris nor the eltic could be got into condition within three days, and that they would follow in the wake of the battleships.

A Bank Robbery in Indiana.

Flora, Ind., Sept. 28.—Between two and three o'clock yesterday morning the safe of the Farmers' bank was blown open by robbers, who secured close to $12,000 and made good their escape.

William Lenon, the cashier, who was aroused by the noise of the explosion, appeared on the scene while the robbers were still at work, was shot, and it is believed will die.

A posse of citizens followed the gang of robbers for some distance, but they got away on a hand car. Blodhounds have been secured and are now on the trail. There were two terrific explosions, and the bank building was almost wrecked.

The Seal Industry.

Washington, Sept. 28.—Special Agent Murray, in charge of the Seal islands, reports that during the past season 18,047 skins were secured.

This is a decrease of about three thousand in the number taken in 1897. He reports a general decrease in the seal herd.

The branding of seals, he believes, is a complete success, and may be resorted to annually with perfect safety. He states that two of the seals branded in 1896 were killed in 1897, and the brands amply demonstrated that neither hair nor fur will grow on seal skins after they have been branded by a hot iron.

Mrs. Belmont Dead.

New York, Sept. 28.—Announcement was made yesterday of the death of Mrs. August Belmont, wife of the banker. Her death occurred in Paris, and was unexpected.

Mrs. Belmont was formerly Miss Bessie Hamilton Morgan. She was the daughter of Matthew Morgan, one time head of the banking firm of Matthew Morgan & Sons, of this city.

At the time of her death she was about thirty-five years of age and had been married twelve years. She was one of the most beautiful society women in the city.

Adirondack Steamers Collide.

Utica, Sept. 28.—The steamers Stowell and Zip collided on Second lake, Fulton hain, about 5.30 Monday evening. They came together almost head on, and the Zip sank immediately in forty feet of water.

The latter is the smallest steamboat on the Chain, a mere launch, and had a crew of but three men.

These and one passenger, G. S. K. Hover, of New York, were rescued without difficulty.

Li Hung's Enemy Imprisoned.

Pekin, Sept. 28.—An imperial edict issued yesterday practically rescinds the recent reformatory edicts and orders that Chang Yen Hwan, the former member of the Chinese foreign office, and opponent of Li Hung Chang, be confined until further notice.

The edict, however, absolves him from complicity in the alleged plot to assassinate the emperor.

New Yellow Fever Cases.

Washington, Sept. 28.—Surgeon General Wyman has received a message from the Louisiana state board of health at New Orleans that there are twenty-six cases of a mild type of yellow fever in Wilson, La.

The town and parish are quarantined. The source of the infection is untraceable.

Honored by Japan's Emperor.

San Francisco, Sept. 28.—Dr. M. C. Harris, elder of the Methodist Episcopal Japanese Mission of the Pacific conference, has been decorated by the Emperor of Japan with the Order of the Sacred Treasure, in recognition of services in the missionary field to subjects of Japan.

SARATOGA CONVENTION

Col. Roosevelt Is Nominated For Governor on First Ballot.

WOODRUFF RENOMINATED

The Convention Meets at Noon. The Temporary and Permanent Organization. No Contest to be Decided. Judge Cady Names Frank S. Black and Chauncey Depew Presents Roosevelt.

Convention Hall, Saratoga, Sept. 27.—The Republican state convention met here at noon to-day. The hour set for the opening of business was twelve o'clock, but long before that time the galleries were filled with spectators. Shortly before noon the delegates began to pour into the hall.

Up in the gallery a band was stationed, which enlivened the hours preceding the fall of the gavel by playing patriotic airs.

The hall was simply but tastefully decorated. The Stars and Stripes were everywhere.

On the stage the chief decoration was an enormous bouquet of flowers, which had been placed before the presiding officer's desk.

Chairman Odell of the state committee took his seat at the presiding officer's desk at 12.20 o'clock to call the convention to order.

After prayer by the Rev. Dr. Judson of Saratoga the roll of delegates was called.

Congressman Sereno E. Payne, temporary chairman, was introduced at 12.40 o'clock. In the opening paragraphs of his speech he referred to William McKinley as a warrior and a statesman and the roar of approval was deafening.

The applause was renewed when Mr. Stewart of Kings county called for three cheers for the president of the United States.

Chairman Payne's emphatic declaration that the Republican party was the party of sound money, and his challenge to the Democrats at Syracuse to ignore silver at their convention was rapturously received.

COL. THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

An enthusiastic Roosevelt man in the New York section, when Chairman Payne referred to the glorious charge of the American troops at El Caney, raised the Roosevelt picture and the cheering was frantic.

After some minor questions or organization had been disposed of, General Stewart L. Woodford moved the appointment of a committee on resolutions.

General Woodford was named chairman of this committee, and the Hon. Hamilton Fish chairman of that on permanent organization.

Second Session.

At 4.05 o'clock the Republican convention was again called to order.

The committee on credentials reported that there being no contests, owing to the good feeling existing in the party throughout the state, it had nothing to do.

Senator Horace White was chosen permanent chairman and he addressed the convention.

At 4.35 Chairman White abruptly ended his speech and called for the report of the committee on resolutions. There was no response.

The chairman, Gen. Woodford, was not in the hall.

Congressman Juigg then moved that nominations be made, and the motion was carried with a shout.

Judge Cady of Albany thereupon took the platform and made a speech nominating Frank S. Black for governor.

He was followed by Chauncey Depew, who placed Theodore Roosevelt's name before the convention as a candidate for the same position.

The nomination of Governor Black was seconded by Charles T. Saxton, Abraham Gruber and Senator Clarence Lexow.

Assemblyman Wallace of Queens and Congressman Southwick of Albany seconded the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt.

At 6.20 Elihu Root took the platform and addressed the convention in regard to the question of Colonel Roosevelt's eligibility. He denied that a residence had been forfeited and asserted that no objection whatever could be raised in relation to Mr. Roosevelt's candidacy on the ground of citizenship.

Edward Lauterbach replied to Mr. Root.

Roll Call Ordered.

It was past seven o'clock when the chair declared the period for nominations closed, and a roll call was ordered. This resulted in the nomination of Colonel Roosevelt for governor by an overwhelming majority.

The vote stood: Black, 218; Roosevelt, 753. The result was greeted with tumultuous cheering. The following is the balance of the ticket:

Lieutenant Governor—Timothy L. Woodruff of Kings.

Treasurer—John P. Jaeckel of Cayuga.

DEWEY SENDS REPORT.

He Seized the Steamer Abby, Which Took Arms for Rebels.

Manila, Sept. 27, 1898.

Having received information that the American steamer Abby left Macao September 2 with a cargo of arms for Batangas, I sent the McCulloch. She arrived at Batangas on the 23rd, and found her to be in the harbor, having arrived three days earlier and landed cargo.

There were only Filipinos on board. They refused to give any information and had no papers whatever. Seized and brought her here, where we are now holding her. This steamer was formerly the Pasig, and is registered as an American vessel. The United States consulate at Canton has information that she made one voyage of the same kind already.

DEWEY.

The navy department very promptly approved Admiral Dewey's action, as indicated by the following cablegram, which was sent him yesterday:

Washington, Sept. 28.

To Dewey, Manila:

Your action in seizing American owned vessel Abby approved. She is amenable to martial jurisdiction for any violation of neutrality.

2d New Jersey to Go to Camp.

Jersey City, Sept. 28.—Three hundred members of the Second New Jersey volunteer regiment, constituting a detail of twenty-five men from each company, met in the Pennsylvania railroad station in Jersey City yesterday, in response to a call issued by Colonel Hine. They took an early train to Sea Girt, where they will be employed the remainder of the week in preparing the camp for occupation by the entire Second regiment.

When the Second came home from Jacksonville on Saturday last the weather was so cold that it was thought inadvisable to put the men, coming as they did from the South, into camp at the seashore.

The regiment was therefore disbanded and the men were permitted to go to their homes.

They will be reassembled at Sea Girt on Saturday.

State Death Rate.

Albany, Sept. 28.—The state board of health's bulletin for August fixes the annual death rate for the state from all causes per one thousand of population at twenty, as against 20.60 for the preceding month, and 18.75 for August, 1897.

The total number of deaths was 11,302, of which 6,451 occurred in New York city, divided as follows:

In the maritime sanitary district, comprising Long Island, Manhattan and the towns in Westchester county, there was an excessive increase in typhoid fever for the month, which caused one hundred deaths, 99 being in the city of New York.

Cabinet Meeting.

Washington, Sept. 28.—With the exception of Secretary Alger, who has not yet returned from his tour of inspection, there was a full meeting of the cabinet yesterday.

Although the session lasted two hours, it was stated at its conclusion that no business of general interest had been transacted.

The war investigation was talked over informally, as were also the forthcoming reports of the cabinet officers, which will form a part of the president's message to congress.

Cits Decide to Wait.

New York, Sept. 28.—It was announced at the headquarters of the Citizens' Union yesterday afternoon that the Independents would nominate no successor to Colonel Roosevelt until October 15.

R. F. Cutting has received a reply to the letter he wrote to Seth Low asking Mr. Low to explain why he thought the nomination of an independent would jeopard Colonel Roosevelt's chances.

A Train Wreck in Texas.

Corsicana, Texas, Sept. 28.—The south bound Houston and Texas Central passenger train was wrecked six miles north of this city while going at a high rate of speed.

Two coaches jumped the track and went over a bridge. They were completely demolished. No one was killed, but many persons sustained serious injuries.

Honored Mrs. U. S. Grant

New York, Sept. 28.—A reception was given yesterday to Mrs. Ulysses S. Grant in the parlors of the Windsor hotel by the Woman's National War Relief Association.

Mrs. Grant is the president of the association and is at present on a visit to New York.

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 28.—At the interstate fair grounds yesterday the five mile professional race, which began Monday, was completed. The third heat was won by W. E. Becker, with F. A. McFarland second. The time was 12.01.

Fourth Heat—"Major" Taylor won by a few inches; H. T. Terrill second. Time 12.37 3-5.

Final Heat—Arthur Gardiner, first; "Major" Taylor second, F. A. McFarland third; H. B. Freeman fourth and W. E. Becker fifth. Time, 11.48 2-5.

THE PEACE CONFERENCE

THE TASK A DIFFICULT ONE

French Government Studiously Courteous to American and Spanish Commissioners. Our Representatives Met Formally Yesterday. Our Commissioners Are Comfortably Quartered.

Paris, Sept. 28.—While the reception to the United States peace commission here is all that could be desired, and while the French foreign office has taken great pains to treat the American and Spanish commissioners in precisely the same manner, it must be admitted that the general atmosphere of Paris, especially the diplomatic atmosphere, does not incline toward America.

It is the general impression here that the American commissioners have instructions to provide for the retention of Manila and the island of Luzon, "and for a commission to pretend to negotiate is a farce," said a prominent diplomat.

"America will put herself diplomatically in the wrong when she exceeds the provisions of the protocol which both nations signed. I know the Spaniards have come prepared to make concessions, but if the Americans' instructions are of an uncompromising nature which is generally believed here to be the case, you can rest assured that the work of the commission will be futile. The Spaniards will retire, and America will at least have to threaten a resumption of hostilities before she will gain her point."

The French newspapers, beyond announcing the arrival of the commission, make no comment upon the matter.

The American peace commission, for the first time since its appointment, met as a body yesterday, for two hours, in the drawing room of the Continental hotel.

Ferdinand W. Peck, United States commissioner to the Paris exposition, of 1900, is about to vacate his quarters in the same hotel. They were formerly occupied by the ex-empress Eugenie, and have been used by Mr. Peck as offices until his permanent offices, on the exposition grounds, are in readiness.

The suite of rooms which the former empress at one time used will probably be acquired by the American peace commissioners. They will be used for executive sessions and official headquarters.

As the joint commission is not a deliberative body, it will possibly not organize with a presiding member from either commission. This is deemed in some quarters to be the wiser plan, as tending to promote closer working relations between the two commissions and facilitating an ultimate adjustment. This, however, is not positive.

Judge Day and Mr. Whitelaw Reid are quartered at a hotel overlooking the Tuileries Gardens, and the other commissioners are equally comfortable.

The Americans enjoyed sunny weather during their first day in Paris, and they are all in good health and spirits.

The French government is arranging to provide, at the salon where the joint sessions of the commissions will be held, an elaborate buffet, daily, for the use of all the commissioners.

Guns Removed on the Alfonso XII.

Havana, Sept. 28.—The guns which were taken ashore from the Spanish cruiser Alfonso XII during the blockade of this port by the American fleet, and which were placed in the Reina battery, have been returned on board that vessel and remounted.

An American company, styled the "Island of Cuba Real Estate company," has opened business on Obispo street, Havana. It will deal in country lots. Note is made of this fact, as it is the first opening of American business under the new order of things.

One of the latest official envelopes exchanged with the Spanish commissioners treated with the subject of supplying relief to the insurgent troops.

Ninth Cavalry Goes.

New York Sept. 28.—The Ninth cavalry arrived here yesterday from Montauk, on its way to stations in the territories of Arizona and Oklahoma. The regiment goes west over the Norfolk and Western railway and the Baltimore and Ohio. Headquarters and four troops are ordered to Fort Grant, Arizona; three troops to Fort Huachuca, Arizona. Both of these detachments go over the Norfolk and Western railroad.

Two troops are ordered to Fort Apache, two troops to Fort Du Chesne, Utah, and one troop to Fort Sill, Oklahoma territory.

Keep Remains of Columbus.

New York, Sept. 28.—The following telegram was sent to President McKinley yesterday by the Cuban American League:

"The Cuban American League believes that it voices the earnest wish of the people of both the United States and Cuba when it urges you not to permit Cuba's most interesting and sacred relic—the remains of Christopher Columbus—to be removed from America.

"A. A. AGURRE,
"Secretary."

Threatened Blockade of Crete.

Vienna, Sept. 28.—It is semi-officially announced that if the Turkish government replies unfavorably to the demands of the powers respecting the island of Crete, which must be complied with by October 11, the powers will blockade certain places in Crete by land and sea.

Ex-Assemblyman Dead.

Oswego, N. Y., Sept. 28.—William Smyth, formerly member of the assembly for Tioga county, died yesterday morning, aged 79. He was chairman of the delegation which met at Saratoga in 1856 and formed the Republican party.

COMING EVENTS.

October 2—F. Kuehnle, of the Seventy-first Regiment, N. Y. Volunteers, will address the Y. M. C. A. meeting at 4:15p.m.
October 3—Opening of the Educational Department of Y. M. C. A. Interesting exercises.

The L. A. W. Trouble.

There have long been many members of the League of American Wheelmen who have believed that the control of bicycle racing was beyond the legitimate province of that organization and that it would far better confine its efforts to advancing the interests of the wheelmen of the country in promoting good roads, favorable legislation for wheelmen and providing more complete information and privileges for cycling tourists than in dabbling in the affairs of the bicycle race track.

The avowed object of the league is to promote the interests of wheelmen, although of late the league has been more prominent in its control of racing than in other ways. The result of the present difficulty between the racing men and the L. A. W. officials may result in the divertion of the L. A. W. men's efforts toward the real object of that organization which would undoubtedly give it a more healthy standing among the wheelmen at large than it holds at present.

Good Man For The Democrats.

The name of Irving I. Ross, of Westfield, is mentioned in connection with one of the Assembly nominations on the Democratic ticket in Union county. Mr. Ross would make a very good candidate for the Democrats of this end of the county to choose for such an honor.

He has wide acquaintances in and around his home, has served acceptably for several years as Township Clerk of Westfield—a Republican stronghold—and would add strength to the chance of the Democrats to succeed on election day. He is a hustler when he undertakes a job, and if his nomination was made the party leaders could be assured of having a live candidate who would do his best to get votes.

Encouraging the Boys.

The Daily Press has always been only too glad to aid in any way in the promotion or healthy sport among the people of Plainfield. Athletic exercise of any kind, when not carried to an excess, makes better citizens of us all.

The boys of the Plainfield High School have been amongst the most enterprising in furthering athletic contests in this city and they are well worthy of support. To encourage them in this healthful form of recreation, The Daily Press was glad to offer a medal for the all-round championship of the school.

Little Jack Horner sat in the corner
Eating a Christmas pie.
He put in his thumb
And pulled out a plum,
And said what a good boy am I.

every time he prints a story that The Daily Press didn't have the same day. Each time that such a thing occurs the particular story is always regarded as the greatest thing that ever happened by our brother down the street. Runyon certainly has happy talks with himself.

The Daily Press is glad in another column to correct the item that appeared in its columns to the effect that Former Councilman William A. Westphal attempted to turn the local Grocers' Association against Mr. Voorhees, the man he helped to nominate. It is but justice to the readers of The Press, however, to add that although W. A. Westphal did not make the remarks mentioned, they were made at the meeting by some one else.

The News' story of an Oak Tree farmhand suddenly finding $10,000 worth of Spanish doubloons sounded very "fishy." It was a good thing that the reporter put "Mr. Jeems" out of the country before he startled the world with the thrilling story. To verify the alleged facts of the story would be harder than to find the proverbial needle in the haystack.

AMERICAN PEACE COMMISSIONERS.

The American members of the commission which is to meet the representatives of Spain in Paris and arrange the terms of peace sailed from New York September 17. They were Senators Frye, Davis and Gray, ex-Secretary of State Day and Hon. Whitelaw Reid.

The Democratic primary for the election of delegates to the Congressional convention of the Third district, to be held in New Brunswick next Monday, will be held in the borough Friday night. The primaries in other Somerset county towns will be held Saturday afternoon.

The Trenton True American pokes fun at Foster Voorhees. But that won't win an election for the Democrats. If Voorhees is beaten it will have to be done with better campaign arguments than The True American puts to the fore in its editorial columns.

Former President Cleveland is reported to be in a big land deal to make Princeton a magnificent winter resort for millionaires. It is evident that Grover looks upon Jersey as his home for the rest of his natural life.

The Daily Press' cent-a-word department, which is always larger than that of any competitor at all times of the year, is the index of popularity with all classes of citizens.

Lieut. Hobson's work of raising and floating the Maria Teresa will do more good for his country than the sinking of the Merrimac did. But there isn't so much glory in it.

Will the present Senator or the former Senator of Somerset county be the leader in the Republican ranks in that bailiwick? There is chance for argument.

After today the Democrats will have plenty of work before them in New Jersey.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

The home merchant is the man who gives you credit when you have no cash to buy the necessaries of life. The home merchant is the man who helps you to pay taxes that run your schools and pave your streets. The home merchant is the man to whom you appeal in times of distress for favors. Then why should you ignore him when you desire to make a purchase? He sells as good goods at as low figures as the man who does business in the big city. The hills look green far away.—Passaic Daily News.

The interest in political circles in Somerset county is in the prospect of a contest between Senator Reed, of North Plainfield, and Supreme Court Clerk Lewis Thompson, of Somerville, to gain control of the Republican organization. Up to a year ago these two men were on good terms, but since the last campaign, when Senator Reed opposed the nomination of H. N. Spencer for Surrogate, the two have had different views of political expediency in the county.—New York Evening Post.

* * * * *

The Raritan Ministers' Association of Somerset county has adopted resolutions denouncing the Somerville Fair as conducted this year as a menace to public morals. If the ministers have been rightly informed it would appear that the principal attractions at the fair were not mammoth pumpkins and blooded cattle, but Coney Island side shows, tin horn gamblers and brazen fakirs. Such is the stage which many agricultural fairs have reached in these, their days of decadence.—Newark News.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

James Dolan, whose portrayal of "A Bleecker Knight," in that most unique comedy, "Have You Seen Smith," which will be seen at Music Hall Friday night, promises to be one of the great comedy hits of the season, is recognized in the profession as one of the brightest wits on the stage. An example of his celerity in answering is told by Murray Woods, another member of Davis & Keogh's comedy company. They were discussing the Spanish-American war during the recent trip of the company from New York to Washington and one of the members asked, "What is the capitol of Spain?" Dolan instantly replied: "She hasn't any to speak of, or at least she won't have when she pays her debts."

* * * * *

All sorts of advance agents have been to Plainfield to boom theatrical attractions but the star of them all appeared yesterday to help along the business of "Have You Seen Smith?" He was the Hon. Mr. Three Crows, full-blooded Indian from the Lewisburg reservation. He is a nephew of the late Sitting Bull. Three Crows was piloted into The Daily Press sanctum by a paleface, who is acting as his chaperone. Three Crows gets all the glory, but the white man does the work. Three Crows looked wise and handed the editor a white card bearing the enquiry "Have You Seen Smith?" and also the statement that he had seen Smith. Unfortunately Manager Edwards, of Music Hall, was out of town and couldn't give the glad hand to Three Crows.

Suburban patrons of the New York playhouses are always interested in the current attraction at the Bijou Theatre, which has come to be looked upon more or less as Gotham's laughing headquarters. Last week at this house a new star was launched in the person of Sam Bernard. This inimitable comedian has enjoyed a unique position on the metropolitan variety stage for some years. There are many people who do not care for vaudeville, however good, and this element will be glad to learn of the opportunity of seeing this clever comedian on the boards of the legitimate playhouse. In New York Mr. Bernard almost amounts to an institution. He is one of the sights to be seen, or rather heard, for nowhere else could one hear such a humorously impossible dialect. He is playing the title roll in the new farcical comedy "The Marquis of Michigan." The play has no serious aims. Intending patrons will not have to think, but simply laugh at Sam Bernard and his confederates. Among the latter there is the famous Alice Atherton, whose comic ditties have so long been the sensation of New York. Everyone has heard her "laughing" song, but there is no doubt that her new songs in "The Marquis of Michigan" called 'Lazy Bill" and "Nobody's Business but My Own," will exceed it in popularity. The former song is already being whistled by every street urchin.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular; free.

Edward White.

THE ENEMY ROUTED.

You know that I am very fond of hunting, and that I am not confined to America alone in my travels after game. I want to give you a little experience of mine when I was travelling in Australia. I had left what I called my "home station," and was making an excursion in the "blue gum" forest. I had galloped about twenty miles. Dismounting from the horse, I sat down to take a lunch. A large flock of cockatoos, those beautiful white parrots with yellow crests, came circling around and alighted in the trees overhead. I was watching the curious manoeuvres of these birds as they were chattering and hopping about among the limbs, when they stopped suddenly, as if alarmed. Something was evidently approaching of which they were in dread. They set up an awful scream, and with a tremendous flutter spread their wings and flew away.

Just at that moment a large black collie dog came bounding out of the bushes, and suddenly stopped in front of me. For a moment I was startled. The dog passed; eyed me keenly; then, coming slowly up walked around me, and at last approached and licked my hand, which I had held out to him. He then ray away.

I had never seen a dog act in so singular a manner, and was wondering what it could mean, when a sharp, joyful bark warned me that he was returning, and, sure enough, he had come back, wagging his tail, and followed by the gaunt figure of a man, thinly clad, barefooted, and with a wide-brimmed, frayed straw hat on his head. He was about fifty years of age, and, as he removed his hat, and made me a well mannered, dignified bow, I could see that though he was, undoubtedly, a shepherd, he had once been a gentleman.

As he stood bareheaded before me, the wind blew his long, thin, sandy hair about his brow, and he regarded me with a strange, far-off look in his eyes. I met several shepherds after this, and noticed that same strained expression. They live so much alone—sometimes even three or four months without seeing a human being, that they form this habit of looking over the plains, hoping that they may catch sight of some one to relieve the awful monotony of their lives.

The man sat down quietly beside me and eat sparingly and rather mechanically of the lunch, always sharing his morsel with Jack, his dog. I took out a flask of whiskey, and, pouring out some of it into a cup offered my guest a drink. His eyes beamed with a longing look as he saw the liquor, and, turning on me a strange, frightened look, said,—

"No; none of that. Put it away, please. I don't like the sight of it."

It now dawned upon me that my friend was a reformed drunkard, who had come out to this lonely part of the world to avoid temptation. I had heard that there were many such in Australia, and that the shepherd's life was chosen as being the most isloated one that could be found.

I rose to make my departure, when he said.—

"You won't go to-night, will you? It's too late. I wish you would stay in my hut to-night. It's so long since I have seen a human face—over three months. A man only comes once in a great while to bring provisions, and that is all we see of humanity, from one year's end to the other. Do stay to-night won't you?"

"I'd like to oblige you," I replied, "but they will be uneasy about me at the home station."

"But are you sure you know the way? You might get lost."

"Oh, no," I replied.

The poor fellow hung his head and looked the picture of despair.

"How far is the hut?" I asked.

"Only a mile, I assure you."

I agreed to go to it, so he started off at a good pace, fearing I might change my mind, I suppose. The dog ran ahead, barking, and I followed on horseback. We soon came upon his hut. It was built of mud, sticks and straw, with the hard earth for a floor. The shepherd prepared a cup of tea—the usual beverage of the bush.

The sun had gone down behind the low horizon with the same effect that it does at sea. As we sat outside, upon a couple of rude blocks of wood, drinking our refreshing tea, the moon rose up, shedding its soft light over this mysterious scene; there was no sound but the distant tinkle of a sheep's bell and the crackling of the little fire that was boiling the tea. The smoke went up straight and silently into the still air. The loneliness was bad enough with two men; what must it be with one?

I felt that there was something more in my profound acquaintance than I had as yet learned, so I lighted my pipe and began to draw it out. Here was a man who, to judge from his manner and speech, must have been tenderly reared and highly educated, and one, too, who had practised the busy calling of the law, yet in a few years of isolation the bright mind had become faded, and the human look of the face changed almost to the blank expression of a sheep.

I questioned him about his past life. It seems he had been educated at Eton; then became a fast youth in London, where he had studied for the law, and in a short time rose to be a successful barrister. He had married early, and had one child, a daughter, born to him. After two years of wedded life he lost his wife and child, despairingly he took to drink, and being weak and desperate, went down hill and lost his position.

That once lost in London is seldom regained. Not so in America. Here, when a man falls, if he has the strength to brace up again, he goes to the West, and, rubbing up against a new society, absorbs fresh magnetism and recuperates at once. No one need despair in this land of the free. But London is compact. The Englishman hates to leave his home. His failings are known, and if he remains they are flung in his face. There is no escape for him, and as his friends shun him he falls deeper in disgrace.

This was the trouble that had beset the shepherd, who, having a sensitive and perhaps weak mind, succumbed to the pressure that surrounds him, and after a time, with a broken spirit, he left England and went to the colonies. He practised law in Melbourne for some time successfully, but the old habit came back on him, and, as he could not resist temptation, he buried himself in that sheep station.

This was the story he told me, and there was no doubt of its truth.

It was now getting late, and the shepherd insisted on my taking his couch—an old canvas cot, with a plain gray blanket spread upon it. So, as I was tired, I accepted the offer, and lay down for a night's rest. My companion stretched his tall figure on the grass outside. Jack lay between us.

The strangeness of the scene, together with the strong tea, seemed to banish sleep from me, and I must have been lying there for an hour, with my eyes closed but quite awake, when presently I heard something stirring. Opening my eyes, I saw the shepherd sitting up in the doorway with his head resting on his hand. He seemed uneasy, and began restlessly to pass up and down in front of the hut. The dog remained still, but I felt that he was awake and watching his master as he walked nervously backward and forward in the moonlight.

Presently the shepherd stopped in front of the hut and came with a hesitating but irresolute step toward the door. He entered slowly, and, stooping down upon his hands and knees, crawled stealthily to the chair on which my coat was hanging. He put his hand in the breast pocket and drew forth the flask of liquor. And now he seemed bewildered, as if some strong emotion had seized upon him, and then fell upon his knees as if in prayer.

Suddenly he seemed to rise, and instead of drinking the liquor, placed the flask untouched back in the pocket of the coat. Then, stretching himself on the floor, with an apparent air of comfort and satisfaction, he went off to sleep.

The whole proceeding so haunted me that it was broad daylight before I closed my eyes. When I awoke the sun was high in the heavens. My host had prepared breakfast. After our meal he spoke freely of the night's proceedings to me. I told him I had seen all that had taken place.

"I thought it might be so," he said. "The old craving came upon me, so strong too; but if I ever prayed for strength it was then. Well, at that moment there was a hand laid on my head, a calmness came over me that I had not felt for years, and when I returned the flask to your pocket I knew then, as I know now, that another drop of liquor will never pass my lips. As God is my judge, I believe it was the angel hand of my dead wife that rested on my feverish head. It is all over now, thank Heaven! and I can leave this lonely place and return to the world again with safety.

STRANGE MUSHROOMS.

One Kind Worshipped as a God—Another Grown from Coffee Grounds.

There are many kinds of strange mushrooms in the world. The Japanese grow an edible species on logs of decaying wood. Tribes of semi-savages in northeast Asia use a species for snuff. Another variety is utilized by the same people as a substitute for whiskey, one large specimen engendering a pleasant intoxication for a day. This kind is considered poisonous in Europe. Some puffball mushrooms possess anaesthetic properties when burned, and have been employed in this way for surgical operations. An edible fungus is raised in Naples by putting a lot of coffee grounds in the cellar, the mushrooms soon appearing. An Asiatic species is employed for razor strops; it contains minute crystals hard enough to act on steel. This is the Polyporus squamosus. It is cut from an ash tree in Autumn, dried, flattened in a press and sliced, the slices being glued upon wood. It was used anciently in this way.

The mushroom named Polyporus sacer is worshipped in Africa as a god. The German tinder, familiar to cigar smokers, is made from a fungus that is beaten out and steeped in a solution of saltpetre. There is a species that grows on olive trees which is so luminous at night that one can see to read by its light. A fungus peculiar to wine cellars covers bottles with mould; another attacks the corks of bottles, rendering the wine unfit to drink. Yet another species attacks wine casks, devouring the wood and the contents.—Boston Transcript.

In a hog-stealing case in a Georgia justice court the Judge asked the prisoner what he had to say for himself.

He hesitated a moment; then, stepping forward, said:

"I stole dat hog, jedge—yo' honner—but I wants you ter make de sentence light, kase he got 'way fum me no less dan six times, an I sprain two legs en one arm fo' I finally kotched him en got him on de fire!"—Atlanta Constitution.

If Chinese children do not obey their parents, and the latter whip them to death, the law has no punishment for them, as obedience to parents is the cardinal virtue.

MME. GRISI AND JENNY LIND.

A Short Sketch of Two Noted Singers After They Had Left the Stage.

"Mme. Grisi made sad mistakes in her declining years," says the Rev. Mr. Haweis. "Unlike Jenny Lind, she never knew when to leave off. She retired, but found life insupportable. The fact is, unlike Marie, she was quite an empty-headed person, with no pursuits or interests apart from the stage, or any power of occupying herself. Grisi came back to the concert room when far too lame to attempt the stage. I heard her sing at the Crystal Palace somewhere in the sixties. She was born in 1812 and died in 1869. She imprudently tried 'Casta Diva,' her great song in 'Norma,' but reached her high notes with a painful effort. The old men who flocked to hear her and remembered her triumphs in the thirties and forties sat crying like children. They fancied they still heard the goddess of the stage when Rugini, Tagliafico, Mario and Labache had lifted the Italian school under Rossini, Bellini, Donizetti and Verdi to the highest pitch of intoxicating popularity; but to my taste, poor Grisi's 'Casta Diva' was a piteous exhibition.

"How different this from Mme. Lind-Goldschmidt, who, although she had long retired from the public stage, could still sing ballads like 'The Three Ravens' and some of Mendelssohn's 'Leider,' and even 'Oh, for the Wings of a Dove,' with incomparable effect. She sang till quite late in life in the chorus of the Bach choir, under the direction of Otto Goldschmidt, her husband, and one day a little choir boy of mine, who also sang in the Bach choir, came home breathless with excitement, relating how at rehearsal the solo lady had failed them, and how Mme. Lind had volunteered to sing the part in 'Hear My Prayer,' and how nothing he had heard was like it, and nothing could ever be like it again.

"A few days before she died at Malvern, she was driving in an open carriage, inhaling the sweet air of the free Downs, and gazing on the mellowing tints of the autumnal woods; suddenly she lay back on her cushions, and, with her eyes fixed on the distant sky, hummed to herself the sweet melody of 'Oh, for the Wings of a Dove,' which Mendelssohn had written expressly for her many years before. Little did he know that it was to be her swan song."

SOME BIG PENSIONS.

How Our Government Aids the Wives of Dead Presidents and Soldiers.

The Presidents widows get, you know, $5,000 a year by special act of Congress. Mrs. General Grant and Mrs. Garfield and Mrs. Tyler, I think, are still drawing pensions. Mrs. President Lincoln received $3,000 a year from 1870 to 1882, when the amount was increased to $5,000. Mrs. John A. Logan gets $40 a week, and the widow of Admiral Farragut received $2,000 a year. A number of widows of noted generals of the late war have received or are receiving pensions. Among these were the widows of E. D. Baker, George H. Custer, the Indain fighter; of Robert Anderson, the hero of Fort Sumpter; of Daniel McCook and Frank P. Blair.

Among the biggest single pension amounts now granted are those given to widows on account of a clause in the pension act of 1896, which makes the widow's pension date back to the death of her husband. The other day a widow who had been married in 1858, and whose husband had died in 1867, applied for a pension. She claims the right to be paid $8 a month for every month back to the death of her husband, a period of thirty years. The law, I am told, will give her the pension. Another widow from Ohio, whose husband died in 1871, married again fifteen years later. She now claims a pension on account of the death of her first husband for her fifteen years of widowhood, and wants it in a lump.—Frank G. Carpenter, in Washington Star.

How the Japanese Sleep.

When night comes, beds are prepared, says K. Mitsukari in the Atlantic. Bedding is brought out from the closets, where it has been put away during the day. One or two large thick futons, or cushions, are spread directly on the mats of bedrooms, and coverings which look like enormous kimono or clothes are spread over them. Every traveler has told of the pillow made of a wooden box with a little cylindrical cushion on the top, but this kind of pillow is going out of fashion. Softer Cylindrical pillows, made by stuffing a cloth bag with husks of buckwheat, are now more commonly used. In the Summer it is necessary to have mosquito nets, which generally inclose the whole room.

As a rule, Japanese families retire early. Ten o'clock is about the average time. Eleven is considered late. A function that begins at nine or ten and lasts till the small hours of the morning fairly staggers the Japanese. "Why," they say, "even ghosts, who are comme il faut, retire by that hour."

From a Practical Point.

He stood long before a representation of the Venus of Milo.

"I see that you appreciate art," said another visitor to the gallery.

"Appreciate art!" he exclaimed. "Say! I can hardly tear myself away from that statue. If I only had it—"

"I suppose you would never tire of looking at it."

"I'd have it up in the store window in just about two shakes if I had it. Why, sir, you couldn't get a finer or more appropriate figure on which to exhibit the sleeveless undershirt that we are putting on the market."—Chicago Post.

Lokal-Nachrichten aus der alten Heimath.

Preußen.

Provinz Brandenburg.

Berlin. Die hiesige Polizei hat bereits mit schärferen Maßregeln gegen die Anarchisten begonnen. Eine Anzahl verdächtiger Individuen ist aus Berlin ausgewiesen worden und alle Ausländer, namentlich diejenigen, von denen die Polizei glaubt, daß sie falsche Namen führen, werden auf's Schärfste überwacht. Dies hat die unbeabsichtigte Folge gehabt, daß viele Ausländer, um nicht in Ungelegenheiten zu kommen, Berlin verlassen haben.—Professor Nasse, erster Assistenzarzt der chirurgischen Universitätsklinik, hat bei einer Gletscherpartie bei Pontresina durch Absturz den Tod gefunden. Derselbe galt gemeinhin als Bergmanns rechte Hand und genoß den Ruf eines trefflichen Operateurs. Er stand Anfangs der Vierziger und war unverheirathet.—Neue Offiziermäntel werden zur Probe von den Herren aus der nächsten Umgebung des Kaisers getragen. Es sind lange, bis zu den Knien reichende, aus grauem Tuch gefertigte Kapes mit einem Kapuchon.

Beelitz. In der Nähe von hier wurden auf offener Landstraße auf einen Berliner Radfahrer von einem unbekannten Manne drei Revolverschüsse abgegeben. Der Radfahrer wurde schwer, aber nicht unbedingt lebensgefährlich verwundet. Der Räuber schwang sich auf das Rad des Ueberfallenen und fuhr in der Richtung nach hier ab.

Provinz Hannover.

Hannover. Die Thierärztliche Hochschule in Hannover ist in dem abgelaufenen Sommersemester von 218 Studirenden und 22 Hospitanten, insgesammt von 240 Hörern besucht worden. Von diesen stammten 197 aus den verschiedenen Provinzen Preußens, 41 aus den übrigen Staaten des deutschen Reiches, 2 aus dem Auslande. Der Unterricht hat durch die Einschaltung seuchenklinischer Demonstrationen eine Erweiterung erfahren. Ingleichen ist eine Ausdehnung der praktischen Unterweisung der Studirenden in der Fleischbeschau in Aussicht genommen. Die neue mit allen modernen Hilfsmitteln ausgestattete Hochschule ist ihrer Vollendung nahe und wird im kommenden Jahre bezogen werden.

Osnabrück. Zwei Offiziersburschen des 159. Regiments, das hier im Quartier lag, übten in ihrem Logis Gewehrgriffe. Da entlud sich plötzlich das Gewehr des einen, und der Schuß traf den anderen, der todt zu Boden stürzte. Der Thäter, der leichtsinniger Weise das Gewehr mit Platzpatronen geladen hatte, wurde abgeführt.

Provinz Hessen-Nassau.

Kassel. Hier wurde die Errichtung einer Volkslesehalle auf städtische Kosten beschlossen. Die Lesehalle soll im Anschluß an die schon bestehende Volksbibliothek eingerichtet werden und jeden Abend mehrere Stunden Jedermann zugänglich sein. Aufliegen sollen in der Lesehalle außer den politischen Tageszeitungen jeder Richtung insbesondere eine große Anzahl von Fachschriften jeder Art. Die Kosten sind auf etwa 2000 Mark jährlich veranschlagt.

Frankfurt. Hier starb dieser Tage ein Kaufmann, der sich beim Frühstück verschluckte und heftig husten mußte, in Folge der Zerreißung eines Blutgefäßes. Es war ein Bluterguß in das Gehirn eingetreten.

Provinz Pommern.

Stettin. Die Stadtverordneten haben die zwischen der königlichen Regierung und Vertretern der Stadt geschlossenen Verträge genehmigt, wodurch die Errichtung einer Baugewerk- und Maschinenbauschule für die Provinz Pommern mit dem Sitz in Stettin gesichert ist. Der Staat übernimmt die Errichtung der Gebäude und deren Einrichtung und die gesammte Unterhaltung erfolgt aus Staatsmitteln mit der Maßgabe, daß Stettin an Zuschüssen für die Baugewerk- und die Maschinenbauschule je 12,000 Mark, für eine Seedampfer-Maschinistenschule 3000 Mark jährlich zahlt. Die Beihilfe für die Baugewerkschule wird zur Hälfte von der Provinz getragen.

Köslin. An den Folgen einer Blinddarmoperation starb hier, im Alter von 49 Jahren, der Kommerzienrath K. Waldemann. Der Verstorbene hatte sein Geschäft in geräucherten Fisch- und Fleischwaaren aus ganz bescheidenen Anfängen heraus zu einem bedeutenden Exportgeschäft durch rastlose Thätigkeit und unermüdlichen Fleiß emporgebracht. In den letzten Jahren hatte er neue Verbindungen, insbesondere was den Lachsfang anbetrifft, in Amerika, an der ostasiatischen Küste und in Kamtschatka angeknüpft. Unsere Stadt verliert ihren größten Steuerzahler.

Provinz Posen.

YOU'RE READING THIS?

CERTAINLY!

Well, Mr. Merchant-who-thinks-of-advertising, this is only one of the many corners in THE DAILY PRESS—it isn't the best located one, either; we can give you better—and if this attracts your attention in our endeavor to tell you how good advertising will get you a hearing before the purchasing public, doesn't common sense teach you that if you were having people reading your trade story instead of you're reading our argument about it, that it would be better for your business.

THE DAILY PRESS reaches the purchasing public that makes the profits for the merchant.

We can give you big or little space—but in advertising it is'nt always economy to be sparing in your appropriation.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Miss Emmott felt that she was progressing very well. Lady Bettaby and the Major took every opportunity of throwing her and Sir Roydon together; and, although the Baronet was more irritated than anything else by the girl's chatter, he was too indifferent and apathetic to struggle against their joint efforts. Consequently Sabina herself was able to play the part of the shy and demure little maiden without losing anything by it; and she played it very nicely.

One day Sabina, who had been studying a guide-book to the neighborhood, expressed some eagerness to see a certain famous rocking-stone on the moors, six miles away from the house by road, and took care to express the wish when Lady Bettaby and Sir Roydon were present. As it happened, her father was also present, and he almost spoiled her plans by saying that he himself would like to drive over with her and see it.

"But, papa," said the girl, "you know that it gave you neuralgia the last time you drove with me across the moors, and you said that you would not do it again."

The Major did not remember saying so, but he was pleased as usual with his daughter's care of him.

"It would be a pity for you to miss seeing it if you wish to have a look at it," he said. "Of course you cannot go alone."

"I would much rather not see it than that you should make yourself ill, papa," said Sabina, with spirit, "although it is said to be very remarkable. Would you like a drive, Lady Bettaby? I will promise to go very slowly." Her ladyship professed to feel nervous because of Sabina's reckless driving.

As usual Lady Bettaby came to the girl's assistance by making an appeal to the young Baronet.

"You have not seen the Chicken-Stone, have you, Roy?" she asked innocently.

"Only when I was staying here as a boy," said Roydon.

"Then you would like to see it again," remarked her ladyship. "You might drive Sabina over after tea. The air will do you good, and you will get back in time for dinner."

"But, dear Lady Bettaby," said Sabina, in shy protest, "I am sure that Sir Roydon will not like to be troubled by my chatter for all that time. I never know what to talk about to clever men."

"Then Roy cannot be clever," said her ladyship, "for I notice that you have always plenty to say to him."

The discussion ended in Sabina and Sir Roydon's driving off together in the dog-cart. During the drive Miss Emmott made herself as agreeable as possible.

"If I have only time, I will make him marry me yet," she said to herself daily. "But I wonder what has become of the Californian girl!"

Miss Emmott's ignorance with regard to Lilac's fate was the only disturbing element in the situation. Sabina was far too shrewd a judge of character to believe that Sir Roydon's fiancee had proved unstable or that the affection which she undoubtedly had for him had changed, and she was puzzled to think what had come between the lovers and prevented Lilac from giving her own truthful account of her conduct on board the Gemini.

"I suppose it is her high-and-mighty ladyship's doing," she said to herself, having formed an equally shrewd estimate of Lady Garth; and the fear that the misunderstanding between the lovers which had caused the Baronet's illness might be a temporary one, liable at any moment to be removed, rendered her uneasy.

As she started on her drive to the Chicken-Stone, she determined at all costs to question her companion, and draw from him in some manner all that she wanted to know; but, as it was a matter of considerable delicacy, she wisely put it off till the return journey. It was not till they had visited the curiously-shaped stone, climbed it, and were returning home, that Miss Emmott ventured to begin. They were already nearing the village of Westwood, and Sabina had been talking about her travels with her father, and, in speaking of the voyage home across the Atlantic, she incidentally mentioned Lilac's name. She stopped awkwardly as she did so.

"I beg your pardon!" she said hastily.

"Why?" asked Roy gravely; and the girl turned her head to take a peep at his inscrutable face.

"I thought that you did not like me to mention her," she said.

The Baronet's voice sounded cold and stern.

"It is immaterial to me whether you do so or not," he said.

Sabina shivered, frightened a little by his tone. But she kept on boldly.

"I am so glad that you will allow me!" she remarked warmly. "I have been anxious to hear about her. You see I was very fond of her, in spite of her conduct, and I should like to know whether she is well."

"I cannot tell you," said Roy. "Miss Marvel left Delverton before my return, and I have no knowledge of her subsequent movements."

"Dear me!" cried Sabina incrediulously. "It seems impossible that a girl could be so foolish as to undervalue a love like yours!" She ended the sentence with a shy hesitation. "I wish that you would stop at the postoffice as we pass," she said when they entered the village; "I have a purchase to make."

"Can I get it for you?" he asked, as he pulled up the mare; but Sabina shook her head, smiling.

"I know that you can do almost everything, Sir Roydon, but I do not think that you can match wool."

"Will you try me?"

"I should not like to tax your energies so much before we have made you quite strong again; besides, it is getting to dark for anybody but an expert—not a mining expert—" She broke off, smiling again, and jumped down lightly, passing through the long garden that led to the curious little village shop where two old spinsters sold a marvelous variety of small articles, besides ministering to the postal needs of the neighborhood.

The postal department was petitioned off from the rest of the shop; and, as Sabina entered, and was about to make her presence known, she caught the sound of the telegraph-needle ticking off a message behind the partition. She was thinking in a casual way that a knowledge of the Morse code might have been useful to her, when her attention was attracted by the sound of voices in the post-office as the ticking of the instrument ceased.

"Do you know which is Sir Roydon Garth at Lady Bettaby's?" asked one speaker; and the question was sufficient to keep Sabina quiet in the hope of hearing more before the two old ladies discovered the presence of a customer in the shop.

The voice that replied was too indistinct for her to catch a word.

"Well, this is a curious enough telegram for him, whoever he is," said the distinct voice. "Read it."

Then came low mumbled words, which even Sabina Emmott's quick ears could not catch, and she bit her lip with vexation to think that, without quite succeeding, she should be so near learning something that she was not intended to learn. She had despaired too soon, however. Her hopes of hearing what was in this curious telegram to Sir Roydon rose as the younger of the two old ladies spoke again.

"You are always mislaying them," she said. "You ought to keep them in a hanging case. I will read you what it says." And, all unconscious of the listening ears on the other side of the wooden partition, she read aloud in her clear voice the whole of Evangeline's carefully worded telegram—

"All a mistake about L. She thought we cared for each other, and sacrificed her happiness for my sake. Flirtation on board Gemini a slander. She consented to marry M. only a week ago when aunt G. had told her we were engaged. Will marry him to-morrow at ten in the morning unless you appear. Come direct to me at 'Adelphi Hotel,' Liverpool. Whether you understand or not, for the sake of your life's happiness and L.'s, come to-night at all costs.

"EVANGELINE."

"There is a romance in that if we could only understand it. I wonder who L. is?" said the clear voice, when the telegram was read; but Sabina did not stay to hear the old ladies' comments.

On hearing the message Sabina knew she must act at once if she did not wish to lose the prize on which she had set her heart. Before the reading was finished she had slipped off one of her gloves, and, removing an old-fashioned ruby ring from her finger, put it away in her purse. Then she stepped on tiptoe out of the little shop even more noiselessly than she had entered it.

"You do not take long over your matching," said Sir Roy, as she appeared at the garden gate. "I had reckoned on half an hour."

"I have not had time to think about the wool," said Sabina in distress. "I am so much upset! Directly I took off my glove to open my purse, I noticed that my ruby ring was gone. It used to be my mother's, and I would not lose it for the world. I am afraid I must have lost it when I was climbing the Chicken-Stone. That was the only time that I took my gloves off."

"Perhaps it is in your glove still," said Roy, with instant solicitude. "Have you looked inside the finger?"

"I have looked everywhere," she said showing him her glove as she spoke. "I am afraid that I shall have to go back to the stone."

"Then we had better start at once," he said, "before it gets too dark to see, unless you think that it will be safe there until to-morrow. I do not suppose that half a dozen people go near the Chicken-Stone in the course of a year."

"I could not think of leaving it," said Sabina, aghast at the suggestion; "I should not sleep a wink all night. But there is no need for you to be late for dinner. I can easily drive back alone."

"Or rather I can," said Roy, "if you do not mind walking home by yourself."

Much to the Baronet's surprise Sabina at once accepted his offer, but with many expressions of regret at the trouble she was causing him.

"I should prefer, of course, to go back with you," she said; "but papa is so dreadfully particular, you know—he would be very angry if I was late for dinner."

"Then you had better start at once," he said, glancing at his watch. "I will just give a look around the shop before I turn back, to satisfy myself that you have not dropped the ring there."

This was not at all in accordance with Sabina's plans. Already, in spite of her apparent coolness, she was chafing at the delay in getting Sir Roydon away from the postoffice, from which at any moment Evangeline's telegram might be brought out for delivery. The chances were that, when the messenger recognized the dog-cart, he would make some inquiry as to its occupant before trudging the two miles to Lady Bettaby's. If Sir Roydon entered the shop on any pretext, the risks would be increased tenfold, of course, of the telegram being delivered to him there.

"I have looked thoroughly," she said.

"But it will not take me a moment," he persisted, "and I should like to satisfy myself."

"It will be a waste of labor."

Sir Roydon Garth little guessed how much depended upon his decision.

"If you are so certain, I will trust your eyes, then, instead of my own. Please make my apologies to Lady Bettaby if I do not arrive in time. Au revoir, Miss Emmott! I hope that I shall be successful!"

Sabina smiled to herself as the Baronet drove away, and, with a mind more at ease, she turned back to purchase her wool, for her plans were not yet completed. Even if Sir Roydon's wild-goose chase occupied three hours, he would still have plenty of time to get to Liverpool before Lilac's marriage, and Sabina had no intention of allowing him to do so.

"I suppose that you have no letters for me," she said, as she was making her purchases—"Miss Emmott, at Lady Bettaby's?"

The old lady shook her head.

"The afternon letters have already been sent out," she explained, "and there will not be any more till to-morrow."

Sabina tried again.

"I was expecting a telegram," she said; and the old lady shook her head once more.

"There has been no telegram for any one of the name of 'Emmott.' There was one a few minutes ago for Sir Roydon Garth, at Lady Bettaby's."

"I may as well take it with me, then," said Sabina, but a disappointment awaited her.

"We have just sent it off, thank you, miss, by the messenger," returned the woman. "You would have passed him if he had gone by the road."

"How has he gone, then?" asked Sabina in chagrin; and the old lady explained that he had gone across the park, which touched the back-garden of the post-office.

Miss Emmott did not think it prudent to show any further interest in the message or the messenger. But she completed her purchases quickly, and, when she had left the shop, walked briskly along the road home. Quickly as she walked, however, the messenger had reached the house before her, and, when she entered, it was to see a yellow envelope addressed to Sir Roydon Garth lying upon the hall-table.

Nobody had noticed her entrance except the two servants who had carried in between them an immense fern to place upon the same table as the telegram. Sabina waited until they had gone, and then, raising the vase in which the fern stood—a feat which called forth all her strength—she slipped the telegram underneath, and, having made sure that no part of the yellow envelope could be seen, she tripped up-stairs, singing softly to herself.

THE CHINAMAN'S HOUSE SHOE.

Very Comfortable to Wear and Considered Conducive to Health.

The house shoes universally worn by the Chinamen are woven of straw and seaweed and soled with horsehide. There is a thick sole of straw above the leather, and through this the air can circulate freely, keeping the muscles of the under part of the foot always cool. There is about as little material in the uppers as is consistent with the idea of a shoe, and this is just enough to keep the thing on the foot. This upper, too, is woven loosely of seaweed, so that the air can have access to the foot. Nowhere does this shoe pinch or in the least degree press the foot.

These are the indoor shoes of the Chinaman. On the street here in the United States nowadays he wears very commonly the leather shoes or boots of American manufacture. That is one of the ways in which he is becoming Americanized. But the outdoor cloth shoe of China is a great deal worn also. That, like the indoor shoe, is very thick and soft in the sole, and the foot is never pinched or strained by it. The healthiest footgear ever known probably was the sandal of the Greeks. It had no upper, and the feet of men and women were ideally perfect. All the sandal afforded was a protection from the ground. "To him who wears sandals," say the Arabs, "it is as if the world were shod with leather." The Chinaman seems to follow out this motto, and his shoes are nearly soles and nothing more. But the great secret of the excellence of his indoor shoes is the half-inch straw sole.—New York Tribune.

Anecdote of Aldrich.

A very clever anecdote is told of Thomas Bailey Aldrich. One day the distinguished author happened to saunter into an auction room while a sale of rare editions, old manuscripts and autographs was going on. The auctioneer, holding in his hands a bundle of letters, said: "Ladies and gentlemen, I have here two autographs written by a man named Thomas Bailey Aldrich. I shall now start them for you at the price of two for five cents." No bids were made and they were sold for that sum.

Mr. Aldrich, in speaking of the incident afterward to a friend, said: "I wouldn't have cared at all if they had gone for five cents each, but 'two for five' reminded me very forcibly of little apples."—Philadelphia Post.

FEMALE SALMON INCONSTANT.

Five Times in One Day a Widowed Fish Got New Husbands.

"In the interest of amateur science," said Lonmore S. Burt of Montreal, "I once interfered cruelly with some most interesting piscatorial domestic economy in a stream on the estate of an English gentleman where I was overseer of the game and fish preserves.

"One day I discovered a pair of salmon on their spawning ground and speared the male. The female showed some little agitation, but soon recovered, and presently went hurriedly down stream.

"'Another prospective salmon family made food for hungry foes,' thought I, for I supposed the female had abandoned the nest.

"But I was mistaken. She was gone only a few minutes, and then she returned in company with a splendid specimen of a salmon of the sterner sex. He stepped right into the shoes of his predecessor, so to speak, and was as tender, devoted, and watchful as ever the first husband had been. This exhibition of inconstancy on the part of the female blunted the sympathy I might have had for her over the taking off of her first mate, and I destroyed her new felicity by spearing her second husband. He wasn't out of the water a minute before that female salmon, the second time a widow, dashed down the stream again, and in less than ten minutes came back with a third husband. He started in as proud as the other two had been, and was even spoonier than they, if that were possible. I speared the third husband. The widow instantly went away and got a fourth. Five times I bereft her of her mate. I don't know whether the supply of unmated salmon had then run out or not, but on her sixth venture she returned home with a big, handsome yellow trout as her consort. He seemed fully as devoted to her as any of her husbands had been, and perhaps all would have been well if I had left her to her new love. But the conduct rather nettled me, and I enlarged the tragedy by spearing her. The big yellow trout darted away to the middle of the stream but after I had lifted the often-widowed salmon from the water he returned to the nest, glanced over it a moment, then deliberately devoured its eggs, and sailed away down stream."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

TATTOOING MADE EASY.

Not So Painful as It Used to be—Work Accomplished by a Little Machine.

Since a certain English Prince returned from his trip around the world with a choice selection of oriental designs in scarlet and black pricked into his skin, tattooing has become the vogue in fashionable circles. Formerly, a man had to go to the far East to find the first masters of the tattooing art, many of whose productions were most elaborate and artistic, and the possession of a few square inches of their best work was looked upon as an enviable distinction of the traveled man of the world. Now, any one can have the epidermis disfigured as lavishly as he wishes at home, and the operation, which used to be exceedingly painful, is accomplished with comparatively little suffering to the person tattooed. An American, who had picked up all the tricks of the trade in Japan, turned it to account on his return in the manufacture of museum freaks. But the process was tedious and he set his wits to work on an electric tattooing machine. This has been completed, and the "professor" now stipples in his weird designs "while you wait." The subject to be operated upon makes a choice of designs from a scrap book, or suggests an original theme, or even a portrait. The operator draws the design on celluloid with a stylus. This is laid and applied to the skin, on which the imprint is left. Over these lines, one or more needles, connected to an electric motor, are made to work rapidly with an action similar to that of a dental plugger. In a few minutes, the work of pricking in is done, a wash is put over the part to minimize the pain of the incident inflammation, and the "professor" has earned his fee. To each machine there is a set of attachments carrying rows and bunches of needles—from five to fifty—for economizing time where broad effects are needed.

THE DINNER PARTY.

They had only been married a month and it was their first dinner party, consequently they were both a little flurried when the time came for the guests to arrive.

She had superintended the arranging of the table herself, and now stood surveying its new silver, glass and linen with housewifely pride.

"Do you really think everything will go well, Tom?" she asked for the twentieth time.

And for the twentieth time he answered,—

"Of course it will go well. I only pity the poor fellows who have no wife and no home of their own."

"Oh, Tom, how nice!" she gurgled, "and how I do pity the girls who have no nice, kind husbands! There is Helen. She is such a nice, sweet girl, she really ought to know how nice it is to be married."

"Yes, indeed. And then there is Jack. He has no ideas of what happiness he is missing."

She walked into the parlor, and, standing before the mirror, she rearranged the rose in her hair.

"Do you like it so?" she asked.

"It is lovely. Poor Jack! how he must envy me."

"And, O, Tom, I do feel sorry for Helen. Hark! is that a carriage?"

They both fell into easy attitudes of expectancy, but the carriage rolled on. He took out his watch and looked at it. It was just seven.

"O, dear," she murmured, "I'm afraid they will not be prompt, and my note said seven, sharp."

"Perhaps my watch is fast," he said, knowingly.

She moved her lace pin a little, regarding herself in the glass with a critical air. He walked up and down with his hands in his pockets.

"Oh, dear!" she wailed. "They are late already, and the cook will be so cross. She looks perfectly colossal when she is cross, Tom."

"And the women will have to chatter half an hour in the dressing room after they come," he groaned.

"Why, Tom, how unkind! As if the men did not like to stay just as long with their horrid cigars."

"Listen; here they come!"

They fell again into positions, but the wheels passed on.

"It is odd," she said. "People never kept mamma waiting this way. They were always anxious to come to her house."

"Perhaps they have gone there now."

"Why, Tom! But I do wish they would come! I'm afraid the dinner is ruined. I don't dare to go to see. I wonder if I might call down the tube?"

"Of course," was the airy response. "I say, this is an awful bore. I envy Jack. Nobody expects him to give dinner parties."

"And I envy Helen. She has no one to talk unkindly to her."

The clock chimed the half hour.

"You are sure you said seven sharp?"

"Of course I am. I am not quite an imbecile yet, if I have married you."

"Who is talking unkindly now?"

"O, I never thought you would treat me so when you begged me to marry you."

"I only asked you once, and you said 'Yes' quick enough."

"I never thought you would be a brute."

"And I never thought you would be a virago."

"Nobody will accept my invitations now just because I married you. Mamma said I was making a mistake."

"People were always glad to accept my invitations before I was married."

"Very well; if you want to be free I will go home."

"If you want to go pray don't allow me to detain you."

The clock chimed out eight light strokes; carriages kept rolling by, but none of them stopped. She went into the bedroom and began opening drawers and boxes and taking out their contents, which she could not see for her tears. He tried to hum a popular song, watching her movements furtively through the open door. Would she really leave him? And what would the boys say if she did?

She tumbled the costly things about in a careless fashion. What did her beauty matter now when she was going home with a broken heart to die?

"But why did everybody stay away?" he muttered between his teeth.

"Haven't we a friend in the world?" she asked herself.

Then she gave a cry. Her eye had fallen on a white heap in the corner of a drawer.

"Tom," she cried in tragic tones, "here are all my invitations now; I had forgotten to mail them."

They looked at each other a moment, those two who were about to part forever. Then a smile curled the corner of her mouth. In an instant she was clasped in his arms. Then a shrill whistle sounded from the tube and an offended voice called:—

"Would yez be havin' any dinner tonoight?"

"Oh, Tom," she whispered, "how shall I ever tell the cook?"—New York World.

Everything Going.

The steamer rolled and pitched in the waves.

"Deah boy," groaned Cholly, at the end of his first hour on shipboard, "promise me you will send my remains home to my people!"

A second hour passed.

"Deah boy," feebly moaned Cholly, "you needn't send my remains home. There won't be any."—Chicago Tribune.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

Rev. George Hauser, of the borough, who has just returned from a trip abroad, tells his friends a good story about a rat that appeared on the ship. The sailors were so superstitious about that little animal that they would not allow Mr. Hauser to kill it. They declared that if he did they would have a rough voyage.

MORE SCHOOL CHILDREN.

SUPT. WIGHTMAN, OF THE BOROUGH, REPORTS AN INCREASE.

Some Classes So Large That Half-Day Sessions Will Be Held—New Building Badly Needed—Will Relieve Crowding.

An important meeting of the Borough Board of Education was held in the schoolhouse last Monday evening, when several matters of interest were considered and acted upon. Contractor Wm. C. Smith stated that work on the new public school has progressed to the first story, and the Board ordered that the first payment on the work be made. Four school children residing near Dunellen district asked the Borough Board to transfer them to the Dunellen district, as the borough school is too far away for them to attend. The request was granted.

Superintendent Wightman reported that there are now 180 new scholars attending the public school who did not attend last year. There are also 116 more scholars in the primary department than can be accomodated. The class taught by Miss Stanton has 100 scholars. This class will be divided, and the Board decided to secure a new teacher. The new teacher and half of the class will occupy the same room, holding a session at a late hour in the afternoon.

The Board directed that the lease on the German Reformed church, which has been used for school purposes, be terminated after October 15th, and that Miss Hetfield and her class return to the public school building, where half-day sessions will be held. Various complaints were received by the Board concerning half-day sessions, but nothing can be done until the new school is completed.

NEGRCES AGAINST VOORHEES.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 28.—A convention of colored voters was held yesterday afternoon in the Taylor Opera House assembly rooms. It was decided that they present themselves in a body to the Democratic Gubernatorial Convention today and ask for recognition.

The leaders of the movement say they don't want any promises from the Democrats, but mean to show the Republicans what the colored voters can do.

By resolution they condemned the Republican party for laxity in giving representation, and the Republican candidate for Governor, Foster M. Voorhees, "for his unfriendly action to our race, viz., his antagonistic efforts to defeat a measure in behalf of the Bordentown Colored Industrial School. He and Senator Skirm were the two Republicans who voted against this measure, which was directly in the interest of every New Jersey Afro-American."

THEFT OR JOKE, WHICH?

A valuable horse and wagon owned by Edward Campbell, of Park avenue, was stolen last evening at the clambake given by Mr. Emery, of Scotch Plains. Mr. Campbell drove to the scene of the festivities and tied his horse under the hotel sheds. Later in the evening when he got ready to return home he found that his rig was gone. He searched long and patiently, but was unable to find his rig. At first the matter was thought to be a joke, but when Mr. Campbell learned that he would have to depend on somebody else to get home, the affair became a serious one. Thus far it is not known whether the rig has been found or not.

Sprained Her Ankle.

Miss Dunavan, of West Second street, sprained her ankle last evening on West Fourth street while hurrying for a trolley car. She turned her ankle on the curb and was thrown to the ground. Passersby assisted her to the car and she was taken home.

NOT A CANDIDATE.

Mr. Martine States That He Will Not Be a Senatorial Nominee.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Having repeatedly seen my name mentioned in connection with the nomination of Senator, I deem it but just to my friends to state that I am not a candidate for that office, and will not be.

I feel we have many within our ranks who can carry our standard to victory in the contest. The nominee of our convention will receive my most earnest and warm support.

Respectfully,

J. E. Martine.

After passing through many adventures as a nurse in the ambulance train of the Fifth Army Corps, Daniel C. Main returned to the home of his parents, Rev. Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Main, of Central avenue, yesterday. Main reached New York last Thursday on the transport, "Seguranco," but was detained at quarantine until yesterday when he started for home.

He is looking much better than was expected after his encounter with yellow and malarial fevers but still is rather thin and weak.

TODAY'S CONVENTION.

county Democrats was in striking contrast from that of the Union men. The caucus met in room 28 at the Trenton House promptly at 10 o'clock. Judge Bartine, of Somerville, was made chairman, and George H. Cramer, of North Branch, secretary. The representatives on the convention committees were chosen as follows: Rules, L. S. DeFour, of Bound Brook; organization, Judge J. D. Bartine, of Somerville; resolutions, ex-Senator Charles B. Moore, of Franklin; credentials, George H. Cramer, of North Branch.

The delegates were sent unpledged to the convention where they will vote as individuals and not as a solid delegation. This, of course, practically admits that the vote from Somerset will be divided. North Plainfield is represented by John P. Emmons, H. M. Cooke and W. H. Smith.

There is a great concourse of politicians here who make the Trenton House their headquarters. Prominent among them is the "Farmer Orator," James E. Martine, of Plainfield. Before noon, the hour set for the convention, the delegates began to swarm in the direction of Taylor's Opera House where the convention met.

The convention, with the exception of the Union county delegation, was ready to begin at noon, but the call to order was delayed forty minutes for the men from Union county. Then tiring of waiting, Col. Price, chairman of the State committee, called the convention to order at 12:40 o'clock, after which the State call was read. Five minutes later the Union county delegation marched in to their seats. A section in front, to the left of the centre, was reserved for them. In the proscenium box, overlooking them, was Senator Smith.

The temporary organization was effected with ex-Prosecutor William B. Gourley, of Passaic, as temporary chairman and William K. Dovereux, of Monmouth, as temporary secretary, with the following assistant secretaries: S. A. Lanning, Cumberland: John H. Mattison, Somerset; James D. Carpenter, Gloucoster; H. L. Stout, Hunterdon; James J. Farrell, Essex: Charles A. Ranson, Hudson; James F, Burke, Camden; James Kerney, Mercer.

Chairman Gourley made an eloquent address in which he rehearsed the faults of the present state of administration and condemned the action of Griggs in accepting the national appointment as unconstitutional. During the speech, he mentioned the name of Bryan which was loudly cheered by the delegates from the rural districts. Sebator Daly, who afterwards rose to make a motion, received an ovation.

At 1:30 o'clock the convention adjourned for a recess of an hour. The convention is said to be the largest and most enthusiastic Democratic gathering ever held in Trenton. Each gathering of the different candidates has all sorts of badges and placards for its favorite son. So far the race is free for all and it is impossible to say how it is going to turn out.

Senator Smith, as yet, has come out strongly for no special candidate.

The Democratic State committee held a meeting last evening in room 16 at the Trenton House, at which the temporary officers of the convention were chosen.

The committee decided to increase the number of delegates in the convention to 1,051, which gives the following counties these additional delegates: Hudson, 6; Bergen, 1; Burlington, 1: Camden, 2; Essex, 2; Middlesex, 1; Somerset, 1; Union, 2. It was also decided to allow two colored delegates from Monmouth county into the convention. The delegates will be John Marshall and W. Frank Patterson. It was further agreed that a body of dissatisfied Republican colored voters, numbering 60, should be allowed into the convention hall, and that Colonel William Murrell could make a five-minute speech, stating what arrangement the colored voters desired to have made for the establishment of a permanent colored headquarters.

THE YOUNG CHRISTIANS

State Convention of Endeavorers at Asbury Park.

PLAINFIELD'S WELCOME.

DELEGATES DIVIDED BETWEEN TWO HOTELS.

Everything Arranged For Their Comfort—A Big Attendance at the Opening Session Last Night—The Chief Speaker Was Major Z. K. Pangborn.

Asbury Park, Sept. 28—The sun shone its best on the Asbury Park special that took the Christian Endeavor delegation from Plainfield this morning. Engine 41 was the motive power for the train of five cars, and Walter Durling the very accommodating conductor in charge. The remainder of the train crew consisted of Engineer Frank Marshall, Fireman W. L. Smith, and Brakemen H. Wallaner and L. VanLake. There were 170 passengers on board, including the following, whose names were not mentioned in the former list printed in The Press: Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Beeching, Miss Ida Spicer, Mr. and Mrs. Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ammerman, Rev. J. S. Braker, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church; Miss Annie Wyckoff and Mrs. Ira Winthrop Travell. Nine passengers were added to the train at Westfield, and one at Elizabeth. The run was made in an hour and twenty minutes. The cars were a scene of lively sociability during the entire journey, visiting from seat to seat, making the aspect of a car very different from that on an ordinary occasion. There was a little desultory singing on the part of the delegates, but no services were held, such as took place on the Atlantic City special three years ago. Jos. M. Hawkins, of the transportation committee, was in charge of the train, and made everybody as comfortable as possible. Robert Love, of the Third Street mission, refreshed his fellow travelers with five-o'clock-tea crackers, until his box was returned to him with only a few crumbs in the bottom.

Trolley tickets were distributed before the train reached Asbury Park, and a jolly crowd of Endeavorers, laden with wraps, bundles, and dress-suit cases, poured into the cars at the station, and were soon landed safely at their various hotels. Most of the delegates were quartered at the Willard, on Second avenue. The first delegates to reach there were Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Peck, who stood, smiling a welcome, on the piazza when the others arrived. Nearly fifty delegates from Paterson were also at the Willard, and the two delegations formed a large and jolly family party. They found a pleasant, clean house, with comfortable beds, and plenty of blankets for use in case of cold weather. At the Willard the delegates united in singing Christian Endeavor songs, under the leadership of Horace J. Martin.

The delegates at the Albemarle found themselves in the company of its State officers. In the dining room, genial Dr. Cornelius Brett, State President, beamed on his large farge family from the head of one of the central tables. E. E. Anthony, State Treasurer, was at another table, and Miss Ida B. Stephens, State Secretary, at still another. The Albermarle was found to be a very comfortable temporary abode, with large and pleasant rooms, and a fire burning briskly, all ready for cold weather.

All delegates were obliged to register at the Auditorium in order to receive their badges and programmes. A well-appointed registration room was fitted up on the lower floor of the building, where an obliging committee presented each person with the convention badge, of orange and black ribbon, with an oblong of celluloid,

MARRIED SIX YEARS.

THE EVENT MADE A PLEASANT SURPRISE FOR MR. AND MRS. RYNO.

A Party of Friends Made a Visitation Unexpectedly, but They Were Received Cordially—A Pleasant Time.

Yesterday was the sixth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Corra Ryno, of Codington avenue, but aside from the realization of the fact little else was thought of it by the couple until last evening about 8:30 o'clock, when a large company of friends took them by storm and thus brought to their minds pleasant recollections. The surprise was complete as arranged by Mr. and Mrs. Horace Huff, and an evening of uninterrupted pleasure was enjoyed by everyone.

The celebrants received their guests in a hospitable manner. Nothing was omitted to make the affair complete and the guests found the time passing quickly in various amusements and in having a social chat.

During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Ryno were presented with a handsome rocking chair from their friends. They accepted the gift with many thanks. The hospitality of the host and hostess was evidenced in the serving of refreshments which all enjoyed, and at an early hour this morning the guests departed wishing Mr. and Mrs. Ryno many happy returns of the occasion.

Those present included Mr. and Mrs. George Melick, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Huff, Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Stout, Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Force, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Stein, Mr. and Mrs. John Kitchen, Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Waldron, Mr. and Mrs. George Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Higgins, Mrs. L. C. Kline and Willard R. Ross.

MAY LOCATE WORKSHERE

AMERICAN AUTOMOBILE COMPANY LOOKING FOR FACTORY SITE.

Willard M. Miner, of East Sixth Street, Secretary of the Company, is Desirous of Locating the Manufactory in Plainfield

The American Automobile Company is looking for a site for its manufactory. Willard M. Miner, secretary of the company, is a resident of this city and is desirous of having the plant located in Plainfield or its immediate vicinity. The company proposes to have between two and three hundred men at work in a year from the present time in the manufacture of horseless carriages. The company controls several new ideas for this class of vehicle and has one of the best and most practical carriages in existence at the present time, the perfect efficiency of which has already been proved.

It is the intention of the company to manufacture the carriages in such a number as to meet the popular demand which is rapidly increasing on this side of the Atlantic.

The corporation is very anxious to locate at once and begin work with the opening of the coming period of prosperity. They have already had several excellent offers from cities and Boards of Trade in New England, but they are quite desirous of locating at a convenient distance from New York city. If sufficient inducements are offered here, the company will undoubtedly make this city their headquarters.

The visitors had come over in stages and on wheels, and took the Plainfield people entirely by surprise. A few hours were spent in conversation and speechmaking before the visitors departed. Cigars and refreshments were served by the Plainfield members, who hurried out after something as soon as the guests appeared.

PRETTY WEDDING OF AUTUMNAL SEASON.

A Brilliant Social Event in a Borough House.

CASE-NEEDHAM NUPTIALS.

BRIDE'S HOME THE SCENE OF A LIFE UNION PLEDGE.

A pretty wedding of the autumnal season was that of yesterday afternoon, when Miss Alice Louise Needham, daughter of former Mayor and Mrs. Henry E. Needham, of 27 Jackson avenue, became the wife of James Herbert Case, of Westervelt avenue. The wedding was celebrated at the home of the bride's parents at 5:30 o'clock in the presence of about sixty relatives and intimate friends of the contracting parties. Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church, officiated. A very impressive and pleasing feature of the occasion was the rendering of the wedding march by Howard Case, brother of the groom, who presided at the piano, and P. Ludwig Conde, who played the violin.

As the march was being perfectly executed, the groom and his brother, Samuel P. Case, who was the best man, entered the parlor and took positions in the northwest corner of the room, where the officiating clergyman stood waiting to receive the bridal party. Following, came the bridemaids, Miss Bertha Needham, sister of the bride, and Miss Lenora Williams. The last to enter the room was the bride accompanied by her father, who gave his daughter away. A semi-circle was formed, and surrounded by beautiful floral decorations consisting of palms, ferns and ivy, the ceremony that made the happy couple one, was performed. During the ceremony soft strains of music were heard and this added not a little to the event.

Immediately after the bride and groom reversed their position and were the recipients of hearty congratulations from those present.

The bride was richly gowned in white organdie, trimmed with lace and ribbons. She also wore a veil and carried a beautiful bouquet of bridal roses. The bridesmaids were also gowned in white organdie, with trimmings of lace and ribbons, and they carried pink roses. Their appearance was an occasion for great admiration on the part of those present.

Following congratulations a wedding supper was served to the guests and this part of the affair was complete in every respect. The home was prettily decorated throughout, and the prevailing color was pink. In the dining room this color was brought out to perfection.

As already stated the guests included only the near relatives and friends, but an exceedingly pleasant feature of the event was the presence of Willard Case, brother of the groom, who is a member of the 5th Cavalry, U. S. A. Mr. Case was obliged to return home on account of illness, but was able to attend the marriage of his brother.

Mr. and Mrs. Case were showered with handsome, costly and useful gifts from their many friends, including silverware, cut-glass, furniture, china and many other gifts too numerous to mention.

Early last evening the bride and groom left the city for the Berkshire Hills, where they will enjoy their honeymoon. Upon their return they will reside at their new residence, 83 Duer street, which has been remodeled and now awaits their occupancy.

The groom has been for many years associated with the Market and Fulton Bank, of New York, where he is a valued employe. His wife was formerly an efficient and valuable member of the corps of teachers in the Borough Public High School. They both have the best wishes of their many friends for success and a happy married life.

Eagle Proves to be a Fish Hawk.

A week or so ago George Belcher, of East Fifth street, captured what he thought was a young eagle. The bird was caught near Smalley's ice pond, and now Mr. Belcher has it caged at his home in a large box. Yesterday a young man thoroughly conversant with birds of all kinds looked at the supposed eaglet and pronounced it a fish hawk, and a full grown one at that.

—A new heating apparatus is being put in the North Avenue station.

WEDDING BELLS RANG

MERRY AND RESONANT TONES ANNOUNCED THE NUPTIAL UNION.

Marriage Ceremony of Miss Oleava Male to William H. Ross Was a Very Pretty One—Large Number Present.

The marriage of Miss Oleava Male, daughter of Ambrose Male, of 926 Putnam avenue, and William Ross, of East Second street, was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Charles E. Herring. A marriage bell of greens and golden rod hung between the front and back parlors, and under this floral ornament the wedding party stood while the clergyman united the two. The bell was called a "liberty bell," and as the two were pronounced man wife, a real bell concealed among the flowers pealed forth the news right joyfully.

The bride is a brunette, and was attired in white silk, trimmed with real lace. She wore the customary veil and some apple blossoms in her hair and carried white roses. The bridesmaid was Miss Susie Scheaffer, of this city, and she wore pink silk trimmed with mousleinde soirs, and lace. She carried pink roses.

To the accompaniment of Beethoven's wedding march, played on the piano by Harold Fenner, the clergyman, the groom and his best man, Harry F. Ryno, of Newburg, descended the front stairs and entering through the front parlor took their places under the marriage bell. The bride and her father, followed by the bridemaid, entered through the back parlor. When the ceremony was over an informal reception was held, followed by a wedding supper.

The groom was for some time an employe of VanEmburgh & Son, the dry goods merchants. The couple will take a trip to Rochester next week, and upon their return will reside at the bride's home.

The couple were well remembered with presents. There was a rocking chair from the employes of VanEmburgh & Son's store; a clock from George VanEmburgh; a silver set from Charles J. Baxter; a table and chairs from the bridemaid and the best man, and other gifts from neighbors and friends.

The bride's father was a nephew of the late Job Male and inherited some of his property.

The family originally came from Canada, and have lived in this city about five years. The bride will inherit quite a fortune.

(Special To The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, September 29—A quiet wedding was celebrated in the Catholic church yesterday morning by Rev. Father Bogaard. The parties were Miss Margaret Ellen Boyle, of this place, and George Thomas Higgins, of Newark.

The ceremony was witnessed by only a few friends and relatives, but was a very pretty one. Miss Mary D. Regan, of Plainfield, was the bridemaid, and Martin Boyle, of Newark, a brother of the groom, was the best man. The couple were driven to the bride's home on the Bound Brook road after the ceremony, where a reception was held at night. They were well remembered with presents, and start out in life under auspicious circumstances.

Meeting of Handicappers Held Yesterday Afternoon and the Marks Arranged — The Field Games to Be Held at the Crescent Oval Tomorrow Afternoon—Great Interest Shown.

The boys of the Plainfield High School will tomorrow settle the question of superiority in athletic contests. The principal contest of the day will be for the all-round championship of the school for which The Daily Press medal is offered. Points will be scored in each event by first, second and third. The places will count five, three and one point respectively. To the young athlete scoring the greatest number of points, the all-round championship and The Daily Press medal will be awarded.

To give the smaller boys a chance the events will all be handicapped. Yesterday afternoon a meeting of the handicappers was held at which Albert B. Meredith, Thomas A. Cuming and Charles B. Morse, of the Advisory Board, and Carroll L. Runyon, ex-president and winner of The Daily Press medal last year, were present. The handicaps were then arranged as follows:

FRIGHTENED SMALL BOYS.

Exciting Runaway Near New Market Ended by Sudden Collision With Bank.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, Sept. 29—A serious runaway was narrowly averted here yesterday on the New Market road, and had it not been for a high bank up which the runaway horses ran, they might have done considerable damage before being stopped.

G. Smalley, of Greenbrook, a stone carter, was returning from New Market with a team hitched to an empty wagon. The horses were fresh and Smalley let them go until their trot became a canter and the canter a run.

Passing the schoolhouse, a number of boys had jumped in, and also a colored lad, Samuel Reasoner, of Plainfield.

When the horses began to run the boys grew frightened, and began to shout. This frightened the horses all the more. Smalley said he could not hold the team, but guided them down the road. Ahead was the railroad track, but just before reaching it one of the reins broke and the team was pulled to the left directly up a steep bank. The wagon nearly upset and threw the lads out. No one was hurt, but all were pretty well scared.

CAME HOME ONLY TO DIE

MRS. E. M. BUNTING PASSES AWAY AFTER A LONG ILLNESS.

Had Been Spending the Summer at the Seashore, But Her Health Did Not Improve—Was an Earnest Christian.

The death of Mrs. Evaline M. Bunting, aged eighty-four years, of 94 Mercer avenue, occurred yesterday afternoon about 6 o'clock, after an illness lasting about one year. During the past year Mrs. Bunting was quite feeble, and this, together with a complication of diseases, hastened her death.

The second week of last July she went to Avon-by-the Sea, where she hoped to recover her strength, but she was obliged to give up about three weeks ago, and since that time she was confined to her bed. Dr. Ryan, of the above place, was in attendance, and yesterday Mrs. Bunting was brought to Plainfield in a private car. It was noticed that she was rapidly failing and that the end was near. Up to within a short time of death she was unconscious. She was removed to her home yesterday noon from the railroad station in an ambulance.

Mrs. Bunting was born in New York, and was the daughter of James Mitchell, of that place. She was married to John Bunting, for many years a well-known banker, and he died several years ago. She resided in New York up to seven years ago, when she took up her residence at 94 Mercer avenue.

Mrs. Bunting was a faithful member of the Reformed Episcopal church, of New York, and was an earnest Christian woman. She leaves one son, John Bunting, Jr., who resides in California.

The funeral services will be held from the late home next Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and the interment will be at the convenience of the family.

A NICE THING, ISN'T IT?

A COUPL OF BOYS ARGUING IN A JUSTICE'S COURT.

Both Claimed a Poor, Ignorant Fellow for a Client, But Finally Willie Sweeney Got the Coveted Decision.

Justice Mosher's court was the scene yesterday afternoon of an amusing squabble between two youthful aspirants for legal honors, law students Wm. Sweeney and Wm. Nash. It was as much as the Justice could do to restore order and settle the dispute, but at last he decided it, and the case which was about to be tried continued.

The trial was that of Sebastian Miller, of Cottage place, who was charged by Mrs. Ida Levine, a neighbor, with striking her over the head with a dish-pan. Miller, the defendant, when arrested last week, was taken in charge of by Sweeney, whether by his (Miller's) consent or not, is not known, for the prisoner is a poor, ignorant fellow, and evidently did not know the ins and outs of a law court.

Young Nash claimed that Miller had not employed Sweeney, but that he had secured Murphy & Blatz to defend him, and thus the two students, both mere boys, argued and quarreled before the Justice as to who should have the honor of trying the case.

Meanwhile a lawyer, and a counselor by the way, who had been retained by Mrs. Levine to prosecute, listened at the harangue and finally sarcastically remarked "Let them both try it."

But Justice Mosher decided that Sweeney had the first claim on the fee, so ruled Nash out of court. The latter claims that he was sent there as a representative of his employers. Miller maintained an indifferent silence during the dispute and never said which one he had employed.

The case didn't amount to much. It was one of those neighborhood quarrels in which one is to blame as much as the other. Miller admitted, upon cross-examination, that he had struck the woman, but the Justice concluded that one was as guilty as the other, and after thinking over the testimony all night announced this morning that he would dismiss the complaint.

Lost His Little Finger.

Patrick Kneeland, who is foreman of the laborers at the Pond Tool Works, and who has charge of the electric crane, suffered a loss last Wednesday of the little finger on his right hand. At the time he was busily engaged with work about the crane and the finger was taken off before he hardly knew it. He is still able to resume work.

EXCITING CONVENTION.

A BIG FIGHT OVER THE ADOPTION OF PLATFORM.

Thomas Lane, of Summit, Lead the Silver Hosts Into a Discussion that Was Decidedly Stirring — Crane Named on the First Ballot.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Trenton, September 29.—The waves of uncertainty that marked the path of the Democratic ship yesterday up to the time of the adjournment of the State convention after the temporary organization had been effected, develed into bounding, tossing billows of monstrous size later in the day when the factional winds blowing in different directions came together. For a few minutes the good old ship was in a terrible choppy sea of discord, and the sailors were at odds as to just what sail should be flown to the breeze or how much the silver jib should be reefed in. The vessel that has weathered many a hard gale, and has floundered in several of late, too, was in good hands, though, and she finally came out of the embryo typhoon with the flags of approaching victory tacked high on her foremast. At least so saith the faithful.

The afternoon session of the convention was the most enthusiastic of recent years. The committee on resolutions were a few minutes dilatory in reporting, and after a selection by the band, perched high in the top gallery, Chairman Gourley allotted a few minutes to Col. William Murrell, of Asbury Park, as the representative of the independent colored voters of New Jersey, who had held a convention in the theatre the day previous and had resolved to come to the Democrats with their grievances.

Col. Murrell is a powerful-built colored man with a suspicion of negro dialect in his talk. But he got a great ovation and for a few minutes had the convention in the wildest sort of enthusiasm. What he said is of particular interest to Plainfield in view of the fact that the Republican majority in the Eldorado of the East has its backbone in the colored vote. Here is what the colored speaker had to say:

"We want to show results, not speeches. The Republican papers are lit up with headlines charging me with furnishing the brainwork of this movement—that is their gratitude for thirty years of service. We mean business. We offer uncompromisingly, without pledges or promises, our support to the Democratic ticket to pay our debts to those who have treated us wrong. We are now going through New Jersey to stump every hamlet to pay this debt."

He referred to the brilliant work of the colored soldiers in Cuba, and said the colored voters of New Jersey would stand like a rock against the Republican party in November. "This $2 a day on Election Day for the colored man is played out," said the Colonel as he took his seat amid vociferous applause.

And then came the platform as adopted by the majority of the committee on resolutions. It was read by former Senator Edwards, of Hudson county. It was about the platform that the temptest raged at the convention, and a Union county delegate—the Hon. Thomas Lane, of Summit—was the one who precipitated the trouble and kept it up for fifteen minutes and only resumed his seat after he had been completely tabooed by the chairman. As was anticipated, it was over the matter of endorsing the Chicago platform. The majority of the committee on resolutions referred to the national issues as follows:

"We, the representatives of the

PROBING THE SCANDALS

Possibility That Gen. Miles will Testify Before the Commission

ANTICIPATED DISCLOSURES

Interesting Records Which He Could Bring to Light. Efforts of the Administration to Dignify the Inquiry. Many Anxious to Tell What They Know.

Washington, Sept. 29.—It is possible that General Miles will appear before the commission investigating the war department. In that event he will depend upon the records of his office to furnish such testimony as would be pertinent, and these records embrace a large amount of matter likely to impress the court with the internal strife which has beset the military authorities.

The interview of Mr. Even P. Howell of Georgia, a member of the investigating committee, brings to light certain instructive features of the existing situation.

As published yesterday morning, in one of the New York papers, the interview sets forth with sufficient accuracy what Mr. Howell has been saying to his friends for several days. He represents the president as saying to him that, no matter who was found guilty, the punishment would be swift. If Secretary Alger was found responsible, he would be removed from office at once.

Stern declarations of this import, made by the president to a member of the commission, imply a considerable confidence on the part of the chief executive that the commission will not find Secretary Alger guilty of any dereliction, and, in view of the general make up of the commission, this confidence would not appear to be misplaced.

Men who were sure that there was nothing wrong with the conduct of the war before the inquiry began, as well as those whose sons have received favors under the very system under suspicion, are not likely to reach such a conclusion as will compel the president to carry out the declaration made to Mr. Howell.

That Mr. Alger will before many months retire from the cabinet, however, is entirely likely, either by his selection for or election to some other post, the transfer to which would come as a compliment, or by his decision to lay down the cares of public life after his career has been officially exonerated.

The commissioners have discovered that many persons throughout the country aspire to be witnesses before the board of inquiry in Washington. This is attributed in part to a desire to secure mileage to Washington and return.

To simplify matters, all who have anything to say are being invited to put their views or complaints in writing, and these allegations and testimonies will then be grouped and a subcommittee sent to the locality with which each class is particularly concerned.

DEATH OF HON. THOMAS F. BAYARD

An Eventful Life Closed After a Long Lingering Illness.

Dedham, Mass., Sept. 29.—Thomas F. Bayard died at 4.30 p. m. last night.

Thomas Francis Bayard was a distinguished member of an eminent family. Since long before the Revolutionary war the Byards have been conspicuous in the country's history as patriots and statesmen, and many acquired national fame as jurists.

Thomas Francis Bayard was born in Wilmington, Del., on October 29, 1828, and was a younger son. In his thirteenth year he entered school at Flushing, L. I., where he stayed two years.

Having a liking for his father's profession—that of law—he became a student and was admitted to the bar in 1851. In 1853 he was appointed United States district attorney for Delaware, but resigned in the following year. In 1855 Mr. Bayard removed to Philadelphia, where he formed a legal copartnership with William Shippen. This connection lasted five years, being terminated by the death of Mr. Shippen. Mr. Bayard, on the death of his partner, once more returned to Wilmington, where he was needed by his father, who was then engrossed with public duties.

Wanted to Be President.

Senator Bayard took an active part in the discussions concerning the presidential election in 1876, and was an advocate and subsequently a member of the electoral commission. In October, 1856, Senator Bayard married Louisa, daughter of Josiah Lee, a Baltimore banker. Twelve children were the result of that union. In 1877 Senator Bayard received the honorary degree of LL. D. from Harvard College.

When the Democratic National convention was held in 1880 his friends rallied in force to procure his nomination for the presidency, and such was their strength that on the first ballot he stood next to Hancock, who was elected on the second. In the Democratic convention of 1884 at which Mr. Cleveland was nominated, Mr. Bayard received the next largest vote to the successful candidate on the two ballots which were taken.

He was made secretary of state by Cleveland, and in March, 1893, he was appointed ambassador to the court of St. James, and served during Mr. Cleveland's second term.

ARMS FOR THE FILIPINOS.

A Trader Who Insists That Germany Is Supplying Them.

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 29.—The Post reiterates its former stories regarding the supplying of arms to the Filipinos by the German government and is positive that its authority is absolutely correct.

The Post publishes an interview with its informant in which he says that he is not in a position to tell the full story for the reason that he is financially interested in the plot and has actually been a party to the scheme and says that he is interested in the German Philippine trade to the extent of nearly a million dollars and that for fifteen years Germany has been working among the insurgents for her own benefit, and he also told the Post that there would never have been a revolution had it not been for the German government.

Continuing, he says: "When the insurgent army is fully armed and equipped and drilled, trouble will commence. America's safety lies in disarming the insurgents as a move toward the restoration of peace."

TO DEFINE ALASKAN BOUNDARY.

American Commissioners Propose Submission of the Question to Experts.

Quebec, Sept. 29.—The deliberations of the international conference will produce at least one tangible result. The Alaska boundary question is in a fair way of settlement. An offer has been made by the Americans. It is precise and definite. In accordance with instructions from President McKinley, the United States commissioners have suggested that the delimitation be left to experts appointed by both countries. Provision is also made for a reference.

The Americans have submitted the names of the Emperor of Germany, the King of Norway and the King of Italy as the personnel of the tribunal. The arbitrators in the first instance will include the chief justices of the United States and Canada.

The offer is likely to be accepted. It was considered by the Canadian plenipotentiaries yesterday morning before the commission met at 11 o'clock.

Flag Hauled Down at Manila.

Washington, Sept. 29.—The royal Spanish ensign that was hauled down from the governor's palace in Manila after the surrender of the city, has been received at the navy department from Admiral Dewey.

The admiral also sent a small Spanish flag, taken from the captured gunboat Cebu. The flag from the governor's palace was large enough nearly to cover the floor of the spacious room occupied by Captain Crowninshield, chief of the bureau of navigation, to whom the trophy was officially delivered.

Powder Explosion at St. Louis.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 29.—An explosion of powder in the basement of a four-story building at No. 410 North Fourth street, occupied by C. and W. McLain, fishing tackle and sporting goods, blew out the front of the structure yesterday and set the building on fire.

Two women jumped from the third story and were fatally injured.

Bohlly, a fireman of Company No. 15, was severely cut about the head by falling glass.

Post-Office Burglars Caught

Cleveland, O., Sept. 29.—A dispatch from Blissfield, Mich., says: "The sheriff of Lenawee county and his deputies last night, after a hard struggle, surrounded and captured three of the burglars who robbed the postoffice Sunday night last, and shot and killed Samuel Rothfush.

PARIS PEACE GOSSIP

Conjectures as to the Policy to Be Followed.

A PARISIAN POINT OF VIEW

Attitude of Senator Gray and Others of the American Commission. The Spanish Representatives Given More Discretionary Power. Commissioners Received by M. Delcasse.

Paris, Sept. 29.—The United States peace commission went into session at eleven o'clock yesterday.

The Gaulois says: "In spite of the mystery surrounding the matter, we are able, from a high source, to give an outline of the position of both commissions. While the Americans have instructions which are much more precise than those of the Spaniards, there is a diversity of opinion in regard to the Philippines. Senator Gray is a very ardent Democrat and, consequently, belongs to the party which repudiates expansion. He opposes all annexation, and his opinion, therefore, totally differs from that of the other four commissioners, some of whom would be content with a coaling station at the Philippines, possibly Cavite, while others, like Senator Davis, advocate the annexation of the whole of the archipelago."

The paper, however, believes that the Americans, by mutual concessions, will come to an agreement, and that they will all be largely influenced by Major General Merritt's reports on the situation.

The instructions to the Spanish commission, according to the Gaulois, are, briefly, to hold out and make the best terms possible.

Madrid is well aware, it appears, that the conferences, at the best, only have to please the Spanish people, and the only hopes entertained are that the Americans will not abuse the situation too much. Popular sentiment in Spain thinks it better to abandon the Philippines than to keep them under conditions rendering them ungovernable.

During the afternoon the American commissioners assisted at their first formal entertainment in France—their reception by the minister of foreign affairs, M. Delcasse. At three o'clock the United States ambassador, General Horace Porter, called at the Continental hotel for the Americans. He took three of them into his own carriage and the remainder, with Secretary Moore, followed in another carriage through the Rue de Rivoli, over the Place de la Concorde, across the river Seine, to the ministry of foreign affairs.

M. Henri Vignaud, the secretary of the United States embassy, led the way into the building. General Porter, Judge Day and the others followed. The party was received immediately by M. Delcasse, who cordially greeted the visitors.

Through M. Vignaud, who acted as interpreter, M. Delcasse only speaking French, the party chatted briefly upon generalities, and the minister finally assured the commissioners of the great pleasure experienced by France in the part she has taken in effecting a suspension of hostilities between Spain and the United States, and expressed the hope of having the pleasure of meeting the American commissioners and the Spanish commissioners at breakfast to-day.

M. Delcasse added that after having thus brought the two commissions together and offering them the hospitalities of the Salon de Conference, the French government would efface itself.

Judge Day, as president of the United States commission, responded. He said that the United States appreciates the good offices of France and after M. Delcasse had expressed his pleasure at such recognition of the disinterestdness of France, the interview ended and the Americans retired.

The minister of foreign affairs, at 12.30 p. m. to-day, will give a breakfast at the foreign office to the United States and Spanish commission, thus bringing them together for the first time.

The session of the United States commission did not result in anything being given out for publication.

WAR SECRETARY RETURNS.

Back in Washington from His Tour of Southern Camps.

Washington, Sept. 29.—Secretary Alger arrived in Washington yesterday morning from his tour of military camps in the South. He was accompanied by Quartermaster General Ludington and Colonel Frank Hecker of the quartermaster's department; Surgeon General Sternberg and Major Geo. H. Hopkins, military aide to the secretary.

Secretary Alger had his breakfast at home and then went to the White House for a brief visit to the president on his way to the war department. The secretary reached his office before 9.30 o'clock and at once became so busy in consultations with heads of bureaus of the department that he declined to receive unofficial visitors. His first business on reaching the department was to have a conference lasting more than an hour with adjutant General Corbin. Attorney General Griggs was present during a part of the interview.

Secretary Alger has not announced whether he will make a formal statement for the public in regard to the results of his trip, but it is probable that he will do so.

The quartermaster general and the surgeon general had nothing to say about their visit to southern camps, preferring to leave any public statement to the head of the war department.

The secretary will now take up actively the preparations for the garrisoning of Cuba and for the safe and comfortable quartering of the reserve troops left in the United States. General arrangements were made in the course of his trip for the embarkation of the garrison forces from Charleston and Savannah.

Major General Fitzhugh Lee, who has been summoned from Jacksonville, is expected to arrive in Washington on Friday next for a consultation with the war department officials in regard to his part in thte Cuban occupation.

Surgeon General Sternberg called on the president at ten o'clock and made a brief informal report of his observations in southern army camps.

Linseed Oil Affairs

St. Louis, Sept. 29.—The report of the committee of local stockholders of the National Linseed Oil Company appointed to investigate the affairs of the company, is kept from the public, but it was freely admitted that the affairs of the company were found to be in a much worse condition than even the most bitter opponents of the present management expected.

George L. Edwards, president of the local stockholders organization and chairman of the committee that investigated the books, said:

"The report of the committee is of such a nature and the affairs of the company are in such a condition that the interests of the stockholders render it absolutely necessary for me to refuse to make a statement."

G. Lacey Crawford and John H. Maxson, stockholders, admitted that affairs were worse than had been expected.

The Oregon Ready for Manila

New York, Sept. 29.—The battleship Oregon, which, with the Iowa, has been ordered to Manila, to join Rear Admiral Dewey's fleet, left the Brooklyn navy yard early yestetrday, and at 9.12 anchored off Tompkinsville, S. I., where she will wait for her consort.

The latest orders require that the trip be made in two instead of four months, as at first intended, and as a result the big battleship is heavily loaded with coal and ammunition. Of the former she has 1,460 tons, and more than 500 tons of powder, it being necessary to construct temporary magazines for the reception of the latter.

The Iowa, it is expected, will leave the yard to-day, when the two warships will start on their long voyage. The delay is understood to be caused by delay in securing sufficient ammunition for the Iowa.

Agoncilio Delays His Call.

Washington, Sept. 29.—The Philippine delegate, Agoncilio, and his secretary and interpreter, Mr. Lopez, took no steps yesterday toward the execution of the mission on which they came to Washington.

Agoncilio said, through his interpreter, that he had cabled to the home government, asking authority to solicit an interview with the president and requesting full instructions. He had received no response thus far and he said he had nothing to add as to his personal views, expressed in numerous interviews since he reached this country.

As to Admiral Dewey's seizure of a ship carrying insurgent arms, Agoncilio said this was outside of his mission, and he had no purpose to open negotiations on it.

Railway Wreck in Nova Scotia

Halifax, N. S., Sept. 29.—A special excursion train on the way to the Halifax exhibition from Pictou yesterday, ran into a working train near Stellerton.

James Sproull, engineer; Michael O'Brien, engineer; W. G. Henderson, fireman; John R. McKenzie, fireman, and William Cameron, Scotch Hill, Pictou county, a passenger, were killed; John McMillan of Pictou, a passenger, was injured.

A Fistic Encounter.

New York, Sept. 29.—Jim Corbett and Kid McCoy, the heavyweight pugilists, came to blows in the Gilsey house yesterday afternoon. Neither man scored a knockout, but the blows were handed out at a lively rate while the fight lasted. The set-to was witnessed by a good sized crowd, and a minute after it was over the corridors of the hotel were jammed.

Major-Gen. Merritt at Port Said.

Port Said, Egypt, Sept. 29.—Major General Wesley Merritt, United States army, his aides-de-camps, Majors Strother and Hale and Captain Mott Howell, the general's secretary, passed here to-day on board the steamer Arcadia, on their way to Marseilles and Paris.

Gen. Merritt's Report in Washington

Washington, Sept. 29.—General Merritt's report of the battle of Manila has been received at the war department and will be made public in a few days.

DEMOCRATS CONVENE

ONE DAY'S PROCEEDINGS

Syracuse, Sept. 29.—The Democratic state convention assembled here at noon yesterday absolutely without a slate or programme, other than the temporary organization agreed upon in the state committee last night.

It is in many respects the most remarkable political convention ever held Never before have all the prominent leaders of the Democratic party appeared in convention and consulted as to a programme without result.

Richard Croker, David B. Hill, Senator Murphy and Senator McCarren, representing Hugh McLaughlin, have had frequent conferences, but no agreement has been reached as to candidates.

These conferences have been conducted upon apparently friendly lines, and under the leadership of Senator Murphy there is an evident disposition for harmony.

The crowd here is one of the largest ever seen at a state convention. The big convention hall is filled to its utmost capacity, and hundreds of struggling men at noon were massed outside the entrance endeavoring to gain admission. Tammany Hall is very largely represented, fully two thousand members of that organization being in attendance.

The convention was called to order at 12.35 o'clock by Chairman Danforth, who introduced Assemblyman George N. Palmer of Schoharie as temporary chairman, who addressed the convention at length.

When Mr. Palmer had concluded, Charles R. De Forest called the roll of delegates, after which, upon motion of Senator P. H. McCarren of Kings, a recess was taken until eleven o'clock this morning.

Who will be nominated none but the leaders know. They are keeping mighty quiet about it. There are dozens of little gubernatorial booms about, but no one has much faith in any of them. Danforth, Van Wyck, Earl, Herrick and Stanchfield all have supporters, but as yet things are in a very chaotic state.

Messrs. Croker, Murphy and Hill have things pretty well in hand and it is believed that they will make up a slate that will be put through in a rush when the time comes.

Frederick C. Schwab of Lewis county will be permanent chairman of the convention.

New Jersey Democratic Convention.

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 29.—The Democratic state convention of New Jersey assembled at noon yestetrday in the Taylor Opera House in this city. William B. Gourley of Passaic county was unanimously chosen temporary chairman.

The meeting of the convention was delayed for the Union county delegates to settle their dispute as to who would be their representative in the state committee.

Afer State Chairman E. L. Price had opened the convention, Secretary W. A. Devereaux read the call. William B. Gourley was then chosen temporary chairman.

Chairman Gourley, on taking the chair, made an address. He reviewed the Republican state administration and the conduct of the war.

The convention late in the afternoon, nominated Elvin W. Crane, prosecutor for Essex county, for governor on the first ballot.

When the voting began Senator William D. Daly and Prosecutor Crane led. Essex solidly supported Crane, while Hudson cast her 195 votes for Daly, but later changed them for Crane, practically giving Crane the nomination. Passaic then fell into line and voted for Crane. The nomination of Crane was then made unanimous.

The platform agreed upon by the state committee for submission to the committee on resolutions makes state issues the principal features, but contains an endorsement of the national principles of the party.

It declares for equal taxation, home rule, honest state and municipal government, the abolishment of useless and expensive state commissions, friendliness for labor, repeal of the law which restricts juries in fixing damages for injuries, the reduction of salaries, and the substitution of the salary for the fee system in compensating public officials.

Governor Voorhees is charged with being unfriendly to labor, and the Republican party is charged with being under the control of trusts and corporations.

A paragraph is devoted to thanking the soldiers of New Jersey who volunteered for the Spanish-American war. The present federal administration is charged with being responsible for the results of incompetency of government officials in the management of the late war.

Big Strike of Lasters.

Brockton, Mass., Sept. 29.—In pursuance of the ultimatum issued by the Lasters' Protective Union to the effect that if the lasting machine companies by Tuesday morning failed to withdraw agents whom they had put into factories here to take the places of strikers, all the lasters in this section would be ordered out, the strike was extended yesterday in all directions.

In response to the orders union men began to abandon lasting machines in shops all over southeastern Massachusetts. Even firms that had settled on the price list trouble were not exempt, and their operatives went out with the others.

In Randolph all the men went out, but a number have gone to work at hand sewing pending a settlement.

CHANDLER DEFENDS ALGER.

The New Hampshire Senator Says Bureau Chiefs Are to Blame.

Washington, Sept. 29.—Senator Chandler of New Hampshire, who is in Washington, for the first time since the war, in an interview yesterday spoke of mistakes which had been made. He said that every one concerned had tried to do his best and that everyone praised President McKinley for his work in the war.

The blame, he said, did not rest with Secretary Alger, as he had had too little power. Nearly every act of his must be performed through a bureau chief, appointed for life and over whom he has little control.

"This," said Senator Chandler, "is a most unwise organization of the war department, but it is the existing system, and while it prevails it is absolutely ridiculous to charge a secretary of war with inefficiency or anything else but downright corruption, which is not here asserted. The actual responsibility for omissions or neglect is with the quartermaster general, the surgeon general, the chief of ordnance and the other line officials. They must bear it in full measure in the pending investigation.

"The only reason why Secretary Alger is selected for attack instead of the bureau chiefs," continued Senator Chandler, "is because the Democrats think party capital may be made by attacking him while it cannot be made by attacking them."

Important Postal Ruling.

Washington, Sept. 29.—Postmaster General Emory Smith has modified previous rulings of the department in definition of third class mail matter. Under this latest ruling all impressions obtained upon paper or cardboard by means of printing, engraving, lithography or any other mechanical process easy to recognize, except the typewriter, letter or manifold copy, are held to be printed matter, if not in the nature of an actual and personal correspondence.

Matter prepared by the typewriter must be regarded as personal correspondence and unmailable at the third class rate of postage, but the fac simile copies of manuscript or typewriting obtained by a mechanical process, are assimilated to printing and may be regarded as third class matter, provided they are presented for mailing at the postoffice windows and in minimum number of twenty perfectly identical copies. If mailed elsewhere or in less number, postage at first class rate must be required."

New York Wool Exchange Closes.

New York, Sept. 29.—The Wool Exchange, that occupies the magnificent building at Beach street and West Broadway, has suspended for an indefinite time. The following statement was made yesterday by President Allan Macnaughtan.

"Owing to the depressed condition of the wool market, and it appearing that improvement in that direction is not likely to occur for some time, it has been deemed advisable for the best interests of the corporation and its stockholders to discontinue all further operations in wool until a better outlook presents itself and until further notice.

"The corporation, however, will devote its energies to the advancement of its other more profitable business interests. The corporation is in excellent financial condition, having no floating debts of any kind.

Bishop Potter Presided.

New York, Sept. 29.—The Protestant Episcopal convention of the diocese of New York, presided over by Bishop Potter, began its 115th annual session at 10 o'clock yesterday morning in Grace church chapel, in East Fourteenth street, near First avenue.

This convention, which will continue for two days with an equal number of sittings each day, is said to be important from the fact that it convenes just one week before the general convention, which is scheduled to open on October 5, in the Church of the Epiphany.

Advance Bond Interest.

Washington, Sept. 29.—The treasury department has decided to anticipate interest on United States bonds due November 1.

On the five per cents about $1,250,000 will be paid, on the four per cents $1,623,500 and on the new three per cents something less than $1,500,000, making in all about $4,250,000.

The coupons will be paid on October 10, the fours and fives on the 20th, and the threes as soon thereafter as possible.

Colored Republicans for Roosevet.

Saratoga, Sept. 29.—The colored Republican state convention was held here yesterday and was presided over by Samuel Moran of New York city.

Resolutions were adopted indorsing the action of the Republican state convention held here Tuesday, and promising the undivided support of the colored organization to the entire Republican state ticket, headed by Theodore Roosevelt.

China's New Ruler.

London, Sept. 29.—A dispatch from Shanghai says:

It is reported that Great Britain, the United States and Japan are disposed to question the constitution of the government as open to usurpation.

The family of Li Hung Chang, fearing the populace, have gone to Port Arthur to be under the protection of the Russians.

Colorado Forest Fires.

Denver, Sept. 29.—Great fires are devastating timber on the main range. Serious damage is reported, and mining camps and ranches are threatened. Among the fire centers are Routt county, Egoria Park, along the Roaring Fork river and in the San Juan river region.

Queensland's Premier Dead.

Brisbane, Queensland, Sept. 29.—The Hon. Joseph Byrnes, premier of Queensland, is dead. He was born in 1860 and was formerly attorney general and solicitor general of Queensland.

Japanese Cabinet Minister Resigns.

The Democratic Choice.

In these times of harmonizing all elements of the party and aiming to overcome those things which has brought defeat to them in the recent elections, the Democrats have done their best in nominating Elvin W. Crane, of Essex county, to make the fight against Foster Voorhees for the Gubernatorial chair. Mr. Crane is unquestionably a strong man for the Democrats to choose for their standard-bearer, and in the present condition of the party, when it would not require very much to cause a breach promising devastating results, it is well that a man such as the Essex official is has been selected.

Mr. Crane is not objectionable to any Democrat and ought to poll a full party vote, which, if he does, must mean that he will be the next Governor of New Jersey. Once the party is reunited in its one-time accord and activity New Jersey is assuredly a Democratic State. Mr. Crane has a strong element of strength to accomplish the result, especially with a fair, strong and aggressive platform, such as was enunciated at the convention yesterday, to make the fight on.

It has been a good many years since New Jersey Democrats have gathered in a State convention with such enthusiasm as was displayed at Trenton yesterday. True, there were differences of opinions over certain subjects, which for a few minutes led to a story scene, but they were got over safely and the convention ended in the best of feeling, the delegates determined to make common warfare against their political opponents.

In viewing Mr. Voorhees' nomination, The Daily Press expressed the opinion that it would result in the Democrats brining out their strongest material for Governor, and that it would assure the State of a clean administration for the next three years. The result has been as predicted.

Mr. Crane's Record.

Elvin W. Crane is a native of New York. He was born in Brooklyn in 1853, and is therefore three years older than his Republican opponent, Foster M. Voorhees. Before the present Gubernatorial candidate had arrived at school age his parents moved to Newark, and there he attended the public schools, from which he graduated.

After a short period at a private school he entered the law office of Bradley & Abeel, and in due course was admitted to the bar. He was soon afterwards appointed Assistant Prosecutor of the Pleas under his former preceptor, Gustavus Abeel, and held the same position under the latter's successor, Oscar Keen. He was a member of the Assembly in 1887, in 1889 was appointed Prosecutor of Essex county by Governor Green and was reappointed by Governor Werts in 1894. His term of office will expire in 1899.

Mr. Crane has been prominent in Democratic political circles for many years, and is the present chairman of the Essex county committee.

An Industrial Chance.

Plainfield's new Board of Trade had a very auspicious beginning. The members were full of worthy enthusiasm to boom their city and attract new industries here. Now a corporation wants to locate its manufactory here and employ some 200 men.

The Board will truly show its usefulness if this and other companies can be brought to select Plainfield as the site for their factories. This is a case where the practical efficiency of the Board can be properly demonstrated.

THE SITUATION AT LUZON.

General Aguinaldo, the insurgent chief who claims to have a force of 67,000, continues to threaten trouble in the island of Luzon. Luzon is nearly as large as our New England states. The half circle around Manila and Cavite shows the territory held by our soldiers, under General Elwell S. Otis.

American Trade in China.

Recent treasury statistics prove that our exports to the Chinese market have increased more rapidly than those to any other quarter of the world, more, too, than those of any other country to that vast mart. The falling off of cotton goods exportations was the sole exception to the general fact in the synopsis made. In this respect, too, American trade retains its superiority, as the decadence of other exporting countries in this line was greater in 1897, the year specified in the figures, than in our own case. This decline is believed to be in part on account of heavy stocks carried over from the preceding year and the great increase in Chinese cotton manufacturing. As the figures are based on those of Sir Robert Hart, the inspector general of Chinese customs, they are trustworthy. The simple truth is, as shown by the comparative figures since 1880, that the United States has progressed with giant strides and is rapidly overtaking even Great Britain in the Chinese market. Without piling up dreary statistics a single glance will suffice at the years 1880 and 1897. In the first named year American exports were $3,798,775 and British £9,482,821. In 1897 the relative ratio was that of $17,984,472 to £7,117,716. One might cite figures, Pelion on Ossa high, without adding to the eloquence of this statement. With a free hand England has no rivalry to fear except that of this country, but the same causes which will accelerate the trade of England even though in less degree will expand the commerce of the United States. The same hostile gates and hedges which are detrimental to the one endanger the other. Our country has quite as much at stake as Great Britain in preserving and heightening the entente cordiale between the two peoples that they may work hand in hand in solving this great trade imbroglio. Aside from any sentimental force the two nations regard with sharp attention all those tendencies which will sweep away any lingering causes of jealousy or irritation. It is from this point of view that the proceedings of the joint high commission at Montreal evoke such an alert interest, which in England amounts almost to a burning anxiety. The belief that Embassador Hay was summoned to the American ministry of state because he is known to be an ardent friend of the English alliance and intimately versed in the questions connected with it has gained wide credence and has some natural basis of probability.

Wouldn't it be a good idea for the Board of Trade to make an exhibit at the Paris Exposition of those eminent citizens who stand in the background and wonder why the town don't grow faster? Perhaps they would get some enlightened ideas by such a process, and, at least, the town would be rid of them for a little while and in that period of absence might be able to accomplish some of the things that their lethargic ways now dampen the ardor for.

The Congressional convention of the Third district will not be held next Monday as was calculated. It seems that through the illness of the committeeman from Monmouth county the voters in that bailiwick were not given chance enough to name their delegates. The Somerset county delegates will, however, hold their primaries as called, and then await further announcement as to the convention date.

Mr. Martine's statement made over his own signature that he is not and has not been a candidate for the Democratic Senatorial nomination in Union county ought to set at rest the gossip which has been current in that direction among uninformed people.

Governor Voorhees states that he has not yet determined what steps he will take in the matter of resigning as Senator from Union county. He has submitted the matter to Attorney-General Grey, and expects a decision in time for next Monday's meeting of the Republican State committee in Newark, when a line of action will be finally agreed upon.

"Merry wedding bells" are no longer a mere fancy in the nuptial affairs of Plainfield couples. A week ago a dinner bell pealed out the joyful news as the parson made two hearts beat as one, and again last night a local wedding was given a novel and pretty effect by adding the resonant tones of a bell to the service as the contracting parties were made husband and wife.

Union county Democrats were the center of attraction in the State convention yesterday for a few minutes when the Hon. Thomas Lane, of Summit, was making a speech consisting of repeating two words—"Mr. Chairman." It was the longest short speech on record.

Persons desiring naturalization papers should bear in mind that they must be procured from the courts 30 days before election, and their names must be filed with the township or city clerks 10 days before they apply to the court.

The Paterson Press classifies the Westfield Standard editor as an out-and-out Democrat. What has the great independent pilot of Westfield destinies to say to this?

It was a rip-roaring old Democratic convention held in Trenton yesterday. Party enthusiasm was bubbling over from start to finish.

Governor Voorhees has appointed an oyster commissioner. That's an office only a few States can afford.

Now but the county nominations need the attention of the politicians, and then—election.

The Democratic refrain is that Crane will win all the same.

THEATRICAL.

Current Dramatic Attractions That Plainfielders Can Witness.

"Jack" Tucker, who is this season playing the part of "I. Work Days," in Davis & Keogh's latest farce comedy, "Have You Seen Smith?" announced for presentation at Music Hall Friday night, was in a reminiscent mood the other night and was telling of his first love affair. "I was very much in love with a girl," said Tucker, "despite the fact that she had red hair, and I fully intended to marry her until one night she asked me if I would do anything on earth for her. I assured her that I would and then she asked me to dye my hair red so as to keep her in countenance. I refused and that broke off the match."

CRANE WAS CHOSEN.

Democratic party in State convention assembled, reaffirming our devotion to all the great and vital principles of the Democratic party on national issues, and believing, however, that the coming State compaign should be fought out on State issues."

Before Mr. Edwards had finished Mr. Lane was on his feet, holding in his hand a slip of paper. As the reading of the platform was finished, Mr. Lane, with a dozen other delegates from various parts of the hall, yelled "Mr. Chairman" with all their might. There was a terrible hub-bub, but out of it all Chairman Gourley fixed his attention on Mr. Lane, and after a few moments the Union county man got a chance to speak. He stated that he wished to submit a minority report of the committee on resolutions, to the effect "that the national principles as enunciated at the Chicago convention in 1896 be endorsed." That was the breeze that fanned the factional tempest, and instantly there were delegates from all parts of the hall yelling for recognition.

Chairman Gourley evidently proposed to avoid trouble by ignoring Mr. Lane any further. He tried to proceed with the adoption of the platform as read, but it was impossible for him to be heard ten feet from the stage. Men were on their feet waving their arms and yelling at the top of their voices wherever the eye looked. Mr. Lane was in no mood to be ignored and he kept up a running roar of "Mr. Chairman, Mr. Chairman." He tried to demand his rights, but the chairman turned his head the other way and it was as if the Summit editor was talking to a stone wall. The tumult was kept up for a quarter of an hour, during which the chairman put the motion to adopt the platform and declared it carried. Finally, the noise subsided and Mr. Lane sat down, saying:

"Well, I kept 'em busy for a while any way, but what's the use of doing any more. When you're beat you're beat. That's all."

And then came the nominations for Governor. The delegates were treated to a wealth of oratorical effort, but all in vain. It was almost certain that Crane would be the first choice—perhaps not on the first ballot, but, in fact, it was. While the vote by counties was being called it looked nip and tuck between Crane and Daly. But towards the end it was seen that Crane was slightly in the lead, and as Warren county ended the roll call with twenty-seven for Crane, Bob Davis jumped up and changed the 165 of Hudson from Daly to Crane. That decided it. Then there was a tumbling over each other to get in on the winning side and county after county cast their vote for Crane. The nomination was made unanimous after that, and Crane was the Democratic nominee to fight it out with Voorhees at the election polls.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure Send for circular; free.

THE VOYAGE OF THE OREGON.

The World-Breaking Record of the American Battle Ship As Described by Her Gallant Commander.

14,000 MILES TO WAR.

"And Every Officer and Man Would Have Died at His Post to Insure Her Safe Arrival."

(Julius Chambers in New York World.)

"What should Cervera have done?"

"He should have stayed in Santiago harbor forever rather than come out the way he did," was the solemn remark of Capt. Clark lately of the battleship Oregon, recently. "The fleet was a fortress. With its guns he could have driven the United States army away from shore until such time as it could have mounted ten-inch guns to sink his ships. He was master of the situation and should have 'hung on' until every last member of his ships' crews had died of absolute starvation! Then would he have been a real hero—an eternal figure in history!

"Think of the chances in his favor! Yellow fever might have come and decimated the American ranks. A gale might have broken loose on the Caribbean seas that would have scattered our ships to the four winds of heaven, after which Cervera could have sailed away without opposition and returned to his native land undefeated."

The story of a great achievement, not less great because modestly told, is that of Captain Charles H. Clark, recently in command of that wonderful fighting machine, the battleship Oregon.

Captain Clark is a large, well built man, 5 feet 9 inches in height, and tips the scales at 200 pounds. His face lights up with a cordial smile whenever he meets anybody he knows and he is equally affable to strangers.

"The Oregon's voyage doesn't seem great to me," began Captain Clark, "though it became memorable because of its opportune completion just at a time that the Oregon was needed to strengthen the North Atlantic squadron in order to impart confidence at home. That the Oregon should have sailed 14,000 miles to be present at the destruction of Admiral Cervera's fleet, and got there in time, is really interesting and curious.

"I was appointed to the ship on March 17, and we sailed two days later. She had been on the dry dock at Brewerton only a short while before, and her hull was thoroughly clean. From stage to stage the coal capacity of the ship determined the length of the run. The weather, except in the straits of Magellan, was excellent. The run down the Pacific coast need not be dwelt upon. Nine hundred tons of coal carried us to Callao. No trouble occurred with the engines, and the same may be said of the entire voyage. The incident of this run of 4,000 knots was a fire in the port coal bunker. The fire was dug out and quenched. It was a terrible ordeal for the men and a period of great anxiety to all on board. Several acts of real heroism were displayed in this hazardous fight with the flames.

"When Sandy Point was left behind we all realized the possible dangers in front of us," continued Captain Clark. "The Oregon convoyed the Marietta to Rio without incident. And in that harbor the Nictheroy lay at anchor, about to be added to the American navy. The Brazilian government was very courteous. It may have been owing to the fact that the purchase of the Nictheroy had not been completed. There was the Temerario! Detecting her presence at once, I ordered the Marietta to guard the harbor mouth and told her captain to send a boat on board the Spanish craft and serve notice upon the Temerario that if she came within one mile of the Oregon our guns, big and little, would open on her without notice.

"On reaching port I had been notified by our consul that war was on, and I could not afford to take any chances. I steamed into the harbor two miles above the usual anchorage for war vessels, giving to my ship an isolated position, so that I might be justified in regarding the approach of any strange craft as a hostile act. The utmost vigilance was employed day and night; men were kept constantly at the rapid fire guns. A searchlight and patrol boats watched the water after nightfall. The risk was too great for me to take any chances, and although the Brazilians acted all right and were even generous in not holding us to the twenty-four hour rule recognized under international law, I could not be sure of the utter absence of cranks or Spanish sympathizers.

"We sailed from Rio on May 4. I decided when we had been at sea a little while, to leave the Buffalo (formerly the Nictheroy) and Marietta to shift for themselves. They were so slow that I feared the Oregon might be late in arriving where she was most needed. I left these ships off Cape Frio, 100 miles above Rio, after signalling them 'Come to Bahia; or run ashore if attacked by overwhelming force.' I reached Bahia on the 8th, but we were told to 'Come on!' We sailed next morning, and this run of ten days to Barbadoes was the most thrilling of the entire voyage. We steamed absolutely without a light.

"Indeed, the entire trip from Sandy Point to Jupiter Inlet was a lightless voyage. In pitch-like darkness we drove ahead at our highest speed—seeing lights many times, but always avoiding the ships that bore them. We were out of court. We had no right of way without a light. Even if we met a vessel on our port we gave way.

"Night and day the men stood at the guns. Not for a single moment was vigilance relaxed. The strain on the men was terrible. For four days at a time hammocks were never strung. Watch and watch about, the men lay beside the guns sound asleep, while the men on duty stood silently above them. All the lookouts were doubled and changed with unusual frequency.

"Barbadoes was reached just before daylight, May 18, and after rushing 250 tons of coal aboard we sailed the same evening. Still the orders read, 'Come on!'

"From our consul I learned that Cervera's fleet was at Martinique, just to the north of us. This fleet had been much extolled for speed and fighting qualities. I am not a rash man. I was not looking for that fleet. The situation seemed critical. Sailing just before dark, I headed northwest, apparently into the heart of the Caribbean sea. This information, I have no doubt, was promptly communicated to Admiral Cervera. But as soon as the darkness of a moonless night had thoroughly set in, I changed the course to due south and ran below Barbadoes and thence far to the eastward before I took the Oregon to the northward. We thus passed far to sea east of Martinique, and eventually turned into the North Atlantic beyond St. Thomas. I carefully avoided the Windward channel and the shallow waters of the Bahamas."

"Why did you go to Jupiter Inlet?" was asked.

"I didn't know where the department wanted to use me," was the prompt reply. "I was in the dark as to the location of the two fleets. I knew one had been at Hampton Roads and another at Key West, and the charts told me that Jupiter Inlet was in telegraphic reach of all points on the coast. From that place, also, I had coal enough to make the run to either of the two fleets. You can easily understand that had I gone direct to Key West and the Oregon had been wanted at Hampton Roads, several days would have to be lost in coaling. Of course the fact is that we went to Key West. This was the end of what may be called a successful, though not a remarkable voyage."

"Tell me something about the endurance of the men," I asked.

"Their suffering from the heat was beyond description," began Captain Clark. "Battened under the hatches for weeks at a time, every man worked with the absolute individual energy of a hero. Every coal heaver deserves credit. The engineers, as I said, had no rest. Real enthusiasm existed in every part of the ship, after leaving Rio, when the prospect of having to grapple with the foe in mid-ocean became imminent. I want to say, as solemnly as I know how, without discrimination, that I believe every officer and man on that ship would have died at his post to insure the safe arrival of the Oregon.

"If we couldn't beat a Spanish fleet we would have tried, even if we lost our ship. To be sure, I would have striven to save the crew by beaching the Oregon. Saving life is always to be thought of, and it would not have been overlooked when the contest became open."

"Do you believe the Spaniards would have fought fair if you had been attacked in mid-ocean; would they have honored the white flag if you had been compelled to raise it?" was asked, with some hesitation.

"I am not so sure that they would," gravely replied Captain Clark, with a slowness that argued his strong views on the subject. "The Hobson incident had not occurred. Cervera himself would not have countenanced any injustice, but I shudder at the hopelessness of our brave jackies, marines and others in mid-ocean had we been compelled to swim for our lives. There is no telling our fate had we by accident steamed into the middle of that fleet. The torpedo boats might have surrounded us, and we might have gone quickly to the bottom in half a mile of brine."

"Apropos of this, what is your opinion of the future of the torpedo boat?" was the next inquiry.

"Nobody knows any more about the efficiency of a torpedo boat than I do, and I know nothing. I do not think that a single moving torpedo could sink the Oregon. If one compartment were torpedoed she would still float. The rapid fire gun, with its accuracy of aim, has, in my judgment, greatly reduced the danger of the torpedo craft."

"Now, captain, tell me your ideas of the great naval victory off Santiago harbor on July 3."

"I hope it will not be taken as vainglorious if I say that it was lucky that a battleship with cruiser speed was there that day," replied Captain Clark, with some hesitation. "The Spanish hearts were broken by the big guns of the battleships. Their men lost zeal when the 13-inch shells began to skip about them."

"I never saw a more sublime sight," said Captain Clark. "Out came the Spanish ships, with their great ensigns flying to the breeze that their own momentum created. The sea was like a pond; hardly a ripple appeared in any direction. Those great ships looked handsome and—defiant. And I want to say, in all candor, that it looked for a time as if some of them would get away—I mean through our lines. We didn't know how badly we were punishing them. The Indiana, Iowa, Oregon, Texas and Brooklyn were all hammering them at the same time. Five of us were jumping at them like furious wolves, if the simile be a good one."

"I believe the Spaniards set their range for five thousand yards and never lowered it for any of their guns. A steady stream of projectiles was going over our heads all the time. They fired shot and shell enough to have done us the greatest kind of harm, but we weren't hurt to any extent. The Spaniards were utterly demoralized at the way we went at them. It certainly was a revelation to most of us. The scores the Spaniards made were stray shots. Hardly any roll was on the sea that morning—it was like a pond. I never saw the ocean smoother."

"What is your opinion about the scuttling of the Spanish ship after their surrender?"

"It was wrong, and in violation of every principle of good faith on the part of a conquered foe," replied the Captain. "The men who did those acts forfeited their right to be protected, and ought to have been shot then and there. Scuttling a ship after surrender is treachery. The moment the white flag goes up everything in the possession of the surrendered force, on sea or on land, becomes the property of the victor. The vandal who violates this well-recognized rule puts himself outside all laws of mercy. He is to be likened to the miscreant who comes into a camp as a friend and then destroys the provisions or other property of the men from whom he asks and receives protection. He deserves death and always gets it. I do not believe that Admiral Cervera gave orders for anything of the kind. No, no. He is a gentleman. Irresponsible men committed the outrage. The fact that the ships filled with water is not positive proof that the sluiceways were opened. I believe the Spaniards did these things, but I cannot say so and prove the fact. Many of the Spaniards were crazy. A crushing defeat had demoralized them completely."

Chronic Kickers.

Some in Every Household in Plainfield But They're Growing Less.

What makes the kidneys sick? A simple thing.

They have too much to do.

Must keep up their work, they never rest.

Can't blame them for kicking.

Ever have your kidneys kick?

Ever have a bad back, a lame, weak or aching one?

Know it's the same thing?

Help the kidneys with their work.

The back will ache no more.

It's the best proof for it comes from Plainfield.

Citizens read this case in point:

Mrs. W. W. Mills, of No. 86 Summit Ave, says:— "Ever since the birth of my last child I have suffered at times with a severe pain across the small of my back and in my hips. If I did any lifting or stooping, my back became lame and sore and though I used plasters they only helped me for the time being. I was feeling very bad last spring when I had my attention called to Doan's Kidney Pills. They were so highly reccommended for troubles like mine that I got a box at L. W. Randolph's drug store. I felt their good effects in a few days and when I had finished the one box my back was better and stronger and I had much more energy to attend to my household duties. Doan's Kidney Pills have my endorsement and I am always pleased to reccommend them."

CATHOLICITY IN HAWAII.

The Church Has Won Nearly Half of the Native and White Population.

The Hawaiian Islands form a vicariate apostolic. They are in charge of the priests of the Congregation of the Sacred Heart, commonly called the Picpus society. The vicariate comprises the island of Hawaii, the largest in the group, Maui, Kohalawe, which is inhabited only by sheep owned by one W. H. Cummings; Lanai, which belongs nearly entirely to one Gibson, who is a cattle breeder; Molokai, Father Damien's island; Oahu, whereon Honolulu is situated and Kauai, from whose shores the natives saw for the first time in 1778, the "floating island" of Cook. In the islands there are 33,000 Catholics, 39,000 pagans, Protestants and agnostics, and 45,000 Chinese and Japanese. Thus out of the native and white population the church has won nearly half, though the preachers had a monopoly of the islands so long. Nearly all the Catholics are natives. The preachers stole their land, gave them the leprosy, upturned their government, and it is no wonder that the Kanaka had little use for the preachers' religion.

The vicar apostolic of the Hawaiian Islands, Bishop Ropert, is a Breton, a native of Kerfago, in the diocese of Vannes. He went to Oceanica in 1867 and was consecrated bishop in San Francisco by Archbishop Riordan, Sept. 25, 1892. It is impossible to describe how earnestly and zealously the devoted priests of this little vicariate live. Father Damien's life made some part of their sacrifice known, for they are all veritable Father Damiens. They subsist on the coarsest of fare; they practice the vow of poverty as no mendicant order ever tried to practice it. They have become all things to all men in order that they might gain all to Christ.

In the capital city there is a cathedral with 7 chapels, attended by 5 clergymen. In the rest of the island of Oahu there are 11 churches and 3 priests.

In Kauai there are 7 churches and 2 priests, in Molokai 7 churches and 2 priests. In Maui there are 19 churches and 4 priests, and in Hawaii 38 chapels and 7 priests. In all there are 23 priests who attend to nearly 100 stations. In Honolulu the Brothers of Mary have a college with 566 pupils, and the Sisters of the Sacred Heart of Jesus and Mary have a convent with 469 pupils. The Franciscan sisters have institutions for the lepers at Honolulu (receiving station) and Molokai, also a hospital at Wailuku for all diseases except leprosy. These Franciscan sisters come from Syracuse.—San Francisco Monitor.

DR. ZAHN HONORED.

Made Provincial of the Holy Cross Society of the United States.

Dr. Zahn, the celebrated Catholic evolutionist of the University of Notre Dame, Indiana, who has been attending the chapter of the Holy Cross society, held at Cote des Neiges, near Montreal, left recently for a visit to Quebec, after which he will go to New York and then return to Notre Dame. He was selected provincial of the order for the ecclesiastical province of the United States. Before leaving he said:

"The work of our chapter has gone on most harmoniously, but beyond my appointment there was nothing done that would be of any interest to any one but the members of our chapter. We decided to use our energies even more in the work of education than we have done in the past. My appointment will no doubt silence the reports which have gone through the press at different times that I am at loggerheads with the high dignitaries of the church. When I went to Rome, it was said that I was sent to be disciplined, and instead I was made by his holiness a doctor of philosophy, an honor which has been bestowed in that manner upon only one other man. When I returned from Rome, it was said that they sent me back because they wanted to get rid of me there. The world must have something to talk about, you know."

He expressed himself as very much pleased with his visit in Montreal and spoke most highly of Archbishop Bruchesi, with whom he renewed an acquaintance commenced in Rome.—Washington Post.

HIS SENSE OF DUTY.

Father Willms Owes His Life to His Strict Adherence to Conscience.

It has been announced that Father Willms, the American director of the Association of the Holy Childhood, was one of the passengers who went down with the ill fated Bourgogne. We are glad to contradict this report, says The Ave Maria, all the more so because Father Willms owes his preservation to a rigid interpretation of his duty. When about to start for Paris to attend a general meeting of the directors of the association, he wrote to a friend asking him to secure second class passage on the Bourgogne. His friend discovered that a second class passage could no longer be procured, and on his own responsibility arranged to have Father Willms travel first class.

The good priest did not feel justified in using the funds of the association for his own comfort, and, cancelling the arrangement at the last moment, took cheaper passage on another steamer. Father Willms thus owes his life to his strict adherence to conscience in what most people would regard as a very trifling matter.

A Bohemian Branch of the Church.

Steps have been taken toward the formation of a Bohemian branch of the old Catholic church. A meeting was recently held in Zurich in connection with a Bohemian pilgrimage to Constance in honor of John Huss for the purpose of organization. Seven Roman priests have expressed their interest, and some influential newspapers have offered support.—Public Opinion.

THE HOLY FATHER.

INTERESTING REMINISCENCES OF AN AUDIENCE AT THE VATICAN.

Wonderful Memory of Pope Leo XIII Benign and Gentle, Firm and Kindly, of Tactful Power and Impressive Bearing—His Great Vitality and Dignity.

At the Dennison hotel in Cincinnati was recently registered G. Whiting Swayne of New York, who has some interesting reminiscences of an audience with Pope Leo XIII.

"I have traveled over Europe," said Mr. Swayne, in response to a question, "and I have had the honor of an audience with Pope Leo XIII. There can be no mistaking the remarkable vitality, the spirituality and the vastness of learning and grasp of detail of that most remarkable man. It so happened that I had been especially honored by him in the receipt of a cablegram of congratulation from him to me on the occasion of my marriage. The message was handed me immediately after the wedding. On our wedding tour my wife and I visited Rome, where we had the audience with the pope. I cannot describe the impression made on me by the holy father as he entered the audience chamber. And that feeling of reverence, of respect, of a something indescribably affecting, is not confined to Catholics who have had the honor of an audience with him. I have heard Protestant ladies and gentlemen speak of having experienced that indescribable impression as of being in the presence of one more exalted than any being on earth. He is gentleness itself; his appearance is ethereal, his features most benignant in expression. His mouth denotes firmness, mingled with charity and kindness, and his eyes are most luminous.

"As an instance of his most wonderful memory I recall that when he heard my name and that of my wife, as we were presented to him, he immediately asked me if his cablegram of congratulation had been received in time and expressed his gratification when I responded that it had been handed the officiating clergyman immediately after the nuptial mass and by him to me. Then he asked me about some of the clergymen of New York city who had recently been in Rome; whether I knew them and whether they had reached home in comfort and safety.

"Then he asked me about the Catholic schools of New York and Brooklyn, showing that he was perfectly familiar with the subject and with the details. It was wonderful and nothing else when it is considered that he is the spiritual ruler of 300,000,000 people, scattered through every clime and country on the face of the globe.

"He has the happy faculty of saying something pleasant to every one admitted to audience with him. He puts every one at ease at once. The most embarrassed immediately forgets his or her timidity in the pleasant questions he puts in his quiet and musical voice. And with it all this old man, burdened with the innumerable cares of the government of the largest body of Christians in the world, finds time to write poetry, of which Horace, in his pure moments and when his genius was brightest, might have emulated, but could not surpass.

"But it is at the termination of the audience and when the holy father gives his blessing to the assembled visitors that the feeling of reverence is most impressive. He seems to stand transfigured in his dignity and in his reverential feeling for the solemnity of the act, and Protestants kneel with Catholics and with the Catholics go from his presence feeling they have been with one whose life is one of sanctity, whose greatness is most eminent and whose purity of life would extort tribute even from an enemy.

"Yes, he is feeble in appearance, so far as the body is concerned. But I take no stock in the stories sent out from Rome periodically about his failing health. His great age must admonish all that the end cannot be far off, but it is not unlikely the pontificate of Pope Leo will number the years of Peter, as did that of his predecessor, Pius IX. He is feeble, but he is not ill in the sense the reports would indicate. He has made his mark in the history of his time, and the historian of the future will assign to him the highest rank among the greatest men of this and of all ages."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Dominican Sisters In Africa.

The Bulawayo papers contain enthusiastic accounts of the presentation of the Royal Red Cross to Rev. Mother Jacoba, superioress of the Bulawayo hospital. The ceremony excited general interest, and the Matabele Times remarks: "Everywhere in Africa the Dominican Sisters have earned the deep gratitude and regard of their patients, and there is no one who has experienced their care but will hear with delight of the honor done to those excellent nurses in the person of their mother superior." Mother Patrick, superioress of the Salisbury hospital, and Mother Jacoba, superioress of the Bulawayo hospital, recently arrived in England by the Norham Castle. They came to get trained nurses to join them in their good work in Rhodesia.—London Catholic Times and Opinion.

Archbishop Ireland Honored.

Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul has had a great honor conferred on him. He has been invited by the bishops of France to preach the sermon on the occasion of the beatification of Joan of Arc, the Maid of Orleans, which will take place in Orleans, France, early next year. Extraordinary efforts have been made to have Joan of Arc made a saint, and they have been so far successful that the process of beatification now in progress is expected to culminate in January, 1899, when mass will be said in her honor.—New York Journal.

CHAPTER XXX.

When Evangeline Garth had sent off the message which she felt sure would bring Roy post-haste to Liverpool, she did not return to the Mowbrays' house, but went back at once to the "Adelphi Hotel," where she had left the maid who came with her as travelling-companion from Delverton. She had told Roy to come to her there, feeling that her presence at the novelist's house could only be painful to herself and to her host and hostess. After the despatch of her telegram, she was surprised not to receive a reply from her cousin to say that he was starting; but she satisfied herself with the thought that an answer was unnecessary, since it would arrive only an hour or two before the Baronet himself, and she felt moderately easy in her mind for the four hours that must elapse from the sending off of her telegram till the expected arrival of her cousin at the hotel. When the four hours had passed however and Roy had not arrived, Evangeline paid another visit to the telegraph-office, and handed in an excited appeal to her cousin, together with a message to Lady Bettaby, asking her to wire back saying whether the original telegram had reached her house, and, if it had, begging her to use every endeavor to let the Baronet have it at once.

"That is sure to bring him," she said to herself, as she handed the messages across the counter.

The clerk handed them back.

"The office at Westwood is closed. These cannot go till six o'clock in the morning."

"But that will be too late for my purpose!" said Evangeline, panic-stricken. "There must be some way of sending a message."

According to the clerk however it was impossible, and Evangeline went back to her Bradshaw to see whether there was any chance of her travelling to Westwood before the morning. That also proved to be impracticable. It seemed to the poor girl that everything had conspired to prevent her letting Roy know in time how much depended upon his reaching Liverpool and seeing Mark Mowbray before ten in the morning. She blamed herself unmercifully for having kept her first suspicion of Lilac's sacrifice to herself, instead of sharing it with Roy. If she had not been so foolish, so afraid of raising false hopes in his heart, he would by this time have seen Lilac, and would surely have made Mark Mowbray consent to give her her freedom. But now—Evangeline shuddered to think what might happen through her folly.

After she had been to the station to meet the last train by which there was any chance of Roy's arriving, she gave heed to her maid's advice, and went to bed; but, with some faint hope that her cousin would manage to come before morning, in spite of the railway arrangements, she left word that she was to be summoned instantly if anybody at any hour came to see her, and that she was to be called in any circumstances at five in the morning—an hour before the earliest at which it was possible to telegraph.

Both injunctions were unnecessary, however. Sir Roydon was sleeping peacefully at Westwood, without any idea of what depended upon his reaching Liverpool before ten o'clock; and Evangeline, who could not sleep at all, rose and dressed long before it was time for her to be summoned. She was at the telegraph-office much sooner than it was possible to send a message, and, when hers was at last despatched, she waited at the office for the reply for which she had begged. When it came, she felt a little easier, for Sabina had not thought of any plan to stop the second telegram, and Roy was able to telegraph back—

But still there was sufficient cause for anxiety. Owing to the inexplicable miscarriage of the first message, Roy would have only an hour in which to see Mark Mowbray and induce him to give up his claim, and, if the train was late, the time would be shorter still. With the telegram in her hand she hurried off at once to see the author herself, to beg him to postpone the wedding; but Mark remained firm in his decision. If Sir Roydon Garth could persuade him before the wedding that Lilac's happiness would be safer in his hands, he might surrender his claim to her; but, unless he saw the Baronet he would not deviate one hairs-breadth from his plans.

"But it will not be my cousin's fault if he does not get here in time," pleaded Evangeline.

Mark however shook his head gravely.

"I have already made a concession which you ought not to have expected from me, Miss Garth," he said; "if I did more I should prove myself as unworthy of Miss Marvel's hand as I believe Sir Roydon Garth to be."

The worst of the whole affair was that Lilac still felt herself bound to abide by the novelist's decision, and nothing could move her.

Evangeline gave up the attempt in despair, and hurried back to the hotel to make sure that no further message had come from Roy. She was possessed by a feverish impatience, and could not eat or remain still for a moment. Long before nine she was at the railway station, having left her maid at the hotel with a note for her cousin, if by any chance he should miss her and go on there, and she walked up and down the platform with anxiety written on every line of her beautiful face.

As nine o'clock approached her distress increased, and, as each train came in, she looked eagerly among the passengers for the face she was so anxious to see. Nine o'clock passed, however, and still there was no sign of Roy. Surely he must have come without her noticing him, she said to herself; and she would have hurried back to the hotel but that she feared that the delay of those few minutes might prove fatal.

The hands of the clock crept steadily round. If Roy did not come soon, the wedding party would have left the house before he could reach it, and his only chance then would be to try to stop the ceremony at the church itself. He would have small opportunity of influencing Mark Mowbray in the short interval that was left. But Evangeline felt convinced that, if once Lilac saw him and heard from his lips an assurance of his love, it would be impossible for her to go through the ceremony which would give her to another.

Evangeline glanced at her watch. It was half-past nine now, and already they must have started for the church. Why did not Roy come? In another twenty minutes her feverish anxiety had changed to despair, for even if her cousin arrived at that moment, he could scarcely hope to reach the church before the ceremony which would make Lilac the wife of Mark Mowbray had been performed. All that she could hope for now was that something had happened to postpone or prevent it. Surely, at the last moment, Lilac must find her love for Roy stronger than any mistaken idea of duty or honor.

Her mind was filled with regrets and with doubts as to what she ought to do. If she had left her maid at the station, she could have gone to the church and made a last appeal to Lilac at least to postpone the irretrievable step. She wondered whether she ought to start now, or wait on the chance that Roy might arrive in a few minutes. If he did, of course he would have a hundred times more power than she in influencing the girl who loved him, and Evangeline could not leave him to find out for himself where the marriage was to take place, or to lose valuable time waiting for her in the station or making inquiries at the hotel. She felt compelled to remain where she was, and she stood still at last watching each train arrive, succumbing to a more hopeless despair as each failed to bring Roy. After ten o'clock had struck, doubts no longer troubled her. There was nothing to do but to wait until he came. In an apathetic way she even began to notice the people around her.

One showily dressed man, with a tall hulking figure and little deep-set eyes, had been waiting upon the platform almost as long as she had. She had scarcely noticed him before, but now she allowed her eyes to follow him, wondering whether he was expecting to meet somebody, as she was, and whether his failure affected him as deeply as her own affected herself, for his dark face was pale and full of excitement. But, as Evangeline followed him with her eyes, it struck her that he was waiting for somebody to enter the station from the street, not to arrive by train.

She turned away her head as another train came in. It was now half-past ten, and she was wondering how much longer she should wait. Her eyes were busy searching for her cousin's face among the incoming passengers, when a light touch upon her shoulder caused her to start and turn round, and there behind her stood Lilac and Mark Mowbray. It was Lilac who had touched her.

"Good-bye, Evangeline dear," she said, in a strangely quiet constrained voice. "We are married now, and are just going away."

Feeling as she did Evangeline could not go through the form of congratulating her. She kissed her in silence.

"Where are you going?" she asked Mr. Mowbray, who seemed to be very happy and proud of his bride. Her thoughts had never gone farther than the ceremony, and she had not heard a word of their subsequent plans.

They were to stay one night in town, Mark said, and then go on the next day to the continent.

"I am afraid that your train is due and that we must hurry away," he said. "Come, dear Lilac!"

The girl turned her pale pathetic face to Evangeline.

"You will come and see me when we return?" she said, a pleading look in her large beautiful eyes; and then, as Evangeline, with a heart full of pity for her, bent forward to kiss her again, she said in a whisper that her husband did not catch, "He did not come. I think that I have done right.'

"I hope so, and that you will be happy," said Evangeline; and so they parted.

Their train steamed out of the station a few minutes later. When it had gone, Evangeline turned away, having decided that she might as well wait now at the hotel for Roy. But the sight of another train arriving induced her to wait a few minutes longer, and this time, amid the crowd of passengers, appeared the well-known form that she had watched for so long, and Roy with wild eyes and a white-drawn face, advanced quickly towards her.

"The train broke down just beyond York," he exclaimed, breathlessly, "and delayed us two hours! Let us hope that something may have detained them."

He was hurrying toward the cab-rank as he spoke; but Evangeline laid her hand gently upon his arm.

"Nothing has detained them, Roy. There is no hope."

"But you have been waiting here. You do not know. We must drive to the church at once!"

He had already called a hansom, and Evangeline preceded him into it.

"Which church is it?" he asked quickly, waiting to give the driver directions; and Evangeline told him. It would be better to break the news to him as they were driving through the streets.

"It is of no use going to the church," she said, when they had started. "I have seen them."

"Seen them?"

"Yes—they started for London just before you arrived—after the wedding."

Roy turned to her suddenly with a look in his eyes which frightened her.

"Then Lilac has married him?" he questioned hoarsely; and Evangeline nodded, unable to speak.

He gave a harsh laugh that frightened her even more than his face had done.

"Then she did not care for me? It was not true?"

It would have been better for his peace of mind to believe it; but Evangeline was too eager to justify Lilac for her to think of that. She shook her head.

"I am sure that all her love is yours still, Roy," she said; and she told him of the mistake that had caused Lilac to leave Delverton, and of the unfortunate scene in the garden afterwards which had led her to believe that Roy and herself were engaged.

The Baronet listened to every word in silence. They had both forgotten whither they were driving, and were surprised at the interruption caused by the stopping of the cab. It had stopped before the church where Lilac had been married an hour before, and the place was still open.

Evangeline glanced at her companion questioningly as he prepared to get out.

"I am going to look at the record," he said simply.

When Roy returned he made no mention of what he had seen, and they were driving back to the hotel in silence when Evangeline asked the question—

"There is no doubt at all that they are married?"

"There is no doubt."

"I am sorry that I came to Liverpool," she said after a pause; "it would have been better for you to think that she did not love you."

"Yes," he said hoarsely. "When I believed that the Lilac I had loved did not exist, I think I could have borne it; but to know that she is still what I used to think her, that she still cares for me, and that I have lost her by an hour—oh, Heaven, I cannot bear it!"

SWEARING IN THE ARMY.

Grant Was Said to Have Done It Once at the Battle of Shiloh.

It is not generally known, but it is none the less a fact, that profanity is forbidden by both the army and navy regulations. Any soldier or sailor who does not like to be sworn at has a right to make a complaint, and the commanding officer is subject to trial by court martial. As a matter of fact, however, swearing in time of excitement is not uncommon, and it is not infrequently the only kind of talk that has any influence. It is, therefore, notable that some of the greatest commanders in our army and navy have been distinguished for the moderation of their language. The story of Admiral Farragut's one oath at Mobile bay, when he said "Damn the torpedoes! Go ahead full speed," is familiar, and now comes a story about General Grant. It was told by General John P. Hawkins in answer to an inquiry as to whether General Horace Porter's statement that General Grant never swore was true. General Hawkins replied: "I never heard Grant swear but once, and that was at Shiloh. Coming across a body of soldiers in retreat, he swung his horse across the road, and, with indignation shown in every feature, he flourished his sword and cried: "Go back, you damned cowards! Go back!" It seems possible that this story is true. It took something in the way of an exhibition of fear to make such men as Farragut and Grant swear.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

How Armour Earned His Victoria.

Armour, as his friends know, goes to his office every morning at 6.30, long before any of his office men are at work. A little boy who knew of this habit of the rich man, looking one day from his mother's window, saw Mrs. Armour's Victoria standing before the door, and turned to his mother to ask: "Mamma, why haven't you a Victoria like Mrs. Armour?"

"I already have four carriages, my dear," she answered, "and I think your father gives me everything he can afford."

"Wouldn't you like to have a Victoria, too?" he persisted.

"O yes, certainly," was the reply.

"And do you really mean my father cannot afford to buy you one?"

"I think not, dear."

"Well, then," the boy flashed out, "I tell you what to do. You make papa get up and go to work at half past six, as Mr. Armour does, and you can have a Victoria like Mrs. Armour's, too."—Success.

bearing the place and date, and a dainty picture of the ocean promenade. An American flag at the top emphasized the Christian citizenship idea. The cover of the programme was also of orange and black. A room beyond the bureau of registration was the literature room, where Christian Endeavor helps and other publications of the United Society were on sale.

The delegates wandered along the board walk, went trolley-riding, or rested at their hotels, with the welcome interruption of a generous and well served dinner, until the opening of the convention, which took place at the Auditorium, at 3 o'clock, Rev. Cornelius Brett, of Jersey City, State president, presiding. Devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. A. G. Bale, of Asbury Park, and a prayer service by Rev. Mr. Thompson, of Paterson. The address of the afternoon was by Rev. W. H. P. Faunce, D. D., of New York, on "The Deepening of Christian Endeavor," and was an earnest plea for the quiet hour with God. Real Christian Endeavor singing came from the large audience—larger than at any previous opening session. Christian Endeavor banners waved over their heads, in company with the National ensign, and long streamers of red, white and blue, and of the State colors, orange and black.

The weather all day had been glorious, clear and warm, and a beautiful moonlight night closed it. The Endeavorers were divided in their interests, in the evening, as the meeting in the Auditorium was supplemented by another at Educational Hall. The Auditorium session had as its subject "Christian Citizenship." The chief speaker was Mayor Z K. Pangborn, of Jersey City, whose subject was "American Citizenship." The report of the Christian citizenship department was given by Rev. W. E. Davis, of Lebanon, and the report of the Sabbath observance department by Clarence Schenck, of Newark. In the Educational Hall session S. L. Mershon, of Montclair, spoke on "Territorial Expansion for Jesus Christ," and Rev. W. T. S. Lumbar, of Moorestown, gave an illustrated address on "The War with Spain," the stereopticon views of Manila, Cuba, Porto Rico, leading battleship commanders and battle scenes being given by Rev. I Owen Jones, of Bound Brook. Devotional exercises were held at each session, and addresses of welcome given by prominent Asbury Park residents, and responded to by Dr. Brett in the Auditorium and Rev. T. E. Davis, of Bound Brook, in Educational Hall.

The music, both chorus and instrumental solos by local musicians, was of the best. All patriotic allusions were received with wild applause, and the fine addresses met with the careful attention they deserved.

Officers were nominated as follows: President, Charles Doliver; vice-president, R. C. Larew; secretary, William Nash; treasurer, Fred VanLew; sergeant-at-arms, Howard Drake. They will be elected Tuesday evening, when the society will hold its next meeting,

BARBER SHOP IN FLAMES.

Said That Thief Entered and Accidentally Set Fire to It.

[Special to The Daily Press.]

Bound Brook, Sept. 29—Two Italians discovered the barber shop of Leonard Jung on Main street in flames this morning at 5 o'clock. The fire department was called out, but before they could do anything the building was gutted. The loss was $750, which was partially covered with insurance.

A broken window and a hole in the floor gave rise to the report that the store had been broken into and accidentally set fire to by the thief. No other cause for the fire could be found.

HAS HE ANY RELATIVES?

STRANGE CIRCUMSTANCES OF A DEATH AT THE HOSPITAL.

William Smith, Who was an Employe at Hand's Brick Yard, Seems to be Without Friends to Look After His Burial

William Smith, aged 65 years, recenly employed at Hand's brick yard in North Plainfield, was taken to the hospital last evening and died this morning of apoplexy. Dr. Tomlinson had the case in charge and was called late. It was decided after the man was brought to the hospital that he could not live very long.

Inquiry has failed to reveal anything concerning the man's history, He has lived in Plainfield but a short time, and no one knows whether he has a family or any relatives. Several have interested themselves in the matter and are now trying to ascertain whether there are any relatives. No one knows where the man came from to this city, and there are no papers that indicate anything about him.

A HOME WEDDING.

Miss Jessie Slorah and James A. Cullinan the Contracting Parties.

Miss Jessie Slorah, daughter of Robert Slorah, of 309 Morris avenue, and James A. Cullinan, of this city, were married last evening at 7:30 o'clock at the home of the bride. The house was decorated in an attractive manner with potted plants, palms, etc.

The bridemaid was Miss Lucy Clifton, and the best man was James A. Slorah, brother of the bride. The bride was gowned in white organdie over white silk, and she carried bridal roses. The bridemaid wore a gown of white organdie over nile green silk and carried pink roses.

Following the marriage congratulations were offered and a supper was served during the reception. Mr. and Mrs. Cullinan receved presents consisting of silverware, banquet lamps, while a handsome side-board was received as a gift from the bridemaid.

The bride and groom will not go on a honeymoon, but have gone to housekeeping at 424 West Front street, which house is already furnished and waiting for them.

THE LOST IS FOUND.

Ed Campbell's Horse and Buggy Found Deserted on Terrill Road.

Ed Campbell's horse has been found. Yesterday's Daily Press told of its mysterious disapppearance from the stables of Emery's Hotel, Scotch Plains, the night before when the clambake was being held.

A farmer from that region was driving along Terrill road yesterday morning when he discovered a horse and buggy standing by the roadside. The horse showed that it had been run for a long distance. The buggy was covered with mud. The farmer persuaded two small boys to take the rig to Scotch Plains, where it was discovered to be the missing one belonging to Campbell.

There was no trace of those who had borrowed the horse and buggy and left it to its fate. The horse was nearly exhausted and covered with lather, showing the results of a hard drive. Mud to the thickness of nearly an inch covered the running-gear of the buggy.

JURY HAD A TREAT.

After Smoking the Cigars, They Decided They Weren't up to Standard.

The jurymen who were called to the court of Justice Thomas, in the borough, yesterday afternoon, to try the case of Speer Brothers against Peter Finger, found a new duty. To some it was a decidely pleasant one. The case was over a shipment of cigars from Speer Brothers, New York, to Finger's Hotel at Washingtonville. Finger refused to accept them, claiming that they were not of the quality called for in the bill. There were 2,000 of the cigars and the dealers sued for $56 through H. C. Runyon, their attorney. Robert M. Clark represented Finger.

The cigars were turned over to the court and in the course of the proceedings, turned over to the jurymen to examine them as to their quality. Fifty of the cigars were smoked and then the jury decided that they didn't come up to the standard of the brand under which they were packed and gave out as their verdict, no cause of action.

Needs of Children's Home.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—In the absence of the president, Mrs. Horace Kimball, permit me to call attention through your valuable journal to the fact that the funds of the Children's Home are very low. The expenses of the Home averages a little over $150 a month, and during the past four months the receipts have been less than $200, or $50 a month. We believe it only necessary to give the public the facts to secure a generous response. Contributions can be sent to the treasurer, Miss Ella Serrell, 625 West Front street. Yours truly,

Lemuel W. Serrell, of Finance Committee.

—This evening a very important meeting of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., will be held and every member is especially urged to attend.

FULLED A GUN.

Superintendent Adelmann Thought that His Life Was in Danger.

Wilson Bellis, a conductor on the street railway, was arrested this morning by Patrolman McCue upon complaint of Superintendent Adelmann, who charges him with threatening his life with a revolve. Bellis came around the carhouse last night and got into an altercation with his employer about some money, which ended, it is said, by Bellis drawing a revolver and threatening to shoot him.

Bellis was urged to go away and finally did so, only to return this morning and renew the discussion. Then the superintendent telephoned for an officer. Bellis will be given a hearing this afternoon.

Paid in Twenty Minutes.

The Prudential Insurance Company of America, with its ever-increasing desire to help its policy-holders, has undoubtedly beaten the record for quick payment of life insurance claims. The death of a policy-holder in Binghamton, N. Y., was recently reported to the company, and within twenty minutes after the company's superintendent at that place had investigated the validity of the claim, the Prudential's check for the face value of the policy, plus the dividends which had accrued, was handed the claimant.

The Early Closing Movement.

Miss Higgins, an employee of William Schloss, the West Front street shoe dealer, announces that she has met with very flattering success in agitating the early-closing movement. She has obtained the signatures of all but two of the merchants, and it is quite likely that she will obtain their names. Miss Higgins has worked faithfully and hard to get the necessary names.

A Well-to-Do Lady.

From the time that she was crowned, Queen Victoria has been in receipt of an income from the government amounting to about $3,000,000 a year. From this she pays all the expenses and salaries of her household, charities, pensions, and other charges imposed upon the sovereigns, be they more or less. She has $300,000 per annum for pocket money, of which no account is ever asked. The salaries of her household amount to about $600,000, and the other expenses to about $750,000 per year; $60,000 is given her for "bounties and alms," and $6,000 for annuities and pensions. In addition to this, the other members of the royal family receive annuities amounting to $865,000.

From the duchy of Lancaster the Queen receives about $450,000 a year, which she has no need to touch at all, and probably invests in bulk as fast as it comes to her. This income of itself, since she has been upon the throne, with interest, would aggregate $40,000,000.—Chautauquan.

USEFUL LITTLE MEAT SKEWERS.

Made in Great Variety and Used in Enormous Numbers.

Wooden meat skewers are made almost exclusively of hickory, and, like many other manufactures of wood, they are made in factories located in proximity to the forests whence the wood of which they are made of is taken. Wooden skewers are made mostly in the West. They are produced in great numbers in Tennessee and Ohio.

Hickory skewers are made in various lengths, four and a half, five, five and a half, six, and seven inches, and up to giant skewers sixteen inches long, and all but the four and a half inch skewer, which is made of a gauge or diameter of five-thirty-seconds of an inch, are made in two or more gauges. Thus the six-inch skewer is made in gauges of seven-thirty-seconds, fifteen-sixty-fourths, and four-sixteenths of an inch. So that, simple a thing as a meat skewer may seem to be, it is in reality an article that is made in large variety.

The skewers are made wholly by machinery, and are sold very cheap. They are put up in bundles that vary in the number of skewers contained, according to the size of the skewers, and they are packed in cases that vary likewise. Thus the smallest skewers are put up 250 in a bundle, and 80,000 in a case. Of eight-inch skewers, six-sixteenths gauge, there are packed 9,600 in a case, and so on.—New York Sun.

A SERIOUS OBJECTION TO THE TEXT.

The American Sailor Had No Notion of Honoring the King.

Near the close of the war between Great Britain and the United States, 1812-15, several of the American war ships lay at anchor in New Bedford harbor. The officers of the fleet and a number of the citizens of the place invited a celebrated minister of New Haven to visit them and deliver a discourse appropriate to the times. The invitation was accepted, and the largest church was filled to its utmost capacity with the officers, marines and citizens generally.

The preacher selected for his text these words, "Fear God and honor the King." The sermon was an eloquent and instructive one, setting forth man's duty to his Creator; also his duty to his country; honor and respect its rulers, obey the laws of his government, adopted for the benefit of society.

A patriotic tar from one of the fleet took great objection to the text—"Honor the King." He could not comprehend why he, an American sailor, should be commanded to "honor" King George III., his mortal enemy, and the only King he had ever heard of, or had an existence. As the preacher repeated the text for the sixth time, he stood up and exclaimed in a loud voice, "Praise God, honor Congress, and d—n the King."

An officer near by approached him in a threatening manner, demanded him to sit down and behave himself, or he would have him put out of the building. "Let the landlubber," exclaimed the sailor, "stop honoring the King; and if he says it again I'll go and pull him out of his bunk."—New York Herald.

Penny for a Priceless Book.

A workingman purchased for a penny an aged looking volume, bearing date of 1540. The man tried to read it, but threw up the attempt apparently in disgust, and the volume was relegated to the cupboard. A friend of his happened to see the book and took it to the British Museum authorities, who promptly made an offer of ninety pounds—the highest sum the librarian is allowed to expend without a special vote of the trustees. Had the man known what he was about he would have stood out for more, as the authorities would have paid almost any price rather than allow the volume to slip through their fingers. It was, in fact, the first book printed by Gutenberg, and was therefore almost priceless.—London Tit-Bits.

"Is football a game?" asked the foreigner.

"Dunno," was the reply, "but footballers are. When a man breaks both his legs and dislocates his spine and then won't go off the field until the play is over, you bet he's game. Yes sir."—Pick Me Up.

COOPER LEADS THE G. O. P.

EDWARD HUMMER HAS THE SUPPORT OF THE G. A. R.

C. D. McMurtry is Making a Hustle for the Democratic Nomination and Stands Good With Somerville—Assemblyman VanDoren is Making a Strong Fight Against Cooper in the Republican Ranks.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, Sept. 30.—The fight for Sheriff in Somerset county in the November elections promises to be the most hotly contested on record. There are already candidates galore in both of the old parties and all are putting forward their best efforts to land the nomination.

Among the Republicans who are striving for the office are George W. Cooper, of Somerville; "Van" Van Doren, of Millstone; C. Suydam and Sanford Snyder, of Franklin township and Wm. Wood, of North Branch. Of these Cooper seems to be in the lead, while Wood claims he can influence all the up-county delegates. Assemblyman Van Doren is making a great fight and the Franklin gentlemen are not out of the race by any means.

The Democrats are working even more industriously than their opponents for the nomination. S. Schoonmaker, of South Somerville; C. D. McMurtry, of Somerville, and Adam Hummer, of Millstone, are undoubtedly the leaders, although the latter appears to be getting there with "both feet." He is an old soldier, which makes him very popular with the "boys in blue." Besides Hummer is very popular in Franklin and North Plainfield townships. Schoonmaker is making an active canvass and stands a good show. McMurtry is hustling constantly and is confident.

All in all Somerset will see some lively times this fall and the nominating of candidates and election of Sheriff will not couse the least of them.

BASKET BALL TO CONTINUE.

Affairs of Y. M. C. A. Team Arranged By Committee.

The status of basket ball as far as the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. is concerned, was settled at a meeting of the physical work committee of the association held late yesterday afternoon. It was decided to continue the team on practically the same lines as last year. The team will play on the average one game a week. All games played in the local gymnasium will take place Monday nights.

George Fuller was asked to accept the management of the team for the coming year. He was manager last year. The captain will be elected by the team.

It was decided to hold athletic and gymnastic contests for novices during the year. There will also be a contest in club swinging. A new gymnastic class for boys from 14 to 16 years of age will be held Thursday afternoons from 5 to 6 o'clock.

The formal opening of the class work will be held Monday evening, Oct. 10th, which will also mark the beginning of the regular basket ball season.

A TEMPERANCE DEBATE.

Noah Pike to Try to Prove the Bible Advocates Strong Drink.

Next Thursday night a discussion will take place at the Reform Club between Noah Pike and John H. Sayres on temperance. Mr. Pike will try and prove that there are a greater number of verses in the Bible advocating the use of strong drink than opposing it, and Mr. Sayres will take the opposite side. The discussion will afterwards be opened to anyone who desires to take part.

At last night's meeting the speakers were Michael Armstrong, Noah Pike, J. H. Sayres, Rev. Mr. McKane and Mark Lee. Solos were sung by Mrs. Manley.

Republican Primaries.

Next Monday evening the Republican primaries will be held to elect delegates to attend the Congressional convention to be held at Elizabeth Thursday, October 6th. The names of candidates from which the delegates will be selected must be filed with the clerks of each ward by tomorrow night.

UPLIFTING THE GIRLS.

PLANS FOR WINTER'S WORK IN YOUNG WOMEN'S CLUB.

Educational Classes to be Resumed Next Monday, When a Small Charge Will be Made for the Instruction.

The educational department of the Young Women's Club will be reopened Monday next. Classes in dressmaking, millinery, stenography, singing, physical culture, cooking, embroidery and fancy work, and the common school branches will be started at once. A person desiring to enter any of these classes may leave their names with the matron in charge of the rooms, who will also furnish full particulars in regard to the classes. To overcome the objection made last year by some, that the club was a charitable organization, and also to assist in making the work self-supporting the members at the last business meeting voted that a fee of 5 cents be charged for each lesson, in addition to the yearly dues of $1. These dues entitle the members to the use of the parlor and reading-room, the monthly entertainment to be given at the rooms, and lessons in embroidery and the educational branches free of charge, all other classes being paid for at the rate of 5 cents each. It is hoped that many more of our working girls will take advantage of the privileges to be gained by connection with the club and will enter into it heartily. The rooms are always open, and the matron in charge will gladly show them to any one interested in the work.

THEIR ROMANCE ENDED.

Mr. and Mrs. Frazer's Domestic Infelicities Aired in a Police Court.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Newark, Sept. 31.—The sequel to a wheeling romance was heard in the Second Precinct Police Court yesterday morning. On July 4, 1897, Harold W. Frazer and Miss Caryle A. Williams, who were employed in a printing house in this city, rode to Plainfield, where they were married by a Baptist minister. The knot which was then tied was practically undone today when Mr. and Mrs. Frazer had explained to Judge Lambert a series of domestic infelicities. The Court advised them to let each other go their separate ways in peace.

Mrs. Frazer, young and good looking, had her husband summoned to court because, she said, he had retained her clothing at their home, 185 Summer avenue, after she had determined that they should live together no longer. All she wanted was her clothing, she said.

CHARGE MAY BE MANSLAUGHTER.

William Jones, the Watchman Attacked by Masked Men, Dies From Prostation.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, Sept. 30—William Jones, the sixty-year-old nightwatchman at the East Millstone station, who was attacked by a gang of masked robbers at midnight a week ago last Friday night, died Wednesday from nervous prostration due to the shock. Jones never fully recovered from the frightful experience of that night, when four masked men approached him with drawn revolvers. He was hurled to the ground, bound and robbed. Detectives Allen and McNally, of the Pennsylvania force, had Thomas Shine, Thomas Wright, Jerry Washington, a negro, and Constable William Waller arrested and placed in the Somerville county jail. Charges of manslaughter will probably now be preferred.

Young Woman Surprised.

A company of young people surprised Miss Florence Roseberry, of Spooner avenue, Wednesday night, it being the anniversary of her fifteenth birthday. A pleasant evening was spent in games, etc., and ice cream and cake were served before the little company departed. Among those present were the Misses Mamie Higgins, Lizzie Day, Suzie Goff, Miss Flynn, and Edward Baker, Thomas Chamberlain, David Adleman, Irving DeHart, Joseph Farley, Edward Shroup, Peter Roseberry nnd Edward Grannatt.

Servant Girl Lost Her Case.

Justice Mosher rendered his decision in the servant girl case of Mary J. Johnson against Mrs. Herman Simmonds, this morning. The decision was no cause for action. As the court was fully assured that Mrs. Simmonds had paid the girl the month's wages claimed, $14, and that the servant had made a blunder in her accounts or was mistaken as to the dates of payment.

Christian Endeavorers Hold Services Beside the Atlantic.

PLENTY TO INTERST ALL.

STATE CONVENTION ONE OF THE LARGEST EVER HELD.

Plainfielders Take Part in the Programme—A Colored Divine Received a Warm Reception—Dr. Dichardson a Presiding Officer of One Session—Witness an Exhibition of Life Saving.

Asbury Park, Sept. 29—The Christian Endeavorers did not settle down to rest very early last night, and there were few hours when there was absolute quiet in the two hotels. Perhaps Christian Endeavorers are not more given than other people to early rising, but when a sunrise prayer meeting on the beach was announced as the opening service for this morning, there was a tremendous response. Two or three hundred delegates, at least, assembled at the early hour of 6:30; not on the sand, indeed, but in one of the little pavilions that overhang the water. The slanting approach to the pavilion was full, while the pavilion was crammed to the last extent. Songs of praise and prayer rang out from the reverent congregation, earnest words of petition and exhortation were spoken, and all present felt that this early quiet hour was a fit opening of the day. The leader of the meeting was Willard I. Hamilton, of Newark, and one of the speakers was Robert Love, of the Plainfield delegation.

The morning was so filled with good things that it was difficult to decide where to go. The chief speaker at the Auditorium was Bishop A. Walters, D. D., of Jersey City. It is doubtful if any white speaker could have received a warmer reception than that accorded to the grand old colored man, with his strong, clever face and his earnest, enthusiastic manner. He told, in words that held the attention of every hearer, why the colored people love Christian Endeavor. Warm applause was roused by his account of his own reception at the Albermarle the night before, when one of the best rooms was assigned to the colored man, and the utmost courtesy was bestowed upon him. The other speaker of the morning was S. L. Mershon, of Montclair. His short but fervent address might have had as its subject, "Throw Out the Life Line."

The presiding officer af this session was Rev. John Wilbur Richardson, of Plainfield. Mr. Richardson was also chairman of the programme committee for the entire convention, and a large part of the credit for the very delightful programme enjoyed by the Endeavorors belongs to him.

The business session of the executive committee of the State Union was held at 9 o'clock, and at 10 the general conference of the State committee with officers and superintendents of departments of county and local unions, occupied some of the Plainfield delegates. Others were interested in the separate conferences of the officers and superintendents of departments with their subordinate workers.

At 12 o'clock came the unique feature of the convention. Long before, the delegates could be seen streaming up the board walk toward the life-saving station. In the pretty little building a short service was held, Rev. Peter Stryker, D. D., of Asbury Park, presiding. An address, interesting and earnest, was delivered by Rev. Frank Everitt, of Trenton, and prayer was offered by Rev. R. K. Wick, of Jersey City. Then the life-savers did their part for the entertainment of the Endeavorers by giving an exhibition of the "throwing out" of the real "life line."

The afternoon offered two sessions, one on the subject of Sabbath observance, at Educational Hall, and a general session at the Auditorium. The speakers at the Hall were Clarence Schenck, of Newark; Rev. I. W. Hathaway, secretary of the American Sabboth Union, and Rev. H. W. Hathaway, of Elizabeth. The Auditorium service was the favorite with the Endeavorers, as that well-known member of the "Christian Endeavor World" staff, Amos R. Wells (Caleb Cobweb), was one of the speakers. His talk was entitled the "Christian Endeavor Bugbear."

A vigorous plea for better Bible study was made by Rev. Hugh B. MacCauley, of Freehold, the head of the Bible Study Department. The report of the Evangelistic Department was given by Rev. Edwin MacMinn, of Salem. Reports of evangelistic work done were next on the pro-

DRANK POISONED WATER

A GALVANIZED PAIL POLLUTED THE WATER ALMOST FATALLY.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, September 30.—George Cooper, of this place, had a very narrow escape yesterday afternoon from fatal poisoning, but Dr. Brakeley was called in time and the young man's life was saved. Cooper was drinking water from a new galvanized pail and gave no thought to any ill effects therefrom, until his employer told him that he might be poisoned. Early in the afternoon Cooper complained of feeling bad. He said that his stomach pained him. From that time he grew rapidly worse and finally his body became rigid.

There was slight signs of life, and it was thought that Cooper would die. At this time Dr. Brakeley appeared and gave the young man an injection of strychinia. In a short time Cooper began to revive and by night he had about recovered from his illness. Dr. Brakeley attributes the young man's attack entirely to drinking water from the new pail which had not properly been washed before use.

MISSION WOMEN TO MEET HERE.

Twenty-eighth Annual Convention to be Held October 19th and 20th.

The Philadelphia branch of the Woman's Board of Missions will hold its 28th annual meeting and the Woman's Home Missionary Union of the New Jersey Association its seventh annual meeting in the Congregational church in this city Wednesday and Thursday, October 19th and 20th.

The programme for Wednesday, beginning at 10 o'clock, is in the interest of Foreign Missions and will consist of reports of the foreign and home missions work and the reading of papers by Miss Susan Hayes Ward, of Newark, and Mrs. George Whittlesey, of Washington, D. C. The speakers for the evening session have not been named.

The principal address Thursday will be delivered by Miss Moffat, of the C. H. M. S.

Delegates are invited here from every auxiliary of the branch and of the union, and those interested in missions in churches where there are no auxiliaries will be gladly welcome. The entertainment committe requests that all delegates send notice of intention to attend the meetings to Mrs. Wm. B. Wadsworth, 452 West Eighth street, Plainfield, N. J., by the 10th of October.

SELECTION OF SCHOOL BOOKS.

Committee Who Work Under a New Law in the Borough.

Under a new law the selection of books for public school libraries has to be done by a committee consisting of the county superintendent of schools, two teachers from the school and two citizens, to be selected by the local Board of Education, who have to be residents of the district in which the school is located.

This law has been complied with in the borough and the following compose the committee: County Superintendent J. A. Metz; Superintendent Wightman and Miss Glass, of the borough school; Rev. J. O. McKelvey and J. R. Joy, representing citizens in the district. They will in the future select books for the library.

TO HAVE A HOME DEPARTMENT.

Sabbath-school of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church Decided to Organize.

There was an informal gathering of the officers and teachers of the Sabbath-school of the Seventh-Day Baptist church last evening at the home of the superintendent, D. E. Titsworth, of West Seventh street. There were twenty-five present, including the pastor, Rev. A. E. Main.

The work for the coming year was talked over and it was decided to organize a home department. Miss Nancy Randolph was elected superintendent of it. The rest of the evening was spent in discussing methods of work. At the close, refreshments were served.

Roesel to be Sentenced.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Sept. 30—Louis Roesel will be sentenced to death for the third time Tuesday in the Union county court for the murder of James C. Pitts, a Summit farmer. Roesel has been sentenced twice, and each time an appeal has been taken to the Court of Errors and Appeals.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, of West Seventh street, returned home last evening from his trip in the West, where he attended the conference of Seventh-Day Baptists at Milton, Wis. Mrs. Lewis and Miss Lewis are still visiting in Chicago.

"BOY PHENOMENON" IS UNDER ARREST.

Newark Physicians Accuse Him of Illegal Practices.

VIOLA HAGGERTY'S CASE.

CLAIMED A CURE WHEN SHE COULD ALREADY SEE SOMEWHAT.

Dr Ard Examined Her Five Years Ago and Found That She Could See as Much Then as She Could After the "Boy Phenomenon" Treated Her—False Claims Made in Advertising.

Charles A. Dwinell, known to the world as "The Boy Phenomenon," who was in Plainfield last winter for two months, is now in Newark, where he has been arrested on the charge of illegal practices. The Newark Evening News last night published the following from their Plainfield correspondent:

"The case of alleged healing by the 'Boy Phenomenon' that attracted the most attention in Plainfield during last winter, and the one which received the greatest advertising at the hands of his manager, was the alleged benefits received by Viola Haggerty, aged ten years, who, to quote from the published announcements of the manager, 'was blind since birth.'

"The little girl was treated in the early part of March, and at the time the local papers, as well as several metropolitan ones, described what was said to be a marvellous improvement in the vision of the girl after she had been rubbed by the 'Boy Phenomenon.'

"The News correspondent has investigated this case and finds that the 'Boy Phenomenon' and his manager played upon the susceptibilities of the public and made it appear that after being rubbed by the 'Phenomenon' little Viola was actually benefited when as a matter of fact she had seen as well before as she did after having been treated by the former. In the advertisement exploiting the alleged benefit received by the girl it was stated 'ten minutes after she had been treated she could see objects for the first time in her life.' Now as a matter of fact the girl had not been totally blind since birth and had always been able to see to some extent.

"When Viola was six years old she was examined by Dr. F. C. Ard, a skilled eye and ear specialist. Dr. Ard was seen by the News correspondent, and looking up his records he found that Viola Haggerty was able to count the fingers at that time at a distance of four feet, and that she was able to distinguish larger objects, such as human beings, at a distance of ten feet. Very recently Dr. Ard made another examination of the little girl's sight, and he found that her vision was just about the same as it was five years ago, no improvement at all having taken place.

"It appears that the whole claim that the 'Boy Phenomenon' brought benefit to the girl was based upon falsehood. She could actually see some things years before he ever saw her, though in the advertisements it was stated that she had been blind from birth.

"Mr. Haggerty, the girl's father, was seen by the News correspondent and he said that he acquiesced at that time in the "Boy Phenomenon's" claims in the hope that the girl would be helped. For years he had been hoping and hoped against hope that his little daughter would be benefited in her affliction. The great claims made by the "Boy Poenomenon," and the urging of friends who seemed te have confidence in him had had the effect of bolstering his courage up to a fictitious point for the time being."

KEAN GETS THE FRANCHISE.

Now He Can Build a Trolley Road from Elizabeth to Cranford.

Ex-Congressman John Kean has secured the right of way for his county trolley road from the Township Committee of Union.

This will enable Mr. Kean to proceed with the construction of his trolroad from Elizabeth to the boundary line of Cranford. This he expects to have completed in about eight weeks.

NEW LICENSES GRANTED

One Hotel and One Wholesale License Granted in North Plainfield—Another Saloon is Asked For in Raritan.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, September 30.—Judge Bartine sitting in the Court of Common Pleas has granted the following licenses:

INNS AND TAVERNS.

Mahlon Rupel, North Branch.
John H. Gracey, North Plainfield.
Andrew R. Holcombe, Neshanic.
Henry C. Walter, Bernardsville.
William Greisheimer, Martinville.
Sadie E. Petty, Peapack.

SALOON.

Michael J. Horan, Raritan.

WHOLESALE.

Theredore J. F. Zeller, North Plainfield.

The applications of John J. Fencil for a new license at Bound Brook, and of John Cagnasola for a saloon license at Raritan, were laid over until October 7th. Cagnasola's application was accompanied by numerous signers, which seemed to impress Judge Bartine though he seemed to think there was not much need of another saloon in Raritan.

Hillsborough gets its only licensed hotel by the granting of the application of Andrew R. Holcombe. Judge Bartine said he thought there should be one hotel in the township.

MOTHER PAID THE FINE.

A Colored Resident Quarreled With His Friends With Disastrous Results.

Jacob Bergen, colored, a resident of Race street, quarreled with his wife last evening, and in consequence he appeared before Recorder Long on a charge of intoxication and disorder. He was fined $10 and his mother paid the fine.

Bergen being under the influence of liquor was led to fight with his wife, and this resulted in the breaking of glassware and panes of glass. It is said that a frying pan was thrown and someone was struck over the head with it. A man named Baldwin, a boarder at the house, attempted to seperate Bergen and his wife, and his hand was severely cut. Marshal Schenck, hearing the disturbance, appeared on the scene and tried to get Bergen and his wife to keep quiet. This they refused to do, and he very promptly arrested Bergen. When he was arraigned this morning he entered a plea of guilty.

VISIT OF NEWSPAPER MEN.

New Brunswick Reporters See What a Nice Town Plainfield Is.

A company of New Brunswick newspaper men came here last night to pay their respects to Plainfield. They were met by News and Press reporters and a pleasant hour and a half was spent in their company. The New Brunswick men proved to be a genial set, and the Plainfield men are glad to have made their acquaintance.

They rode over on their wheels, reaching here at 9 o'clock, and left for home at 10:30 o'clock. In the company were Charles Bogan, C. L. Atkinson, George D. Johnson, George C. Ingling, Charles Findelle and H. C. Wiltbank, the latter a former News reporter. The men were representatives of The Home News, The Times and The Fredonian.

A Westfield Rig Stolen.

The police in this city received a telephone message this morning from Westfield stating that at an early hour a horse and buggy was stolen from that place by two men. The horse was of a sorrel color, with white feet, and is a good animal. The buggy is in good condition and the thief was headed toward Plainfield. A search was made but nothing could be seen of a rig answering the description given.

Deacon Was the Host.

Spencer Conway, one of the deasons of the Cavalry Baptist church, gave a parlor sociable last night, at his home on West Fourth street. The sociable was attended by the pastor, Rev. Scott Wallace, and a large number of the church members. A pleasant evening was passed in singing, games, etc.

Wheel Passed Over His Ankle.

Victor Lorton, driver for the United States Express Company, was thrown from the step of the wagon last evening by a sudden move of the horse. He fell to the ground and one wheel passed over both ankles. He was bruised around the eye and in other places.

Elected Officers.

The following officers were elected Wednesday by the Helping Hand Society of Grace P. E. church: President, Mrs. W. I. Pelletier; vice-president, Mrs. F. C. Moore; treasurer, Mrs. Richardson; secretary, Miss Pfender; advisory board, Mrs. Van Buren and Miss Cook.

METZ IDENTIFIED AS SNEAK THIEF.

He Was Arrested on Charge of Larceny.

NOW IN THE COUNTY JAIL.

WM. C. STANSBERY LOCATED HIM AT BENNER'S ROADHOUSE.

Stansbery's Domestic Sure That He is the Man That Robbed the House Under Guise of Piano Tuner—Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers Also Identified Him—Warrant Was Already Prepared.

The readers of The Daily Press have seen in these columns the account of the visit of the alleged "piano-tuner" to the residence of William C. Stansbery, at Fanwood, on the afternoon of Wednesday, September 21st, and the subsequent discovery of the theft of $125 worth of jewels. When Mr. Stansbery learned of the taking of his property, he waxed wrath and vowed that he would catch the man.

The first clue was obtained from George Allen, who drives a hack at Fanwood. A stranger, answering Stansbery's description of his "piano-tuner" had hired Allen to taken him to Benner's road-house on South avenue and return. Then followed an interview with Miss Lizzie Malone, housekeeper for John Benner.

After tuning Benner's piano, the stranger wanted to sell him a new one. Miss Malone arranged the sale, agreeing to give the old instrument and $350 for a Weber piano. On the occason of his visit he gave the card of Jos. V. Flynn, New England Piano Company, 98 Fifth avenue, New York, saying that he represented him. He also said that W. Dygert was the manager of the concern. Now Mr. Dygert is a personal friend of Mr. Stansbery.

The first part of the week, Miss Malone received the following telegram porporting to be from the piano-tuner and signed "Joseph Higgins." It said "Have just returned. Will come up with beautiful piano as soon as possible."

Since then, Stansbery has been waiting for something to happen. It was shortly after 1 o'clock when Frank Allen told Stansbery that George Allen had taken the same man up to Benner's. Mr. Stansbery began his campaign at once. After telephoning to police headquarters in Plainfield, he secured Constable Robert Walpole and a waraant from Justice Clark, of Scotch Plains, for one "John Doe," charged with stealing. The warrant had been already sworn out and was waiting for just such a chance.

Stansbery and his ally drove to Benner's and there found a man who answered to the description of the man they wanted. He was promptly arrested and hurried to the Stansbery home. With him at Benner's was Mr. Fox, agent for the Weber Piano Company, one of whose instruments was on the road. Mr. Fox knew nothing of the man with him beyond the fact that he had ordered the piano.

At the Stansbery residence, Miss Matilda Iverson, the colored domestic who was at home when the "piano tuner" called, positively identified the arrested man as the same one who called the day of the robbery.

This testimony together with that of the other witnesses was next heard by Justice Clark who held the prisoner in $200 bail for his appearance before the Grand Jury. He pleaded not guilty.

Sergeant Kiely and Roundsman Flynn had responded to Mr. Stansbery's call and driven to Benner's. From there they followed the party to Justice Clark's arriving in time for the hearing.

September 1st, a man called at the home of J. Pendleton Rogers, of 518 East Front street, to tune the piano. He had been there before as the tuner for the Fisher Piano Company. This time he represented himself as being from the same concern. While there he rummaged the dining room and secured a silver sugar sifter and several silver tea spoons. He then departed after which the theft was discovered. Mr. Rogers called on the firm in New York and was told that the man had formerly worked for them, but had been discharged for dishonest dealings. This man, according to the description, corresponded with Stansbery's acquantance.

The police had been on the lookout for the "piano tuner," and so brought Stansbery's captive to Plainfield after Justice Clark was through with him.

The prisoner gave his name as Paul Metz. He said that he resided with his father, Bernard Metz, at 209 East 61st street, New York. His father was in the bicycle business, he said. He

DANGER IN SODA.

Serious Results Sometimes Follow Its Excessive Use.

Common soda is all right in its place and indispensable in the kitchen and for cooking and washing purposes, but it was never intended for a medicine, and people who use it as such will some day regret it.

We refer to the common use of soda to relieve heartburn or sour stomach, a habit which thousands of people practice almost daily, and one which is fought with danger; moreover the soda only gives temporary relief and in the end the stomach trouble gets worse and worse.

The soda acts as a mechanical irritant to the walls of the stomach and bowels and cases are on record where it accumulated in the intestines, causing death by inflammation or peritonitis.

Dr. Harlandson reccommends as the safest and surest cure for sour stomach (acid dyspepsia) an excellent preparation sold by druggists under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. These tablets are large 20 grain lozenges, very pleasant to taste and contain the natural acids, peptones and digestive elements essential to good digestion, and when taken after meals they digest the food perfectly and promptly before it has time to ferment, sour and poison the blood and nervous system.

Dr. Wuerth states that he invariably uses Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets in all cases of stomach derangements and finds them a certain cure not only for sour stomach, but by promptly digesting the food they create a healthy appetite, increase flesh and strenghten the action of the heart and liver. They are not a cathartic, but intended only for stomach diseases and weakness and will be found reliable in any stomach trouble except cancer of the stomach.

ARMY AND NAVY REPORTS.

Unusual Interest Attached to the Forthcoming Publications.

Washington, Sept. 30.—The annual reports of bureau chiefs in the war and navy departments are being submitted. They promise to be the most interesting presented in many years.

In the navy they will deal largely with demonstrations of the war. The report of Engineer-in-Chief Melville will be especially interesting, not only from a technical point of view, but to the layman as well.

He will deal with the personnel question in his usual vigorous style, and will urge the prompt passage of the bill which amalgamates the line and engineer corps.

The report of Chief Constructor Hichborn will give an account of the new ships bought during the war; that of Paymaster General Stewart will contain an important statement of the finances of the service during the war; that of Civil Engineer Endicott will present some important suggestions regarding dry docks and coaling stations; that of Surgeon General Van Reyfen will render an account of the medical work during the war, and include important papers by navy surgeons.

The army reports will be somewhat discounted by the special reports of officers in the field. General Gillespie submitted a report as commanding general of the department of the East, and makes recommendations in regard to troops and the protection of the coast.

The reports of other department commanders will be of little interest. The staff officers in the field will make their usual annual reports, which are expected to be interesting especially those of inspector generals and judge advocates.

The most readable of the yearly reports has always been that of Inspector General Breckinridge. This year the report will be signed by the acting head of the corps as General Breckinridge is commanding troops in the field.

Funeral of Fanny Davenport

Boston, Sept. 30.—The funeral of Fanny Davenport, the late actress, took place in Trinity church yesterday in the presence of a large assemblage.

The body was brought from Duxbury in the morning, accompanied by Melbourne McDowell, the husband of the late actress, her sisters, Blanch Davenport and Mrs. C. H. Tiers, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar L. Davenport and Mr. and Mrs. William Seymour and their children.

The Episcopal service was read by the Rev. W. H. Dewart, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Borncamp.

There was singing by the Trinity church quartette, by Mrs. Jessie-Bartlett Davis and Messrs. Barnabee, McDonald and Phillip of "The Bostonians" Opera Company, and Miss Edith Abell.

The New Secretary of State

Washington, Sept. 30.—Acting Secretary Adee called upon Secretary of State Hay at his residence yesterday to ascertain his wishes in regard to the time when he should assume charge of the department of state.

Mr. Hay said he did not wish to enter upon his duties then, but would take the oath to-day.

During the morning Mr. Hay paid his respects to the president and remained in conference with him for an hour.

NEW YORK DEMOCRATS

FACTIONS WAR FIERCELY

Croker Shown to Be the Boss of the State Democracy. Hill Placated by Selection of the Chairman of the State Committee.

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 30.—An agreement was quickly reached yesterday between the leaders of the Democratic delegates to the state convention here at a conference held before the convention assembled, and at 10.45 o'clock the whole state ticket was authoritatively announced as follows:

For Governor—Augustus Van Wyck of Kings.

For Comptroller—Edward S. Atwater of Dutchess.

For State Treasurer—E. B. Norris of Wayne.

After the announcement of the ticket had been made from Mr. Croker's room, where the conference was held, news was given out that Frank Campbell of Bath had been selected as chairman of the state committee to be chosen by the convention yesterday afternoon. Campbell is a Hill man, and his selection is a concession to Hill, who, notwithstanding his reputed success over Croker in the makeup of the committee on credentials and platform Wednesday, fares rather badly on the state ticket. There are three Hill men on the ticket, Batten, Norris and Danforth, but the Croker-Murphy combination has very much the best of it.

JUDGE A. A. VAN WYCK.

After the conference it was generally conceded that Croker had proved himself to be the real boss of the Democracy of New York state. It was said, too, that the nomination of Judge Van Wyck would unite Tammany and the Kings County Democracy in closer bonds, and make the united Democracy of the Greater New York the controlling power in state conventions for years to come. When the ticket had been announced by Croker, the various candidates at once closed their headquarters and they and the delegates started for convention hall to ratify the work done in Croker's room.

The ticket raised a storm of protests from the friends of candidates who had been rejected. Colonel John A. Gaynor of Syracuse expressed a general feeling when he said:

"The Van Wyck family seems to be running things. They ought to have hunted up four or five more Van Wycks for places on the ticket."

Ex-Senator Hill remained in his room until nearly noon consulting with his lieutenants. It was said that he consented to the nomination of Van Wyck only after Croker told him that he must consent, or have a fight on the floor of the convention. Hill was not in a position to undertake a fight, so he yielded.

Elliot Danforth, it was learned, at first positively refused to take second place on the ticket, and asked Hill to let him fight it out in the convention, but, at the last moment, after a conference with Hill, he decided to accept what was offered to him. Then it was announced that the ticket, as given above, would be nominated by acclamation.

The McGuire and Stanchfield men started for the convention in an ugly humor, but no threats of an outbreak were made.

Convention Called to Order.

It was precisely 12.24 o'clock when the gavel fell and the buzz of conversation ceased. It interrupted also a splendid ovation on the part of the convention to D. B. Hill.

The ovation to Hill was the most enthusiastic of the morning.

Reports of committeees were in order and Corporation Counsel Whalen of New York presented the report of the credentials committee and at once moved the previous question, which precluded debate, and the conclusions of the committee were agreed to unanimously.

The report of the committee on permanent organization was next read, and Frederick C. Schraub of Lowville named for permanent chairman.

He was escorted to the chair by Captain William A. Chanler, who was heartily applauded, and Samuel J. Tilden.

Chairman Schraub's speech created hearty enthusiasm and was cheered frequently during its delivery.

The platform criticises President McKinley, calls for rigid investigation of war scandals, demands the repeal of the Raines law and the New York elections law, and favors economy in public expeditions.

RAISING SPANISH SHIPS

The Navy Department Sends Aid to Constructor Hobson.

THE COLON TO BE FLOATED

His Views Adopted Despite the Reports of Other Experts. Importance of the Attempt. Appliances Sent to Him. The Colon's Value is Worth an Effort to Save.

Washington, Sept. 30.—Assistant Secretary Allen, who has been directly in charge of the arrangements made with the wrecking companies for raising such of the Spanish warships as can be recovered, said yesterday, referring to Constructor Hobson's work on the Teresa, that the navy department had given the young constructor all the assistance which it was possible to extend in the prosecution of his work. Moreover, it is now proposed to give him further aid in his efforts to raise the Colon, by far the finest ship of the Spanish squadron.

Whatever credit has been earned by Constructor Hobson by reason of the Teresa would, in the opinion of Mr. Allen, be largely exceeded if the attempt to raise the Colon results successfully.

In the case of this ship the young constructor has pledged his professional reputation against the unanimous opinion of all the expert wreckers who have examined the ship.

Yet the navy department is unhesitatingly supporting Hobson's judgment as is indicated by the fact that it has shipped from New York $20,000 worth of specially manufactured rubber air bags, to be used in lifting the sunken vessel.

Aside from the sentimental reason for sparing no effort to save this ship, the navy department is satisfied from the reports of the divers who have investigated her condition, that she is well worth, from a purely monetary point of view, the expenditure of a considerable percentage of her original value, about $4,000,000, if there is a reasonable prospect of raising her.

NEW DRY DOCK FOR BOSTON.

Satisfactory Preliminary Borings and the Structure Will Be Rebuilt.

Washington, Sept. 30.—Reports have been received at the navy department of the preliminary borings for the foundation of the granite dry dock at Boston. The results are satisfactory, and the structure will be located at the place selected by Civil Engineer Endicott, chief of the bureau of yards and docks.

The dock will be situated east of the present smaller dock and in a part of what is known as the Wet Basin. Bids will be invited soon.

The department officials are gratified that the foundation of the Boston dock will cost less than the engineers' estimates.

A contract has been awarded for the preliminary borings on the Portsmouth N. H. dock. Bids will be invited on Saturday by the bureau of yards and docks for a large storehouse at the New York navy yard. The plans contemplate a $30,000 structure, in which will be kept the supplies of ships of war. The yard is lacking in these facilities, and stores for vessels are piled in hallways or kept under temporary cover about the yard.

The building will be erected for the bureau of supplies and accounts.

The structures will cost in the neighborhood of $125,000.

To Wed a Baring.

New York, Sept. 30.—The date for the wedding of Miss Marie H. Churchill of this city to Harold Baring of England is set for October 24, and elaborate arrangements are making for its solemnization. It will take place in St. Thomas's, on Fifth avenue, the scene of so many international alliances.

The engagement was announced some time ago, on Miss Churchill's return from a European tour, on which she met Mr. Baring.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Churchill, and is recognized as one of the belles of the "four hundred."

Roosevelt Favorite Over Van Wyck.

New York, Sept. 30.—Betting on the Stock Exchange picked up considerably as soon as the news of the nomination of Judge Van Wyck by the Democrats was learned. The prevailing odds were about two to one in favor of Roosevelt.

E. B. Talcott offered to bet $1,000 to $450 Roosevelt would be elected, and E. L. Montague offered $2,500 to $1,500 on the same man.

There seems to be a feeling on the exchange that Colonel Rosevelt will be hard to beat.

Receivers for the Arlington Mills.

Wilmington, Del., Sept. 30.—Application was made yesterday for the appointment of receivers for the Arlington mills in this city.

The Hanover and Continental banks of New York hold over $200,000 of the paper.

Judge Bradford, in the United States district court, set Tuesday next as the day for argument.

The Fuerst Bismarck Fast.

New York, Sept. 30.—The Hamburg-American line steamer Fuerst Bismarck, which sailed from New York for Cherbourg, Southampton and Hamburg, according to a cable dispatch, reached Cherbourg at 3 a. m. yesterday, making the passage in six days, ten hours and 54 minutes. Her previous eastward record to Cherbourg is therefore lowered by about 1 hour and 56 minutes.

Burglars Rob a Post Office.

Rumney, N. H., Sept. 30.—Burglars broke into the postoffice here Thursday morning and blew off the door of the safe. They secured all the receipts for the last quarter and a quantity of stamps. The postmaster has not yet ascertained the extent of his loss.

THE QUEBEC CONFERENCE.

Attorney General Martin of British Columbia Arrives With a Memorial.

Quebec, Sept. 30.—The Hon. Joseph Martin, attorney general of British Columbia, arrived here yesterday. He bears with him for presentation to the Canadian commissioners a memorial dealing with the Behring sea and Alaska boundary questions, as well as other issues, including commercial reciprocity and reciprocity in towing and wrecking.

The memorial expresses the views of the British Columbia government. That government is unwilling that Canada should cede her rights to pelagic sealing for a monetary compensation to the Canadian sealers.

Mr. Martin is confident that no difficulty will be found in settling the Alaska boundary dispute. His idea is that the American interpretation put on the treaty defining the boundary should be strenuously resisted. He protested strongly against what he called the large and expensive methods adopted by American customs officers in enfarcing the boundary regulations at Skagway and other gateways to the Yukon.

The memorial he brings favors a wide measure of reciprocity between the two countries. It also seeks an international arrangement for the protection of fish from wholesale slaughter. Mr. Martin will seek the abolition of the United States duty on ores containing lead. He says the question is one involving the very future of the mining industry.

Captain Cox, who represents the British Columbia sealers, declares that he never advocated the extinguishment of the rights of British subjects to engage in pelagic sealing as a basis for the settlement of the dispute.

The sealers do not seek to influence the commissioners, he says. They would be satisfied with a just settlement. If compensation, as has been suggested, were offered, his fellow sealers would be prepared to sell out of a business fast becoming unremunerative.

PEACE COMMISSIONS MEET.

No Business Will Be Transacted Till Gen. Merritt Reaches Paris.

Paris, Sept. 30.—The American and Spanish peace commissioners met for the first time at noon yesterday. The meeting, which was purely of a social character, took place at the residence of M. Delcasse, minister of foreign affairs, who introduced the commissioners to one another after which luncheon was served.

There will be no official meeting of the joint commission until Saturday. The American commissioners held a conference yesterday morning and read and discussed some documents. The commissioners will hold daily sessions. Saturday's meeting will be merely formal, and no business will be actually undertaken until after thte American commissioners have had a consultation with General Merritt, who will arrive in Paris next Monday.

Nebraska's Big Wheat Crop.

Omaha, Neb., Sept. 30.—What to do with Nebraska's big wheat crop was the subject of discussion at the meeting of the State Millers' Association yesterday afternoon. The session was held with D. M. Dean of Seward, president of the Millers' Association, in the chair.

Many matters relating to the interests of millers were discussed, but the one about which all present had something to say, was the wheat crop.

It was determined to form a state organization to grind all surplus wheat into flour and keep up the price of that commodity.

To Quell an Indian Outbreak.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 30.—A detachment of the Third infantry, in command of Lieutenant G. B. Humphrey, will leave Fort Snelling to-day for the scene of the Indian disturbances in the Leech lake country.

The disturbances began when a United States marshal arrested two of the Indians, and the others came to their rescue and took them from the marshal and his posse by force.

They then declared to the authorities that they would make laws of their own and would refuse to obey the laws of the United States.

The President Accepts.

Washington, Sept. 30.—A delegation from Philadelphia, headed by Mayor Warwick, yesterday formally invited President McKinley to attend the peace jubilee celebration to be held in that city on October 26 and 27.

The party consisted of the congressmen from Philadelphia districts, President Miles of the Select Council, President Hartman of the Common council and chairmen of the various committees of the jubilee celebration. The president accepted the invitation.

Medals for the Brooklyn Crew.

Brooklyn, Sept. 30.—Handsome bronze medals were presented yesterday afternoon to 341 of the officers and crew of the United States armored cruiser Brooklyn at the 23rd regiment armory, on Bedford avenue, Brooklyn, in commemoration of the great naval battle at Santiago.

The medals are the gift of the patriotic citizens of Brooklyn and are intended as an expression of their appreciation of the gallant services performed by the men behind the guns.

A Draw at Coney Island.

New York, Sept. 30.—The much discussed fight between Kid Lavigne, the lightweight champion, and Frank Erne, for the lightweight championship of the world, took place at the Greater New York Athletic Club, Coney Island, Wednesday night, and resulted like the majority of the fights decided at this club—in a draw.

Time for Filing Nominations.

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 30.—Yesterday was the first and October 9 will be the last day for filing party nominations with the secretary of state. Every certificate must bear a ten-cent revenue stamp.

World's Pacing Record Broken.

Salem, Ore., Sept. 30.—Del Norte, the guideless pacer, has reduced the world's record of 2.04 3-4 for one mile to 2.04 1-4. The time by quarters was 0.30, 1.00, 1.31, 2.04 1-4.

DENMARK'S QUEEN DIES

SURROUNDED BY FAMILY

The Queen Whose Influence on the Continent Was Great Was Called the "Royal Matchmaker" and the "Mother-in-law" of Europe. King Christian's Deep Grief.

Copenhagen, Sept. 29.—Queen Louise of Denmark died at 5.30 o'clock this morning. Her passing away was peaceful. At her bedside were the King of Denmark, the Dowager Empress of Russia, the King and Queen of Greece, the Princess of Wales, the Duke and Duchess of Cumberland, the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Denmark and all the other members of the royal family.

London, Sept. 30.—A dispatch to the Times from Copenhagen gives the following description of the death of the Queen of Denmark:

The kings of Denmark and Greece and the Princess of Wales, alternately during many hours held the hands of the dying queen, who for a few moments recovered consciousness, but who could not speak. Her husband wept, and the physicians requested him to retire to rest, but he replied:

"I will stay, at least while the queen is conscious."

Everywhere the flags are at half mast.

The queen did not die of any special illness, but of increasing decrepitude.

The late Queen Louise of Denmark was born September 7, 1817. She was a daughter of Landgrave Wilhelm of Hesse-Cassel, and was married May 26, 1842, to Christian, the fourth son of the late Duke Wilhelm of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Glucksburg, and of Princess Louise of Hesse-Cassel, the former being appointed to the succession of the crown of Denmark by the treaty of London, of May 8, 1852, and by the Danish law of succession, of July 31, 1853. He succeeded to the throne on the death of King Frederick VII, on November 15, 1863.

For the last thirty years of her life the queen exercised such influence on the politics of Europe that she was sometimes called the mother-in-law of the continent.

Another title which was sometimes given her was "The Royal Matchmaker."

The children of King Christian and Queen Louise are Prince Frederick, the heir apparent, born June 3, 1843, and who married Princess Louisa, daughter of King Carl XV of Sweden and Norway; Princess Alexandra, born December 1, 1844, married March 10, 1863, to the Prince of Wales; Prince Wilhelm, born December 24, 1845, elected king of the Helenes, under the title of George I, by the Greek national assembly in 1863, and who married Olga Constantinovna, Grand Duchess of Russia, in 1867; Princess Marie Dagmar (Empress Maria Feodorovna), born November 26, 1847, who was married November 9, 1866, to Alexander III, the late emperor of Russia; Princess Thyra, born September 29, 1853, and married December 21, 1878, to Prince Ernest August, Duke of Cumberland, and Prince Waldemar, born October 27, 1858, who married in 1885 the Princess Marie d'Orleans, eldest daughter of the Duc de Chartres.

The Yellow Fever.

Washington, Sept. 30.—The marine hospital service yesterday prepared a summary of all yellow fever cases and deaths up to date in this country so far as reported to the authorities here. It is as follows:

Louisiana—Baton Rouge, September 25, 1 case; Franklin, to September 24, 106 cases, 5 deaths; Harvey's Canal, to September 24, 6 cases; Houma, to September 22, 1 case, on September 24 1 death; Jefferson Parish, September 20, 5 cases; New Orleans, to September 28, 12 cases, 2 deaths; Wilson, September 26, 12 cases.

Mississippi—Edwards, vicinity, September 27, 1 case; Jackson, to September 27, 9 cases, 2 deaths; Orwood, to September 27, 67 cases, 3 deaths; Oxford, to September 27, 13 cases, 4 deaths; Taylors, to September 27, 82 cases, 8 deaths; Waterford, September 9, 1 case; Water Valley, September 28, 1 case.

The percentage of mortality compared with the number of cases is said to be low.

The President's Trip.

Washington, Sept. 30.—Many cities have invited the president to visit them in connection with his trip to the Omaha Exposition.

Mr. McKinley, however, has planned to spend only a fortnight away from Washington, and will decline them. The itinerary remains unchanged, the plan being for the president to reach Omaha about the night of October 11, remaining over the 13th. It is likely he will be in St. Louis the night of the 14th, and in Chicago before the 16th, to be the guest of personal friends.

A Plot to Kill a King.

Budapest, Sept. 30.—A man has been arrested at Orsova, charged with complicity in a plot to assassinate the king of Roumania.

The police received timely warning and the attempt was frustrated. A phial of poison, a dagger and several other weapons were found on the man's person.

New Lord Mayor of London.

London, Sept. 30.—Sir John Voce Moore, an alderman of the city of London, and senior partner of Moore Bros., tea merchants, has been elected lord mayor of London, to succeed Horatio David Davies. He was born in 1826, has represented the ward of Candlewick since 1889, and was sheriff of the city of London in 1893-94.

Maria Teresa to Be Repaired at Norfolk.

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 30.—Representative Wise of this district telegraphed from Washington yesterday that he saw the secretary of the navy and got his promise that the cruiser Maria Teresa should positively come to the Norfolk navy yard to be repaired and fitted out.

AT CAMP WIKOFF.

Departure of the Twentyfifth Infantry. Gen. Shafter's Condition.

Montauk Point, L. I., Sept. 30.—General Shafter is still indisposed and did not leave his headquarters at the club house yesterday. He has malarial fever and has had several chills, but no serious results are looked for.

He is able to give orders, and they are executed by Colonel McClellan, the adjutant. He expects to resume active work in a day or two.

The Twenty-fifth infantry, 700 men, in command of Major Hoten, left yesterday by rail for Long Island City. They are going to forts in Colorado, Arizona and New Mexico, to relieve the Fifteenth infantry, which is to do garrison duty in Cuba.

Forty sick men were transferred from the camp in a hospital train, and will be distributed among New York institutions.

There are 195 patients in the general hospital. There are three men in the detention hospital. There were five, but one was sent to St. John's hospital in Brooklyn, and another was furloughed.

There was only one death, that of Charles Rose of Company M, Second regular infantry, from typhoid.

The Second, Sixth and Tenth cavalry are awaiting transportation. The Seventh infantry will remain here as long as the hospital is in existence, and the engineers and Signal Corps men will remain with them.

One thousand cavalry horses are expected to be shipped by rail from here for Huntsville, Ala., to-day, and on Saturday or Monday four hundred horses will be sent to New York to be sold, as they have been condemned.

MISSIONARY REPORT.

American Missionary Association Revenues Have Decreased.

Concord, N. H., Sept. 30.—The following financial statement of the American Missionary Association, whose fifty-second anniversary is to be held here the last week in October, has been received here from the treasurer in New York, Mr. H. W. Hubbard:

The current receipts of the association for the five years from 1886-87 to 1891-92 inclusive were $1,964,044, and from 1891-92 to 1896-97 inclusive were $1,658,984, a decrease these last five years of $305,060.

This decrease in receipts has caused a burdensome debt and a curtailment of expenditures, crippling work in all departments. By a cut in expenditures the executive committee brought the deficit down to $54,945, and during this year a further cut will reduce it to about $25,000.

The determined policy of the committee will be to cut the work down in proportion as the churches withhold funds necessary to conduct it.

The Situation at Santiago.

Washington, Sept. 30.—Letters not exactly official have been received from Generals Lawton and Wood at the war department, giving some account of the condition which exists and what these officers are doing in the province of Santiago.

They say that they are getting along as well as could be expected. The Cubans are being treated well, and those who are willing to work are given employment, the more intelligent being selected for positions in the government service, which they are fitted to occupy. The letters encourage the officials of the department to believe that the problem of the government of the island of Cuba will work itself out with care and patience on the part of the American people.

The Island of Luzon at Least to be Held.

Washington, Sept. 30.—The president is quoted by a representative who saw him yesterday as admitting, what has been asserted in these dispatches, that the scope of the instructions to the American members of the Paris peace commission extended to the American ownership of the entire group of the Philippine islands. The commissioners are instructed in writing to take nothing less than the island of Luzon.

It is expected that when they demand this and propose to circumscribe Spain on the rest of the islands by forbidding her to dispose of them to any other power, she will very willingly consent to part with all of them to us without more ado, and we shall get what we set out to get without having to haggle over it.

Three Thousand Idle.

Philadelphia, Sept. 30.—Nearly three thousand carpet weavers have been thrown out of employment in this city because of the action of the ingrain carpet yarn spinners in shutting down.

This action on the part of the spinners was decided on several days ago. For some time the spinners have been turning out yarn twice as fast as the weavers could consume it, and this forced the price down to such an extent that it was deemed advisable to close down for the present.

Klondike Miners Return.

Port Townsend, Wash., Sept. 30.—A bark has arrived from St. Michaels with ninety-five passengers and $20,000 in gold dust.

The steamship Farrallon has arrived from Lynn Canal ports, bringing seventy passengers from Alaska.

On September 26 the Farallon picked up the wrecked schooner Capella in Seaforth channel and towed her to Bella Della. The Capella's captain was drowned in a gale on September 20.

Big Fertilizer Works Burned.

North Weymouth, Mass., Sept. 30.—The factory buildings of the Bradley Fertilizer Works, about two and one-half miles from the village, were burned at about 11 o'clock Wednesday evening. Their contents, including stock and much valuable machinery, were also destroyed, and the total loss will be about $250,000.

The buildings covered an area of more than three acres.

Gen. Hawkins Promoted.

Washington, Sept. 30.—Major General Hamilton S. Hawkins, United States volunteers, who commanded the division which captured San Juan hill in the second day's fight at Santiago, has been appointed a brigadier general in the regular army to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of General William M. Graham.

Mr. Martine's Position.

James E. Martine authorizes The Daily Press to announce that he is not and has not been a candidate for any office that the Democrats are to nominate for this fall. Mr. Martine is out of politics this fall so far as running for office is concerned.

Democratic Needs.

The essential need of the Union county Democracy is for the party members to get together, form an aggressive organization, with some sort of a head to it, and nominate candidates that won't be compelled to go into the campaign knowing that they are leading a forlorn hope. It is neither good sense nor good politics the way Democratic affairs are conducted in Union county.

At present there are a few Democrats in Elizabeth who are about all there is in substance of the party machinery in Union county. They maintain a sort of an organization at the county seat, and capture what few honors and perquisites there are drifting around. But so far as the rest of the county is concerned, if it wasn't for Crowell in Rahway, Martine in Plainfield, Lane in Summit and Jackson in Springfield, it is an open question if even the primaries would be regularly held.

Union county was once classified as Democratic, but it is far from that nowadays. Still, with a thorough organization of the party in the various cities and townships, things would probably be different. There is plenty of young blood in the party that but needs some encouragement, some recognition in party councils, some different ways of party rule than now prevail. Stir up this latent material and the Democrats will find things coming their way more often in Union county.

The Democrats need to get out of this rut they are traveling in. It leads to nowhere.

For The Assembly.

In looking over the county for good timber for the county nominations, James P. Powers, of Elizabeth, is being suggested as a candidate for the Assembly.

Although Mr. Powers is not a candidate in the sense that he is making a canvass to gain the honor, it is understood that he would accept the nomination if it was tendered to him. It would seem that Mr. Powers would make an available candidate in several particulars.

One of these is the fact that he was the last Senatorial candidate of the Democrats in Union county, and though he led what was considered a forlorn hope in that campaign—the one of 1896—he became well-known throughout the county by reason of it, and wherever he appeared at campaign meetings his presence always resulted in a favorable impression up on the voters. His genial ways and honest character makes him friends of a lasting kind.

Since his removal from Plainfield to Elizabeth Mr. Powers has built up a large law practice, and he is rapidly pushing himself into the front ranks of Union county citizens, from where many of the State's best and most noted men have graduated.

Elizabeth, no doubt, will claim at least one or two of the Assembly nominations and there is a prevailing sentiment that Mr. Powers would be one of the strongest candidates for the Assembly that they could decide upon.

HON. ROBERT R. HITT.

Congressman Robert Roberts Hitt, of Illinois, who is spoken of as Embassador to England to succeed Colonel John Hay, has both wealth and experience to fit him for the position. He has served as first secretary of the legation at Paris, Assistant Secretary of State and chairman of the House Committee on Foreign Relations.

The Christian Endeavorers.

Down by the sad sea waves at Asbury Park there is a gathering of bright-faced, earnest-minded young people that the importance of as one of the great forces of modern civilization should not be lost sight of. Other momentous conventions there have been this week, but in the hurly-burly activities of politics let us not forget the noble Christian Endeavorers.

The annual State convention of these young Christians, laboring for the uplifting of humanity, is not a body of worshipers gathered together to hear fulsome and dry reports on orthodox subjects, but one bristling with live, interesting topics bearing a close relation to all that makes the best of National and church life.

Plainfielders perhaps can appreciate the State conventions of the Christian Endervorers better than many other places, because we have entertained one, and we know what a treat Asbury Park must be enjoying this week in having for its principal visitors the genial delegates who represent this great body of young people.

Runyon's Narrow Ideas.

A little bird flew into the sanctum this morning and chirped something about how Editor Runyon proposed "roasting" The Daily Press for having expressed an honest and straightforward opinion about the results of the Democratic convention. Incidentally, it might be asked if Editor Runyon objected to any of the complimentary remarks The Daily Press made about Runyon's favorite—Voorhees.

It is evidently beyond the comprehension of Editor Runyon, up to his neck in political servitude, to understand that there are two sides to every question, and that The Daily Press is fair and outspoken in the treatment of all public affairs.

Fame Is Theirs Now.

The persistent efforts of the basket ball team of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. to achieve victory and fame have not been in vain. The team has been classed as one of the best in this section and a photograph of the group of players has been selected by A. G. Spalding & Co., to be inserted in their annual basket ball guide, the recognized authority on the sport. Only the principal teams of the country have been invited to have their photographs appear in this volume.

Andrew R. Dilts, who has been nominated for County Clerk of Hunterdon county by the Democrats, has seen fit to make affidavit setting forth that he was a loyal supporter of the regular Democratic nominees in 1896—that is, Bryan and Sewall—in order to circumvent the false stories that have been circulated as to his status in the party of which he is now the nominee for one of the best offices in the county. The most remarkable thing about this affidavit business is the fact that any Hunterdon county man should have the temerity to question the loyalty of a Democrat in that bailiwick. We always looked upon Hunterdon county Democracy as a synonym for rock-ribbed and unimpeachable.

Elvin W. Crane, candidate for Governor, announced yesterday that he would not resign the office of Prosecutor of Essex county till he was elected to the office for which he has been chosen by the Democrats. Mr Crane doubtlessly concludes that a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush, and especially in his case he doesn't propose to let go of one good position to go chasing after another that he may never get.

The ranks of journalism are depleted by one of its most representative and creditable members in the death of Robert J. Killgore, editor of The Hunterdon County Democrat, published at Flemington. Editor Killgore conducted a forcible paper, which occupied an influential position in the community.

Sandford Snyder, of Franklin township, who has been in the fight to secure the Republican nomination of Sheriff in Somerset county, has announced his withdrawal from the contest. This will narrow the contest down materially, but will make the fight wax the hotter.

The Democrats of the borough will have a chance tonight to elect their delegates to attend the Congressional convention of the Third district. The primary will be held in the basement of the Public School building.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

An obliging Plainfield Justice of the Peace is accused of making his court a sort of experiment station, in which local law students air their oratory and knowledge—or ignorance—of legal principles. This moves The Plainfield Press to remark that "the way in which most of these cases are conducted, the flippant charges, the burlesque prosecutions and the mocking disposition is a reproach upon the fair name of justice. It seems to have reached that point that every clash between neighbors, relatives, or those engaged in business transactions is straightway haled before a justice of the peace only to end in a fiasco, that, were it not so abominable, would be amusing. It may be good practice for the boys, but it is a poor thing for the community, and the quicker a halt is called in such affairs the better it will be."—Tribune.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

"Press," the valuable feline, who has been a companion of Janitor Hope at the Bryant Public School for several years, returned to the school last Monday after an absence of four months. Mr. Hope was glad to welcome his friend back again. This knowing cat was born July 4th, 1892, in The Daily Press office, and was named "Press." She is the daughter of "Ruth Cleveland," who for many years was a familiar figure at The Press office.

A party of young men from this city visited the Raritan river several days ago and spent the greater part of the day-time in fishing in the vicinity of the dam just below Bound Brook. While one of the less enthusiastic fisherman was wandering about the dam, he spied a bundle floating on the water close to the shore. Having read wierd tales of the Gueldensuppe murder and the finding of the sections of the body in the East river, the mind of the young Plainfielder reverted to it. Hurriedly calling his comrades, the young man carefully drew the package ashore. It proved to be a mystery but not of the kind expected. In the bundle were a dozen fowls which had apparently been in the water for some time. There was no clue as to whence they came.

During the day a report was circulated through the village that one of them was accidentally shot and that the Plainfield ambulance had started for the scene to bring the wounded one home. gramme, and the first speaker was Arthur Pierson, of Westfield, who told of the work at the Westfield Camp.

A word should be said about the music of the convention. Two pianos, an organ, and a cornet, with a chorus choir of singers led the hymns. A number of Asbury Park singers added much to the pleasure of the Endeavorers by well-chosen solos and duets, and above address and prayer could be heard the grand accompaniment of the waves.

The last speaker of the afternoon was Rev. S. Parks Cadman, D. D., of the Metropolitan Tabernacle, New York. Dr. Cadman had arisen from a bed of illness to attend the convention, and was very white as to face and very husky and hoarse as to voice. His subject was "The Ideal Christian Endeavor Society of the Twentieth Century," and a stronger and more up-to-date address was never heard in any convention. He told of the changes that must come before the twentieth century could be controlled in the interest of the kingdom of God.

In the evening there were also two services, and under the beautiful "hunters' moon" the delegates streamed out to attend the meeting of their choice. "Nashville Echoes" was the subject of the Educational Hall service, and an address on the Nashville convention, illustrated by stereopticon views, was given by Rev. S. W. Steckel. There was also an address by Rev. R. K. Wick, of Jersey City. At the Auditorium, Rev. Geo. B. Wight, D. D., conducted devotional exercises, and the programme included one of chief features of the convention, the president's annual address. There was a very large attendance to hear genial Dr. Brett, the beloved president, and his words of inspiration and encouragement were carefully listened to.

had just come off a sick bed himself, he told a Press reporter, which he explained, acccounted for his nervousness. He had a wife and baby at home.

Mrs. Rogers identified the man from afar off and was very positive in her identification. "Good morning," she remarked, but the prisoner smiled imperturbably and explained that he had never seen her before.

A complaint was sworn out before Justice Nash by Mrs. Rogers. The prisoner pleaded not guilty and was held under $100 bonds to appear for the Grand Jury. Not being able to obtain bonds, Constable Walpole took him to the county jail at Elizabeth.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular; free.

THE SUNDAY LESSON.

INTERNATIONAL SERIES, WITH COMMENTARY BY DR. STEARNS.

Golden Text.—Help us, O Lord our God; for we rest on Thee.—2 Chron. xiv: 11. Oct. 2, 1898.

2. "And Asa did that which was good and right in the eyes of the Lord his God." Last quarter was spent chiefly with the prophets Elijah and Elisha, men of God, and now we are to have several lessons on kings who were men of God. Asa was the third king of Judah after the kingdom was divided at the death of Solomon, and the first to do right in the sight of the Lord. This statement is made concernig seven other kings of Judah, but not once concerning any of the kings of the ten tribes. The throne was called the throne of the Lord, or the throne of the kingdom of the Lord over Israel, and the king was said to be the king for the Lord his God (I Chron. xxix, 23; xxviii, 5; II Chron. ix, 8).

3. "He took away the altars of the strange gods." Although the law of God said, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me" (Ex. xx, 3), yet Solomon introduced many strange gods to please his wives, and both Rehoboam and Abijah continued the idol worship. It is difficult to go against the customs of your father and grandfather, but Asa feared God rather than man, and was determined to do right before him.

4. "And commanded Judah to seek the Lord God of their fathers." In verses 3 and 4 of the next chapter we read that Israel had been for a long season without the true God, and without a teaching priest, and without law, but when they turned to the Lord and sought him he was found of them. In verses 12 and 15 we read that they sought him with all their heart and soul, even with their whole desire, and he gave them rest round about. The Lord takes heed to our hearts rather than our words and will fulfill the desire of them that fear him.

5. "The kingdom was quiet before him." Verse 1 says "In his days the land was quiet ten years." Quietness is one of the great gifts of God which shall yet be fully enjoyed, not only by all Israel, but by all the world when "the work of righteousness shall be peace, and the effect (or service) of righteousness shall be quietness and assurance forever" (Isa. xxxii, 17). In quietness and in confidence is strength, and the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit is in the sight of God of great price (Isa. xxx, 15; I Pet. iii, 4).

6. "The land had rest, because the Lord had given him rest." In Joshua xxiii, 1, it is written that the Lord had given rest unto Israel from all their enemies. In I Chron. xxii, 9, the Lord had told David that his son Solomon (peaceable) would be a man of rest and that Israel would enjoy peace and quietness in his days. Lamech said concerning his son, "This shall comfort us concerning our work," and so he called him Noah—i. e., rest or comfort. The earliest rest is that of Gen. ii, 3, which was broken by the devil doubting God's word and God's love, and thus he still seeks to break all rest.

7. "Because we have sought the Lord our God he hath given us rest on every side." When Solomon was about to build the temple, he said to Hiram, "The Lord my God hath given me rest on every side, so that there is neither adversary nor evil occurrent" (I Kings v, 4). The rest of the kingdom that is coming will be glorious (Isa. xi, 10) or, as in the margin, glory. Even now he says, "Come unto me and I will give you rest," and "When he giveth quietness who can then make trouble?" (Math. xi, 28; Job xxxiv, 29.) When, even in our ordinary daily affairs, we allow the government to be upon his shoulder and the peace of God to rule (Isa. ix, 7; Col. iii, 15), we will have a glorious foretaste of the rest of the kingdom. Some say that they seek him, yet do not seem to find him as their rest, but it must be that they do not seek him with the whole heart (Jer. xxix, 13).

8-10. The adversary will not allow us to rest if he can help it, so here we have over a million of Ethiopians gathered against Asa in battle, and he has but little over half as many with which to meet them. Wars will not wholly cease from the earth until the devil is cast into the lake of fire at the end of the thousand years (Rev. xx, 7-10), for, while the millenium will be a time of peace, it will end with a great war. Israel had no reason to fear her enemies, however numerous, for the promise of God was that one should chase a thousand and two put ten thousand to flight. The deliverance from Egypt and the conquest of the Canaanites, with the many deliverances and victories in the days of the judges and in the time of David, would strengthen the hands of anyone who feared God. David could say, "I will not be afraid of ten thousands of people that have set themselves against me round about." "Though a host should encamp against me, my heart shall not fear" (Ps. iii, 6; xxvii, 3; xlvi, 1, 2).

11. "And Asa cried unto the Lord his God and said, it is nothing with thee to help, whether with many or with them that have no power." Jonathan said to his armor bearer, "It may be that the Lord will work for us, for there is no restraint to the Lord to save by many or by few" (I Sam. xiv, 6). The greatest hindrance to the Lord's work is generally our fancied strength or wisdom, and there is no proverb much more unscriptural than this, that God helps those who help themselves.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Oct. 2. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—"Trials and how to bear them."—Isa. xli, 8-20.

"Man is born to trouble as the sparks fly upward." Who in the wide, wide world has escaped trials? Who has not been borne down by them? Who has not often felt that the trials of life were too heavy to be borne? Who has not in anguish and sorrow cried out, "Is there anything that will help me bear the trials of life?" Some try to bear their own trials. They keep their troubles safely locked in their own minds and hearts. To the world they appear free from care, destitute of trials. Within their hearts are breaking and their minds weakening under heavy burdens and trials. Some people cast their burdens upon others. They make the lives of all about them miserable with a constant recitation of their personal tribulations and a constant demand for sympathy. Trials are to be borne in part by ourselves. We should not without effort give way to them, but exercise all our powers to control them. We should in the proper way seek the sympathy and help of our friends in our times of trouble, but above everything else we need to learn practically that God in Christ "is our refuge and our strength, a very present help in trouble," and therefore to cast our care upon Him, for He careth for us.

That God will help us to bear the trials of life is the lesson of the Scriptural reference. Through the prophet Isaiah God is promising to Israel protection and support through the troublous period that is approaching. These words apply equally to all God's people, and we may therefore find comfort and help in them.

1. God helps us to bear trials by being with us. "Fear thou not, for I am with thee; be not dismayed, for I am thy God." How the presence of a strong, sympathizing friend assists us in bearing trials, and specially should this be so when that friend is our God!

2. God helps us to bear trials by strengthening us. "I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea I will uphold thee with the right hand of My righteousness!" God strengthens us for the trials of life. Through Christ, that strengtheneth us, we cannot only do all things, but bear all things. His grace is sufficient for us. Our weakness is made strong in His strength.

3. God helps us to bear trials by weakening them. To Israel He says, "They that war against thee shall be as nothing and as a thing of naught." God weakens our trials. He tempers the storm to the shorn lamb. Our trials are not above our ability to bear them; therefore let us come to God in time of trouble and in the hour of trial.

Bible Readings.—Deut. xxxi, 6-8; Josh. i, 9; Ps. xxxvii, 5; xlvi, 1-3; lv, 22; Isa. xliii, 1-3; Math. v, 4; vi, 24-34; xi, 28; xxviii, 19, 20; Gal. vi, 2; Phil. iv, 6; Heb. xiii, 5; I Pet. v, 6, 7.

Love and Likeness.

Sympathy begets love, and love begets likeness. That is the very essence of Christian morals. To feel for and suffer with Christ results in a knowledge of Christ and a love for Christ. Men always become more or less like that which they love. The virtues which the saint laboriously cultivates soften and dignify his countenance. Those who love Christ become like Him. They have dwelt so long on the beauty of that marvelous life, they have so honestly striven to share the sufferings of that life, to triumph over the power of sin, to be meek, charitable and patient and to contemplate with tranquillity the prospect of death, that they become in their feeble way like Christ, and every well spent Lent will bring them nearer and nearer to Him.—Churchman.

In Wartimes.

Our nation will have need to pray for sustaining grace. The calamities of war will strike with far greater force in our homes than on the battlefield. There one may fall, but at the fireside a half dozen will be so prostrate that death would be a relief. Old conditions must pass away. The selfish spirit must go into the vicarious. The nation's woes must, through the grace of God, be subsidized to good account. They must not be lost as a purifying agency, but through revival efforts become a revenue toward sustaining the nation's heart amid her baptism of blood.—Presbyterian.

Cherish an Ideal.

No one can cherish an ideal and devote himself to its realization from year to year and strive and struggle and make sacrifices for its attachment without undergoing a certain gracious transformation, of which the highest powers must be aware and men can hardly miss.—John White Chadwick.

God Guide Aright.

God guide aright our republic and its fearless president, so that righteousness and justice prevail and foes who imperil freedom be forever silenced.—Jewish Messenger.

Till He Come.

"Till He come"—oh, let the words
Linger on the trembling chords;
Let the little while between
In their golden light be seen;
Let us think how heaven and home
Lie beyond that "Till He come."

When the weary ones we love
Enter on their rest above,
Seems the earth so poor and vast,
All our life joy overcast.
Hush! Be every murmur dumb!
It is only—till He come.

Clouds and conflicts round us press.
Would we have one sorrow less?
All the sharpness of the cross,
All that tells the world is loss,
Death and darkness and the tomb,
Only whisper, "Till He come."

See, the feast of love is spread.
Drink the wine and break the bread—
Sweet memorials—till the Lord
Call us round his heavenly board,
Some from earth, from glory some,
Severed only—till He come.

—Edward Henry Bickersteth.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Lesson For the Week Beginning Oct. 2. Comment by Rev. W. J. Yates, A. M. Topic, The Call of Abraham.

SCRIPTURE READING.—Gen. xii, 1-4, "Abraham departed, as the Lord had spoken unto him."

Emigration did not begin nor cease with Abraham. His journey was not outwardly different from that of thousands of others of his time. Probably there had been a tide of settlement running westward from his home in Chaldea for some years similar to that which has in recent times settled our great west. Men were seeking to better their condition in new lands.

The peculiar thing about the emigration of Abraham was that he was not attracted to a new place by its prospects of wealth and ease, but he went out under the sense of a divine call to establish a purer form of religion. We have no knowledge that he was a religious reformer in his native land. That corruption had replaced the earlier, pure worship of God seems certain. That it was hopeless to contend against it is probable. That he could not submit to its debasing influence in quiet was the very thing that fitted him to be the leader of a new development in worship. The necessity for a new land in which a new people could receive new revelations of the divine nature and will and develop a pure form of religion was under all his plans and shaped his whole course.

Abraham was a notable man in his day. His wealth, his numerous tribe of followers, his practical wisdom and thrift, made him a desirable friend of Pharaoh and a valued ally of Abimelech and a dreaded enemy of Chedorlaomer and his confederates. But he is remembered in after ages not for his riches or power, but for his faith in an invisible God as maker and ruler of all things, who makes and keeps covenants with man for man's protection and good.

Abraham is the first of religious prophets. He is a discoverer of eternal principles of righteousness. He is the Columbus of religion. He leads into a new world of spiritual life not by offerings and purchase of the favor of the gods, but by sincere and loving trust in one God as Eternal Father. He is the first of those who live by faith, the father of the faithful.

Coming Up Along.

In 1861 the fugitive slaves at Fortress Monroe were called by General B. F. Butler "contrabands." Then came "freedmen" and free men. The emancipation proclamation freed from slavery 4,000,000 blacks. It broke the ties of master and slave, but did not make the slave able to care for himself and be a man among men where he had always before been a thing. The only power which could do this was not civil nor military, but mental and spiritual. The church organized to teach and evangelize this multitude. Schools and churches have been provided by the Freedmen's Aid and Southern Education society. The Methodist Episcopal church since 1866 has expended in this work about $4,500,000. She now maintains in the south among the blacks one school of theology, 10 colleges and 11 academies having 333 teachers and 4,995 students, with land and buildings worth $1,286,000. The moral condition of the blacks of the south when freed from slavery was fearfully low, their ignorance and poverty almost utter. Criminality was to be expected since they had never been trained to self control. That they must be educated and converted if society was to exist was clear. The south was destitute and defeated. Help must come from the church at the north. It came, and the black race is rising grandly. Never in history has a people in so short a time risen from such depths as high as this people have come. In one generation wonders have been accomplished. Much more remains to be done.

The League and Missions.

The attempt is made to interest the League more deeply in missionary work. One hundred of the students of our literary institutions offered their services for four weeks during the vacation season the past summer to visit local chapters and make addresses. A library of the most recent and best books on missions in various parts of the world has been selected and published in uniform bindings specially to help this new movement. The 16 volumes have sold for $20. In the new edition they will be sold for $10. As many chapters as possible should secure the full set and then arrange a series of meetings at which the thrilling story of each field can be presented. A proper outlay of time in arranging programme and enlisting the young people in reading the books and writing reviews and essays on them will repay a hundredfold in the development of interest in the local chapter, in the cultivation of taste for literature, style in composition, proficiency in delivery, companionship in society and interest in humanity. Let the literary department take hold of this work in earnest. Buy the books and use them.

Zion.

"Zion" is a sacred name to us. It conjures up in our mind the past history of our people; it is a symbol of the law, which continues to be "our life and the length of our days." But for all that it can no longer be to us a watchword for a re-establishment of Israel as a separate nationality or a separate body politic.

Among Yourselves.

That is where Christians should find the best fellowship. Cultivate Christian social life. Everything of value in the clubs, societies, fraternities and associations of the worldly can better be found in the church circles. If your League is not what you desire, make it what it should be. Lift it and it will lift you.

Der Schaden wird auf über eine Million geschätzt. Das Feuer entstand im Baumwolllager durch Selbstentzündung.—Hier sind die Altonaer Echermann, Jordan, Langhans, Neelsen und Stelemann verhaftet worden, weil sie im Freihafengebiet jahrelang Tabakschwindeleien, die in die Millionen gehen, verübt haben.

NEW YORK LETTER.

Special Correspondence.

In all the talk about Theodore Roosevelt as "the man of the hour," whose political star is now in the ascendant, the fact has been lost sight of that he has been connected with every branch of the public service except the judicial. He has served nation, state and city. He has held executive positions and sat in the Legislature. He has been connected with the army, the navy and the police. He has been administrator, investigator, orator and writer. He was a member of assembly sixteen years ago. He was delegate-at-large to the National Republican convention of 1884. He was candidate for mayor in 1886. He has since been chairman of the civil service commission, president of the police board, assistant secretary of the navy and colonel of the Rough Riders. This is a far more varied experience than Seymour, Fenton, Hoffman, Tilden, Robinson, Cornell, Cleveland, Hill and Flower had when they were first elected as governor. Yet because Roosevelt is still a young man he is spoken of as lacking in that judgment and mental poise which is associated with advanced age and long experience in affairs. The reason why Roosevelt is held to be lacking in judgment is because he is intense, enthusiastic, and throws his whole heart and conscience into what he is doing. And that is the reason why he became so popular far more than because he displayed physical bravery in the battles before Santiago. His moral courage is the larger ingredient in his popularity.

Competition in War News

Now that the war is over the reporters and correspondents will return, seeking employment in an already overcrowded profession. The expense of war news has been so great that peace is a boon to some of the leading newspapers, which have been running at a loss. Never before indeed has an equal amount been spent for news in so short a time and under such intense rivalry.

Speaking of rivalry, how it recalls the early days of the Herald and Tribune, whose efforts to obtain early news now seem very limited, but they were great for that day. Foreign news then came by the Cunard steamers, whose port at that time was Boston, and as horse expresses were used to bring the news the smartest drivers and the fleetest animals were successful. Part of the route was by steamboat, and on one occasion Bennett made a "beat" by placing a printing case on board, and while the vessel was sailing, the compositor was at work, so that as soon as they reached this city the Herald extra was issued in advance of all others. When the Oregon question assumed a warlike aspect it was so important to have early foreign reports that Greely chartered the swiftest sailing vessel in this port to go to Liverpool and bring back the news. The vessel referred to was a yacht which could outsail the slow steamers of that day. How strange this sounds in comparison with our ocean telegraph, and yet it made a great sensation and did much to help the Tribune. Bennett and Greely were both hard fighters, and the former crushed all his rivals except the Tribune. These editors never met and only knew each other by sight. They were essentially different in all their leading traits of character, but each succeeded in building up a great newspaper.

Concerning Leases.

Bortel, who holds a lease in part of the Governor Morton property, is determined to make a handsome thing of it, and who can blame him? His lease is for two years, and as the owner wants to demolish and rebuild he is delayed by the obduracy of his tenant. Morton's building scheme evicts several other tenants whose leases had expired, and the object is to erect a stately business structure. But Bortel holds the fort and will surrender only on captivating terms. His position is worth at least $10,000, which sum was paid to a down town grocer for a lease held under similar circumstances. The owner wanted to rebuild and preferred paying the tenant's enormous price to waiting for the expiration of the lease. Still better terms were obtained in Cortland street recently, when a saloon keeper on an important corner was paid, as it is said, $20,000. He learned that the adjacent property had been purchased for a grand office building, with he got his price. It is often said that it is better to lease property in New York than to own it, and one man has made a fortune in this manner. He perambulates the city, and whenever he sees desirable property at a moderate rent he takes a long lease. As a general thing before the lease expires he sells it at a handsome advance, and experience has made him a master in this specialty. CYRUS THORP.

BATTLE UNFOUGHT.

COMMODORE SCHLEY ALL BUT ATTACKED AN AUSTRIAN.

It Was on the Eventful July 3d, When His Fleet Had Submerged the Spanish Warships, That He Mistook the Austrian for an Enemy.

Here is an incident which shows more clearly than anything else just what the navy is ready to do and how delicately balanced is the chip on the shoulders of our sea fighters. When Schley had enriched our history on July 3 and every ship in these waters under the royal banner of Castile had been shattered, he was sailing east to resume station before Santiago. Word came to him that the Pelayo, pride of the Spanish navy, had reached the Caribbean, and he was directed to engage her as soon as found. To naval experts the suggestion that a cruiser fight a battleship is insanity gone mad, but nevertheless the Brooklyn started on her errand.

Near Santiago a battleship was sighted, heavily armored and turreted, but at such a distance that her colors could not be distinguished under the glass. Toward her the Brooklyn started. Commodore Schley and Captain Cook stood on the forward bridge as the big cruiser fairly leaped forward to give battle.

"She is white—an unusual thing in war time," said the commodore, watching the stranger through his glass. "I don't believe she is Spanish," he remarked a moment later, and then, consulting the picture of a sister ship to the Pelayo, suddenly exclaimed: "By Jove! It is the Pelayo, after all!"

"On the signal bridge!" shouted Captain Cook. "Can you make out her colors?"

"Not yet, sir," came the answer, followed a moment after by "We have raised her colors, sir, and she is Spanish."

"Send your men to quarters, Cook," said the commodore, "and start an eight-inch shell for her when I give the word."

COMMODORE SCHLEY.

On went the Brooklyn, fast closing the distance between herself and the stranger—a big battleship of modern type, and with her flag aft—two stripes of red on each side of yellow, as it appeared, and the crown in proper place. The bugle sung "To quarters!" and the men, although they had been fighting all the morning, rushed to their guns with a cheer. For a moment the commodore hesitated. "On the signal bridge!" he called. "Are you certain the stranger is a Spaniard?"

"Certain, sir," came the reply. "I can see her colors distinctly."

The commodore had his glasses on the battleship. Turning to the captain of his ship, he said: "Cook, that fellow is not at quarters. His guns are turned away from us. He is not up to snuff. Watch him closely, and the moment he sends his men to quarters or moves a turret, let drive. Give him everything you have. We will sink him in twenty minutes unless he gets a shot under our belt."

Just then the officer on the bridge reported that the battleship was signalling with the international code, and soon translated the message: "This is an Austrian battleship."

Half an hour after the commander of the Maria Theresa (Austrian) was seated in Commodore Schley's cabin.

"If you had sent your men to quarters or moved a turret I should have raked you; it was a narrow escape," said the commodore during the conversation. "Your flag is so like Spain's, saving that you have a white stripe where she has yellow, that it is hard to tell them apart at any considerable distance, and I came near letting drive at you."

"We know that," returned the Austrian, "and we were very much worried. We signalled long before you answered. We had no wish to be troubled. We have seen the wrecks along the coast. But," he inquired, as he rose to leave, "do you send cruisers to meet battleships?"

The commodore smiled as he answered: "We always make a fight with the first ship we have at hand. We never wait because we are outrated. We try to win with what we have."

"You Americans are very remarkable," said the Austrian as he went over the side to his boat.—Chicago Record.

WAS A MARRIED MAN.

CHAPTER XXXI.

"This is a very mysterious thing about Roy's telegram," said Lady Bettaby to her cousin.

The Honorable Newton Dene was a late riser, and he had heard nothing of the excitement occasioned by the arrival of the Baronet's second telegram, which had changed all Roy's apathy into feverish activity, or of the hurried inquiries that the young man had made about the lost message whilst the mare was being harnessed to drive him down to the station just in time to catch the train to Liverpool.

"What telegram?" he asked with his customary lisp. And her ladyship explained—

"I saw it myself lying upon the hall-table," she said, "an hour or two before Roy came back from the Chicken-Stone, and I felt sure, of course, that he had seen it when he came in. But it seems that he did not, and now there is not a trace of it to be found; and it must have been of tremendous importance, to judge from the poor boy's excitement. It is very distressing to think that our carelessness has caused him annoyance, although the telegram ought to have been safe enough on the table. It could not blow away, and nobody would move it. I would give anything to know what really became of it!"

"Does 'anything' include yourself, Decima dear?" asked her cousin languidly. "If so, I might possibly tell you."

Lady Bettaby laughed.

"Don't be absurd! Do you really know anything about the lost message?" she asked excitedly; whereupon the Honorable Newton languidly held up his hands.

"My dear Decima, you need not attack me in that fierce manner! I did not hide the telegram."

"Who said anything about hiding it?" asked her ladyship impatiently. "If you know anything at all about the matter, I wish you would mention it. I have been worrying and puzzling over it all the morning!"

"Then I suppose that I must relieve your anxiety," said her cousin. "What would you say if I suggested that your paragon Miss Emmott knows more about the loss of the telegram than she would probably admit?"

"Sabina knows nothing at all about it!" said her ladyship with conviction. "I asked her if she had seen it and she said that she did not think that it was on the table when she came in."

"As she would naturally say if she had hidden it for some purpose of her own."

"But what purpose could she have?" asked Lady Bettaby, impressed by her cousin's manner in spite of herself.

A Necessity for Decisive Action.

The woman higher-education movement has received a severe check, which may work out a wholesome reaction in time. In Alexandria, at the delta of the Nile, a woman's review has just been started which is in strange contrast to reviews on the same theme published in England, America, and Paris. It appears under the patronage of the Khedive's mother, and contains articles on the duties of mothers and wives, on rules of hygiene, and practical household medicine; there are also essays on history and politics and the indispensable courier of European fashions. The new review starts out under the most favorable auspices, for it can at least count among its initial subscribers the dwellers of the harems. The "new woman" should at once bestir herself to keep the obnoxious, old-fashioned principles from getting beyond the Nile Valley.

Wilhelm II.'s Toad Talisman.

The house of Hohenzollern possesses a family talisman. Since the time of the elector, John Cicero, who flourished toward the end of the fifteenth century, each ruler has, when possible before dissolution, handed to his successor a sealed packet. This contains a ring, in which is set a black stone, said to have been dropped by a huge toad on the coverlet of a princess of the family just as she had given birth to a son. Frederick the Great found the ring in an envelope, which also inclosed a memorandum, written by Frederick I., stating its value and its mode of transmission. Schneider, the librarian of William I., declares that he saw the packet handed by Geling, the treasurer, to his royal master on his accession, and further asserts that he read his account of the talisman to the Emperor, who fully confirmed it.—St. James' Gazette.

Who Was Right.

Mr. Wildwest—"I suppose it's all right, but I can't help feeling that this continual presence of a chaperone is a reflection on my character."

Miss Two Seasons—"Oh, nonsense! It's lots more fun this way. Out west you are on your honor, while here you shift the entire responsibility for your conduct upon the chaperone; she'll be asleep in a moment."—Harlem Life.

The Dun—I hope you won't be offended if I remind you that we are very much in need of the money.

The Dunned—Not at all. If anybody's going to be offended it is yourself.—Boston Transcript.

"Well, I can never believe that Sabina hid the telegram," said her ladyship, with a sudden declaration of her faith in her paragon, "whatever you say."

The Honorable Newton coughed warningly, but it was too late. Sabina and her father were entering the room, and had heard the concluding words. Dene mentally anathematised his folly in not having closed the door before making his revelation to his cousin. Lady Bettaby, warned by his glance, turned abruptly, to see both the Major and his daughter looking at her, the old soldier's red face redder than ever with indignation, Sabina with a look of injured innocence upon hers.

Miss Emmott was the first to speak.

"Thank you, Lady Bettaby!" she said meekly. "I am sure that you would not believe such a horrible thing of me! Who"—and she darted a glance that was far from meek at the Honorable Newton—"who was wicked enough to make such a vile charge against me?"

"Sabina, be silent, please, and allow me to speak!" ordered the Major; and he turned fiercely towards the Honorable Newton, who was trying to insert his single eye-glass in his eye and to look at ease. "Do I understand, from Lady Bettaby's remark, sir, that you accuse my daughter of having hidden or taken this telegram for which everybody has been searching?" he demanded, with indignant severity. And the Honorable Newton, rendered calm at once on finding that he had an angry man to contend with, answered with more of a lisping drawl than usual—

"I was about to inform Lady Bettaby of a little incident which happened yesterday, although it slipped my memory until I heard of the loss of the telegram just now for the first time, and which, when I recall it, makes me think that Miss Emmott may possibly have had some object in concealing the message. I am not sorry that she is present to hear what I have to say, and, if I have made a mistake, I offer her my sincere apologies for having suspected her."

His calm answer only increased the infuriated Major's wrath.

"But this is infamous, sir!" he exclaimed. "To imagine for a moment that my daughter could be guilty of such conduct is unpardonable! I am surprised, Lady Bettaby, that you allow such a charge to be made against one of your guests."

Her ladyship looked distressed and could not think of a suitable reply; for, in spite of her faith in Sabina, she knew that her cousin would not have brought such an accusation without just cause, and she was eager to know what had raised his suspicions. Sabina herself was very anxious to know this also, and came to her assistance.

"But, papa, dear," she said gently, "if Mr. Dene really thinks that he has cause to suspect me, would it not be better to hear what his reason is?"

"Well, sir," he said to Dene, still fiercely, "since you have said so much, perhaps it will be better if you tell us in my daughter's presence what justification you have for this preposterous suspicion, so that she may refute it!"

"I sincerely hope that Miss Emmott may be able to refute it!" lisped the Honorable Newton. "It will be easy for her to do so if I have made a mistake. I will tell you at once what I know of the matter. When Miss Emmott returned from the Chicken-Stone yesterday evening—at which time, I hear from my cousin, this wretched telegram was lying upon the hall-table—I happened to be strolling across the lawn alone, and I saw her pass into the house. She was apparently unaware of my presence. When I crossed in front of the door a few minutes later, I glanced into the hall, quite without purpose, and I was surprised to see Miss Emmott moving the fern on the hall-table. She had an envelope in her hand at the time. It is only since the news that a telegram has been lost that I have connected that fact with her rather surprising conduct in moving the heavy fern, which seemed to require all her strength. That was what made me suggest to Lady Bettaby that Miss Emmott might have hidden the telegram for some personal reason—a suspicion which of course I intended to impart to her entirely in confidence, and the expression of which could have done no harm if we found it baseless. Whether I have misjudged Miss Emmott or not can be easily proved by lifting the fern and seeing whether the telegram is underneath it."

The Major had restrained his anger with difficulty while the languid aristocrat was slowly making his statement. He broke out fiercely now.

"If that is your only evidence, sir, I am more surprised and indignant than before that you should think of bringing such an accusation on such trumpery grounds against my daughter! If Lady Bettaby chooses, by all means let her investigate this absurd charge against one of her guests. I shall be surprised if she attaches the slightest importance to it."

He turned towards her ladyship as he spoke, and Lady Bettaby colored uncomfortably.

"As I was telling Mr. Dene when you entered the room," she said, "I should not think of suspecting Sabina; but, if she moved the fern, it is possible she covered the telegram accidentally in replacing it."

"That is hardly likely," said the Major. "Did you move the vase at all, Sabina?"

"No, papa."

"Then the whole story is a fabrication," the Major was beginning hotly, when his daughter interrupted him.

"Hush, papa," she said; "I do not think that Mr. Dene would intentionally tell a falsehood to injure me in Lady Bettaby's eyes, although I know that he does not like me. I remember that, when I entered the hall, the servants were placing the fern-vase upon the table. Mr. Dene probably saw one of them, and thought it must be I because he had just seen me enter the house."

"You never told me about the vase being moved," said her ladyship, taking Sabina's word at once, in spite of a curious expression upon her cousin's face; "perhaps they accidentally placed it over the telegram. We must look at once."

She led the way into the hall, anxious to have the mystery with regard to Sir Roydon's loss cleared up. The Major followed with his face still very red.

"I must insist upon Mr. Dene's offering an apology to my daughter!" he said. "He has not yet had the honesty to admit that he made a mistake in thinking it was she whom he saw moving the vase."

The Honorable Newton screwed his eye-glass more firmly into his eye.

"I am sorry that it is impossible for me to do so, Major Emmott," he drawled. "Whatever Miss Emmott may say, I am positively certain that it was she I saw! If we do not find the telegram, however, I shall be happy to admit that I may have misconceived her purpose and make every apology. If you will help me, Decima, we will move the vase."

As they did so Sabina and her father stood looking on in silent indignation.

"Well, you see there is nothing there!" said the Major, as the heavy vase was set down upon the floor; and in genuine astonishment the Honorable Newton Dene stared at the spot upon the table where it had just rested.

He had gauged Miss Sabina's character pretty correctly, and, after her point-blank denial of what he had actually seen, he no longer doubted that she had really hidden the telegram. As the Major had stated, however, the envelope was certainly not there, and, perfectly nonplussed by the unexpected fact, he was preparing an abject apology, when an expression of surprise and relief which Sabina with all her cleverness could not keep from her face brought back all his distrust. He raised the fern vase again to pass his hand underneath it. There was unquestionably nothing there, and he was about to accept the inevitable, when a maid came running down-stairs with something in her hand which drew the gaze of four pairs of eyes towards her instantly.

"Please, my lady, it is the telegram which was lost," she said, placing it in her mistress's hand. "I thought you were upstairs, and have been looking for you there with it. We have just found it under the vase. The cook insisted on our looking underneath it, though I am perfectly sure, and so is Alice, that we did not set it down on it. I remember seeing the envelope lying just at the side after we had put down the vase, and so does Alice; and how it got underneath neither of us can tell."

Lady Bettaby sent the servant away; then she glanced at her cousin.

"I am afraid that I cannot offer Miss Emmott any apology," he said quietly; and the Major, who had cooled down a little when the incriminating envelope was not discovered under the vase, grew very red again.

"It is atrocious," he said hotly, "that my blameless daughter should be insulted in this manner! I appeal to you, Lady Bettaby!"

Her ladyship looked very uncomfortable.

"Don't you think that you have made a mistake, Newton?" she said weakly; but her cousin, rendered obstinate by the Major's show of anger, seemed to take a pleasure in sticking to his guns.

"It is impossible for me to deny that I saw Miss Emmott moving the vase, he said quietly. "If she had admitted doing so, I would have tried to believe that she covered the telegram accidentally. As she denies it, I am forced to come to the other conclusion."

"But you cannot accept his word in preference to my daughter's!" protested the old soldier, appealing to her ladyship; and he grew almost infuriated when Lady Bettaby said that she could not doubt the word of her cousin, whom she had known for so many years.

"Then I cannot allow my daughter to accept your hospitality for one hour longer!" he said, in a white heat; and he marched up-stairs to pack, followed by Sabina, who had assumed an air of injured innocence, and seemed to acquiesce sadly in her father's decision.

She kissed Lady Bettaby when she came down, alone, ready dressed for her journey in her most becoming trevelling costume.

"Good-bye, dear Lady Bettaby! she said sweetly. "I am so sorry that papa is angry! I know that you do not believe this horrible thing of me; but of course you have to uphold your cousin. I know how fond you are of each other, and I dare say he honestly believes he saw me move the vase, although how he can speak so positively I cannot possibly imagine."

Sabina talked in the same sweetly forgiving strain to her father all the time that they were journeying in the express to town.

"Perhaps it was for the best," she was saying to herself; it was very dull at Westwood without Sir Roy, and I do not expect that he will return there, whether he reached Liverpool in time or not."

THEATRICAL.

Current Dramatic Attractions That Plainfielders Can Witness.

"Have You Seen Smith" is the title of the latest and most unique farce comedy, produced by Davis & Keogh, which will be seen in this city at Music Hall tonight. Judging from the accounts it promises to be one of the most humorous and mirth provoking plays seen in this city for a long time. Marital troubles from the theme of the play and the plot is most skillfully worked out, being at the same time consistent and decidedly funny. "A Bleecker Knight" and "I Work Days" have both been divorced from their first wives and in turn married the other's discarded helpmate. Both families occupy a double house, through the middle of which they have drawn a dead line. Despite decrees of court and subsequent marriages, however, each cherishes a secret affection for his former spouse and during the first act, which discloses the double house, each makes an engagement with his former wife to take a trip to Raspberry Island. In the second act at the Island, each learns of the other's presence and endeavors to avoid a meeting. In this they are assisted by their well-meaning friends, "Baron Hoquette," "Will B. Dunn," "John J. Smith," and "J. Jay Smith," with the final result that so many people interferring, a mutual discovery is finally made. The third act brings the characters into the barber shop of the "Baron," where, after several very ludicrous situations, a general reconciliation is effected. The play abounds in humorous situations and mirth provoking action and the lines flash and sparkle with a scintillating wit that keeps the audience in roars of laughter from curtain to curtain. Messrs. Davis & Keogh have spared no expense in arranging for the scenery for the mounting of the comedy and the barber shop and Raspberry Island scenes promise to be revelations in the scenic artists line.

THE PHILIPPINE CHARACTER.

Brave, Inconstant and Chafing Under Restraint.

After years of study of the native character the writer has come to the conclusion that the Philippine Islander is very matter of fact. He is not unwilling, but unable, conscientiously, to accept an abstract theory. Christianity with its mysteries, has therefore no effect on his character, but he becomes accustomed to do that which his forefathers were coerced to do, namely, to accept the outward and visible signs without being imbued by the inward and spiritual grace. The mere discipline—the fact that, nolens volens, they must at a given hour on a given day appear dressed in their best and attend the church and (in the case of headmen) go to the monk's residence to "kiss hands"—has certainly had the effect of taming the masses into orderly beings.

Yet restraint of any kind is repugnant to him. He likes to be as free as a bird, but he is of a pliant nature, and easily managed with just treatment. He is extremely sensitive to injustice. If he knows in his own mind that he has done wrong he will submit to a thrashing without any thought of taking revenge. If he were punished out of mere caprice, or with palpable injustice, he would always have a lurking desire to give quid pro quo. He has an innate contempt for cowards, hence his disdain for Chinese, but will follow a brave leader anywhere, and will never be the first to yield to hunger, fatigue or possible chances of death. He takes every trouble with profound resignation; he promises everything and performs little; his word is not worth a straw, and he does not feel that lying is a sin. He is inconstant in the extreme and loyal so long as it suits him, but as a subject he can be easily moulded into any fashion which a just, honest and merciful government would wish.—Contemporary Review.

He Knew the Pronunciation.

"I want a copy of Victor Hugo's masterpiece," said the lady who had entered the bookseller's shop. She expressed herself thus vaguely, because she is nevrous about her French. "I don't think we have any book of that name," responded the youth behind the counter. "That is not the name of the work. It merely describes it," rejoined the customer. "Published lately, ma'am?" "It was published many years ago. Surely you have Victor Hugo's greatest work?" I don't know whether we have or not. What's the name of it?" "Lay Mee Say Rabble," replied the lady, desperately. "Oh, you mean 'Less Mizzerables.' Yes, ma'am, we've got it."—Norwich Argus.
